THE annual Convention of the American Missionary Association was held in Chicago on the 28th, 29th and 30th ult. E. S. Tobey, of Boston, was re-elected President of the Association, and a large number of Vice-Presidents were chosen. Rev. M. E. Strieby (New York) was elected Corresponding Secretary; Rev. C. L. Woodworth (Boston), Rev. G. H. Pike (New York) and Rev. James Powell (Chicago), Home Secretaries; H. W. Hubbard (New York) Treasurer. Executive Committee—Alonzo S. Ball, Clinton H. Pike, A. S. Barnes, A. F. Beard, Andrew Lester, Charles L. Mead, Hermon S. Bennett, S. B. Halliday, John H. Washburn, William B. Stone, Samuel Holmes, H. H. Wilcox, Judge Ketchum, Charles A. Hull, William T. Pratt, Joseph A. Shumway. Auditors—Charles L. Mead and James C. Hazen.

AT the Episcopal Convention in Newark on the 30th ult., the Rev. Thomas A. Starkey was elected to succeed Bishop Odenheimer as Bishop of Northern New Jersey.

MRS. GEORGE FRANCIS TRAIN was found dead in her bed a few mornings ago, at her lodgings in Boston, New York City. Apoplexy attributed death to paralysis of the heart.

At Garden City, L. I., on the after-noon of the 31st ult., Miss Ida M. Hoff, aged 20, died, after an hour's illness. She was sixty years old.

JACOB AUBOTT, the well-known author, died at his residence in Farmington, Me., on the 31st ult. Mr. Abbott was seventy years old.

ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-SIX officers and delegates were in attendance at the session of the National Women's Christian Temperance Union in Indianapolis on the 31st ult. Miss Frances E. Wincott, of Illinois, was elected President for the ensuing year. The remaining officers were re-elected, as follows: Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Mary T. Burt, of Brooklyn; Vice and Recording Secretary, Mrs. M. A. Woodbridge, of Suwanna, Ohio; Assistant do., Mrs. Caroline B. Hall, of East Hampton, Conn.; Treasurer, Miss Esther Pugh, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

BERLIN telegrams received in London on the 28th state that the defeat of the Russians by the Turcomans at Geok-Teke was much more disastrous than had been reported. The Russians were in full retreat, and their condition was pitiable in the extreme.

A PARIS telegram of the 27th announces that all arrangements had been completed for the introduction of the postal money-order system between France and the United States.

ACCORDING to St. Petersburg dispatches of the 28th 40,000 troops had been embodied from the Caucasus to Central Asia.

A DISPATCH from Alexandria, Egypt, received in London on the 28th, says the second Cleopatra needle, which was on the point of being shipped to the United States, had been seized by the creditors of the Egyptian Government.

A MONTHLY dispatch of the 28th says that official statistics of the late inundation in Murcia showed that four-fifths of the arable land there was ruined, and that 3,000 persons had been drowned or were missing.

A DISPATCH from Paris on the 28th says two other eminent Communists, Messrs. Grand and Gambon, have elected members of the municipality of Lyons. The uneasiness among the conservative classes of society in that city and the provinces caused by these events was constantly increasing, and a reactionary movement against the Republican Administration was feared.

DISPATCHES were received from Simla on the 26th announcing that trouble had occurred in Afghanistan. The dispatches indicated that the whole country would be in rebellion as soon as the winter's snows had melted, with the transportation of supplies. A body of Afghans had been defeated at Sharpur Pass, with a loss of fifty killed. The British lost twenty-seven killed or wounded. It was said that the Ameer had finally placed his abdication in the hands of General Roberts, and that it would be accepted.

THE Rome (Italy) papers of the 30th ult. announce that Italic, Austria and Germany had united an alliance to overcome, if possible, British and French preponderance in Egypt.

ON the 30th ult. the British Parliament was again prorogued until the 19th of December.

DURING the week which ended on the 30th ult the Bank of France lost $2,180,000 in gold specie, and the Bank of England $1,100,000 in gold. The most of this coin was sent to the United States for grain.

A SPECIAL dispatch of the 27th ult. states that, by order of the Czar of Russia, Sir Frederick Roberts had issued a proclamation stating that in consequence of the abdication of the Ameer and the entrance of the British residency, the British Government had now installed its occupation

The Elections!

New York Elects a Republican Governor by 30,000 or 35,000 Plurality.

The Legislature Republican by Nearly Two-Thirds Majority.

Ben Butler Laid Out in Massachusetts by from 10,000 to 15,000!

PENNSYLVANIA GOES REPUBLICAN BY 60,000 MAJORITY.

Wisconsin, Nebraska and Minnesota Republican.

The general results in all the states which held elections Tuesday is a grand Republican success. It is beyond question that a Republican tidal wave is sweeping over the entire north, which will not reach its highest point till next year. At present we have the dispassionate bill of returns before us, which gives a majority of 60,000 for Republican governor over the entire Democratic ticket.

Pennsylvania goes Republican by 60,000 majority. Wisconsin, Nebraska and Minnesota are also Republican. Ben Butler has gone under in Massachusetts by from 10,000 to 15,000. Even Connecticut, which was only for members of the legislature, the Republicans have the largest majority they have ever attained since the close of the war for the union. This victory insures a man of a Republican United States senator to succeed William W Eaton, Democrat.

In New York, Cornell, Republican, is elected governor by a plurality of 35,000 or more, and the Republicans have elected the rest of their state ticket, and elected a majority of 30 on joint ballot in the legislature strongly Republican in both branches. This insures the election of a Republican United States senator to succeed Francis Kernan, Democrat: another Republican gain.

In New Jersey the contest was only for members of the legislature, and the Republicans have elected a majority of the legislature, making large gains. This will give the Republicans a gain of one United States senator, to succeed Theodore F. Randolph, Democrat.

In Pennsylvania, though only state treasurer was elected, not calling out a full vote, the Republican gains have been very large, and the Republican majority is 50,000 or more. This makes certain the election of a Republican senator to succeed William A. Wallace, Democrat.

In Wisconsin the Republican victory is a sweeping and decisive one. The Republican majority on the state ticket is probably not far from 25,000, and the legislature is strongly Republican. The Republican gains were extraordinary.

In Minnesota the Republican plurality on the state ticket, in a rather light vote, is probably 10,000 or more; and the legislature is strongly Republican.

In Nebraska the Republican victory is a sweeping one.

In Chicago and Cook county, Illinois—a local election—the Republican majority is 5,000 or more—a grand triumph, showing large Republican gains. There are also large Republican gains in counties of Illinois.

The elections in the southern states show that the south is still solid: and their results will only emphasize and make still plainer to the northern people the danger of Confederate Democratic rule, and the necessity of defeating it by organizing to it the true resistance of a solid north.

Norwood Notes.

Mr. Thomas Hite of Central Lake has taken up his residence in Norwood, with the intention of devoting himself to preparation for the Ministry of the M. E. Church.

The telegraph office has been removed to the store of Mr. Bennett, and that enterprising gentleman has charge of the same.

E. J. Meech, has actively engaged in completing his arrangements for carrying on his business this winter. He was last week at the Annual Stockholders' meeting of the M. H. Co. held at Traverse City.

Mr. Thomas Scott and a social party, to the number of about 20, had a dancing on the eve of his leaving for Canada to spend the winter. He will be much missed by his many friends in this vicinity.

Rev. C. Hammond, on this place, preached a sermon on Sunday next at the Methodist church, in company of the five children of Mr. Edward Aurora who have died of diphtheria within the last month.

The dreaded epidemic is prevailing in the town of Grand Lake, also E. Traverse.

Mrs. Prince has buried three children in the Indian creek.

The remaining members of Mr. Prince's family will spend the winter near Grand Rapids, at the home of Mrs. Prince's mother.

A gloom is cast over all in regards the misfortunes of the farmer at the return of cold weather, especially those who are unprepared for winter. The potatoes are being rapidly gathered and housed in.

STOCKMAN has just received a very fine assortment of cutlery, embracing a very large and choice variety of pocket-knives. Also some of the handsomest revolvers you ever saw.

THANKSGIVING.—The Governor following the President in issuing the traditional Thanksgiving proclamation. Thursday, Nov. 27, is the day you want to kill the turkey and invite your friends in.

NEWS STAND.—Where the summer travel ceased, we were compelled to discontinue our news establishment, because Charlevoix people did not consider such an institution worth patronizing. Now there seems to be a demand for periodical reading matter, and we shall this week receive a stock of news material, and endeavor to keep our supply regular; but of course this depends upon whether Charlevoix people encourage it or not.

MCCABE BROS. have removed their building across the street to the lot adjoining Crone & Dorman's, where they are in full blast again and ready to please their customers.

Bed quilts and blankets cheap at Carpenter & Bartholomew's.

LANE & SON of Detroit have a lumber camp near the Jordan, east of Mancelona and one near Bergen, and propose to get out, in square timber and logs, this winter, about fifteen million feet.

A petition was presented to the village Council last Saturday evening to lay out a street running from the state road at a point near the Charlevoix House, east to the foot of Pine Lake. Its reference to the Committee on Streets was postponed two weeks.

SAM HOLLAND, who recently sold his farm at the mouth of the Arm to the furnace company, left on Friday with his family for Iowa, where he proposes to secure a new home. Sam is an old settler of this region, and his familiar face will be missed.

DANCING.—A ball was given on Thursday evening last at Five's hall, by some of our young men. It was largely attended by Charlevoix people, both married and unmarried, and a number of Boyne people came down to enjoy themselves. The music was furnished by Richardson & White's band of Boyne, which is decidedly the best in the county. It is a treat to listen to them.

COL. D. F. WARNER has removed to Charlevoix, where he has formed a law partnership with another gentleman, and begins to make that his future home. The Col. has resided in the village several years, and his numerous friends will regret to hear of his removal. He is a companionable, generous, whole-souled gentleman and carries with him to his new home the best wishes of the JOURNAL.—Alpica Journal.

RELIGIOUS.—Rev. Mr. Eldred, the new Presbyterian Elder of this district, preached both morning and evening, at the M. E. Church last Sabbath, that being the first Quarterly meeting of the year. Elder Eldred is a clear thinker, a fluent talker, and an earnest Christian worker.

Two new members were accepted into the M. E. Church Sunday evening by letter, from the Baptist Church of South Arm.

Rev. Mr. Palmeter preached Sunday morning at the school house, and Rev. Mr. Otis occupied the same desk in the evening.

The government has decided to build the revenue cutter Andrew Johnson, now in the port of Milwaukee, and advertises for proposals to repair her hull and steam machinery.

The governor has appointed Hon. Isaac Chance Judge of Probate of Mackinac county, vice G. T. Wendell, deceased. His term of office will expire December 31st, 1880.

LECTURE.—Mr. Newkirk, of Bay City, delivered a lecture on Wednesday evening last at Odd Fellows Hall, on "Odd Fellowship." The lecture was full of interest to the initiated as well as to the uninitiated and was listened to with rapt attention by all present. The audience was composed of members of the order and their wives and daughters, and many of that class which secret society parlance classes as "profane" or otherwise considers. After the lecture the crowd dispersed to Crowe & Doanan's bowling house, where oysters and other refreshments were served in most excellent style. The occasion was a most enjoyable one.

THE FURNACE.—Advices from the Pine Lake Iron Company state that they are crowding matters as rapidly as possible. A recent letter to Hon. John Nichols states that they shall want large quantities of wood this winter, and the manager of the enterprise will soon be in to contract for it, as well as for the timber for the buildings. It is somewhat doubtful about much work being done on buildings this fall. One thing our people must remember however, and that is that the upper river mine be opened early in the spring, and they may as well get ready for it.

Fresh roll butter at Carpenter & Bartholomew's.

THAT Charlevoix is making substantial and lasting strides in the way of growth and improvement is evident at first glance. The growth of Charlevoix is not of the kind which builds on over the brink of its capacity to sustain and support, but of a nature at once steady, and permanent. The business men of Charlevoix have such confidence in the future of Charlevoix that they are constantly enlarging their capacity for doing business, and spite of the fact that smaller mercantile institutions are continually starting up, our leading merchants report marvelous increase in trade. It cannot be other wise in view of the fact that Charlevoix is so situated that her advantages as a trading center far surpass those of any neighboring village. The farming region about us is unsurpassed for fertility, and is washed by waters of thrifty and industrious farmers. Every year their granaries are better filled, and every year the plow traverses more acres of soil. Every year increases the demand for agricultural implements, and the more modern and convenient articles of farm and household use. Every year increases the number of bodies to be clothed and every year increases the ability of our farmers and mechanics to enjoy luxuries which have been to them a treasure heretofore denied them. The natural situation of Charlevoix opens the great marine thoroughfare renders it a natural trading center, and as such it must grow and prosper. The immediate prospects for Charlevoix are encouraging and cheering as we, indeed, the prospects of our whole county and region.

MARINE.—The steamer Gazelle has laid up for the season, owing to the lack of water in the upper channel. The Nelson Booth continues on the route, and will run alternate days up the Lake and Arm.

—The scow Blue Bell left Friday morning, but was forced to run back and wait for a change of wind which came Saturday morning.

—The Gazelle swung around in the upper channel Thursday and broke her stern against the breakwater.

LITERARY CLUB.—We have previously announced that a Literary Club was ready organized in this village. Their motto is: "We ask nothing for ourselves which we do not cheerfully grant to all others."

The officers elected were:

President,—Robert Miller.
Vice President,—E. Carpenter.
Secretary,—E. F. Hinman.
Treasurer,—J. M. Clark.

It was decided to meet once a month for public exercises, the first meeting to occur on Monday evening, Dec. 1st, in this society a by member will be expected to express his own views freely and concisely, and it is the wish of those engaged in this movement to derive all the benefit which such an institution can afford.

F. W. Hayns was chosen to deliver a course of lectures, the first of which will occur at the first meeting. Subject—"Let there be light."

It is expected that the meetings will be held at the school house.

JUST NOW, while we think of it, we want to say that somebody will have good cause to be terribly offended at us soon, if this basis of mailing the SENTINEL office a loading place is not stopped. Just keep out.

Army Report of General Sherman.

WASHINGTON, November 5.

General Sherman's annual report to the Secretary of War was completed to-day. It is prefaced with the usual tabular statements and returns compiled by the Adjutant-General, commencing on which General Sherman says.

"The eleven Generals, 1,359 officers, 20,500 men and 22 Indian scouts, together with regimental bands as assigned by the War Department to the different troops constituting the army proper or the constitutive force. All other duties of the military establishment are provided for by law for special services more or less detached with the view that officers are not available for frontier defense. Thus, for instance, the list of officers and of the Ordnance Corps is limited to 208 in number, and the Subsistence Department to 105, while the Inspection Commissary, Quartermaster, Medical, Pay and Engineer Departments are subject to the Division Commanders, and in executing the work of the engineering kind, the Ill instance of troops have charge of all forts or fortifications completed or in progress. Recruits are in charge of depots; 97 men are Signal Service, Weather Bureau, Polar detachment, 10th number, is detailed at the Military Academy, and 25 men serve at Fort Leavenworth contractor recruiting and executing details. The total number of men at Davis Island, Columbus, Ga., and Fort Monroe, Kentucky, is 1,359 enlisted men, 20,500 men would give forty-eight to each company, but as the companies should be kept up to 100 men, it has been decided that the 25,000 men authorized by law be assigned exclusively for regimental duty, and that special provision by law for the recruiting service should be also already been done for the coming year. The army cannot with justice be held responsible for the work of 25,000, when so large a fraction of the number are detailed and many cannot be found. National depositories, perhaps of equal importance.

The Ladies above referred to that the grand army since the army was in 1866 of 54,302 men in service, and 360 officers retired.

General Sherman devotes a large portion of his report to the Indians. He introduces the subject with a history of the tribe. These Indians, he says, are the worst class to occupy the roughest part of our country for farming, grazing or military operations. Their management is complicated by the fact that their treaties are known to possess mineral deposits, when attempts have been made to settle them. In difficulty in preventing its exhaustion of these Indians, but on account of the amount of depredations, both in person and property, the best rifles and ammunition. As long as the best rifles and ammunition. As long as the best rifles and ammunition. As long as

WASHINGTON, November 4.

General Sherman's annual report to the Secretary of War was completed to-day. It is prefaced with the usual tabular statements and returns compiled by the Adjutant-General, commenting on which General Sherman says:

The gross strength of the regular army, on the 30th ultimo, was 54,302 officers and men, and 856 Indian scouts, making a total of 55,158 men, distributed by the War Department, by States and Territories, forming the army recruiting districts, and for the several branches of the military establishment. All other duty is now for special service more or less connected with the army or militia, but of late considerable numbers of troops are not available for frontier defense. Of these, for instance, the 527 enlisted men of the Engineer corps are in fact workmen at the Soldiers' Home and Washington Barracks, the 72 men of the Engineer Corps at Willets Point undergoing instruction in topographical engineering, and are not subject to the Indian commander. The 69 men of the Signal Corps are employed in conducting the weather or in signaling telegraphs. The 101 Ordnance Sergeants have charge of old forts or fixed magazines. The 151 Commissary Sergeants are in charge of stores; 95 men are in the Military Academy. The West Point detachment, 186 in number, is localized at the Military Academy. The prisoners guard at Fort Leavenworth comprises an only man, and recruiting establishments, 36 men, are at Davis Island, Columbus, O., and Jefferson Barracks, Mo. These various detachments, aggregating 540 enlisted men of the highest grade, constantly on duty at points where the enlisted men provided by law for the whole army, leaving but 26,000 actual recruits.

I mention these figures to some detail, because I know that it is the impression, not shared by many members of Congress, that we have 54,000 men at the disposal of the army in any pause to relieve these detachments to the frontier garrisons, so as to get 27,000 more men to our skeleton companies, but have found it impossible, and I submit that similar detachments are required on all army regiments and companies, and that when the 25 companies in the regular army, 20,000 men would give us 20,000 men for the field, which is small as any company should be, and I earnestly recommend that the next Congress be legislated that the 25,000 men provided by law be allowed actual recruits for recruitment of the line, and that special provision be made for several detachments, such as can already been done for the Signal Service. The cavalry service, with which the bulk of the troops are employed, is especially responsible for the work of 7,000, there are large fraction constantly diverted from their duties, perhaps of vital National importance.

The troops serving on the Pacific coast, the grand aggregate of the army real is 2,187 officers and 25,971 men, and 366 officers retired.

General Sherman devotes a large portion of his report to the Ute troubles. He thinks he has settled with a history of the tribe. The Indians, he says, are of the worst class, and enjoy the roughest part of our country, for farming, grazing, or military operations. Their management is complicated by the fact that the country is known to possess mineral deposits, which attracts a bold and adventurous class of white men. They are very warlike, and have no difficulty in procuring ammunition. They breed deer skins, horses and sheep any amount of the best rifles and ammunition. Are not of the same kind they will not work or steward herding, although in the smallest and most rudimentary way, and that only by compulsion.

The report details at some length the history of the well-known events leading up to the imprisonment in Major Thornburgh's command, and continues:

With a knowledge of the result, and in three so much lighten the immediate cause of this war as possible, I give the last letter which passed between Major Thornburgh and Mr. Meeker, and I will here record the fact that Major Thornburgh was an officer and gentleman of the army has reason to be proud. He was young, ardent, ambitious, of good judgment, and no one could have done better in his one met death with more heroism.

[LETTER TO MEEKER.]

"HEADQUARTERS WHITE RIVER EXPEDITION,
CAMP ON FORTIFICATION CREEK,
September 25, 1879.

"Mr. Meeker, Indian Agent, White River Agency:

SIR:—In obedience to instructions from the General Commanding the Army, I am en route to your Agency, and expect to arrive on the 29th inst., for the purpose of affording you any assistance in my power, and to make arrests of such of your Indians as may be guilty of the murders committed upon the employés of the Agency. I shall make no requisition upon you for supplies, as I have brought with me ample rations for my command for thirty days. I shall be ready to march in the morning after my arrival at the Agency, and desire that you have your Indians in readiness to move with me. Keep us not be necessary to use force, but I am prepared for that emergency, and desire to be informed in advance whether or not it will be necessary. I have been directed by my superior officer to communicate with you and your Indians in a friendly manner, and I trust that no misunderstanding will arise between us. Respectfully,

"N. C. MEEKER, Indian Agent."

[THORNBURGH'S REPLY.]

"Under date of September 28, Major Thornburgh writes to Agent Meeker as follows:

SIR: I shall move with my entire command in a compact body to-morrow, and within striking distance of your Agency, remaining there one day, and will then halt and encamp the troops and five soldiers, as communicated in your letter of the 25th inst. That point will be ready to have a conference with you and the chiefs of the Utes.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
T. T. THORNBURGH,
Major Commanding Expedition."

[MEEKER TO THORNBURGH.]

"Under date of Sept. 28, Agent Meeker writes to Major Thornburgh as follows:

SIR: I expect to leave in the morning with Jack Adams and several others. The Utes are peaceable, and Douglass flies the United States flag. If you have troubles, bring the troops to-day, let me know. We are well, and have no fear. Answer by bearer, let me know what you think best, and we will do the best we can. Respectfully,

NATHAN MEEKER."

[THORNBURGH'S REPLY.]

"I give these letters entire because I believe that Major Thornburgh acted from the best motive to the end exactly right. So did Mr. Meeker, and the latter, afterward, committed error wholly on the Indians.

The report then recites the events leading to the death of Major Thornburgh, the killing of Lieutenant Cherry and the murder of Agent Meeker, and embodies various dispatches and military orders relating to the subsequent movements of the troops.

[CLOSING ORDER.]

"The following dispatch will show the object aimed at, and are the orders entailed at this moment of time:

"HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY,
WASHINGTON, D. C., October 24.

"General P. H. Sheridan, Chicago, Illinois:

"I have received your three dispatches of yesterday, giving an account of the arrests of Lieutenant Ware, and of the movements of your forces at White River and Grand Junction. All these steps seem to be well considered and executed, and we can only approve them. It will be ready for the general I gave the word to march in. Should Agent Adams fail in his mission, I understand the civil authorities will stand aside, and the military will take the entire control of this affair. Meantime, nothing settle it for good and all. Meantime, nothing to do the captive women and the friendly Utes, even of the White River Agency, justifies the shooting spree of these days.

"W. T. SHERMAN, General."

"All the world now knows that the special Agent General Charles Adams, of Colorado, appointed by the Secretary of the Interior to conduct these negotiations with the hostile Utes, has entirely succeeded in his mission, has obtained the surrender of Mrs. and Miss Meeker, Mrs. Price and two children who are already safe with their friends. He is now supposed to be safe with the hostiles on Grand River, encamping to effect the other results contemplated in the instructions of the Secretary of the Interior, who is primarily responsible for the entire management of the case. I cordially applaud the instructions and energy that he displayed in securing the captives, and hope he will fully and completely succeed in the object of his mission, and I believe that providence demands that the military people shall have no interference until that object. Thus far we have lost eleven citizens, two officers and fifteen soldiers killed, and forty-two wounded. The Indians admit a loss of thirty-seven warriors. Their loss may have been much reason to boast."

The report then recites the details of the Apache raid, and states that troops are in pursuit, but notifies the Indians be given up. The Apaches, the General says, only resort to the Agency in the winter season, and not during the time of war. He infers that as soon as winter comes they will return to the reservation and be good.

General Sherman refers at some length to last session's enactment of Indian Bureau affairs, citing Bull's camp, and kindred subjects, and says that the main cause of dissatisfaction recently must be found than results from the greed of our neighbors. He refers to the action taken by Congress to be asked to appropriate $5,000 to complete Fort Assiniboine, and $50,000 to build a new post near Wood Mountain, and says: In this connection I take leave to submit my conviction that very soon the process of events will make it absolutely necessary to move all the Indians now located on the Upper Missouri. The Arikaras, Gros Ventres, Piegans, Bloods and Crows to the Yellowstone below Tongue River, and to open to actual settlers all the land in the region north and west of that reservation.

General Sherman reports a highly satisfactory condition of affairs in the Department of the Pacific, especially along the Northern frontier. The large immigration which the completion of Northern Pacific now enables, and who were formerly her waste lands, the removal of some of the frontier posts further into the country, and General Sherman heartily indorses the recommendation made in this respect by General Ord for increased opportunities to contract military posts on the new western frontiers.

Referring to the troubles caused during the past year by the attempted emigration to the Indian Territory from the southern border of Kansas, General Sherman says: "The prompt and energetic measures taken by the civil authorities, supported by the troops under the order of the President, have effectually suppressed that movement, and I am fully convinced that at least thirty superfluous military posts might be at once abandoned."

The report in conclusion says that the number of recruits enlisted during and after referring to the artillery, school at Fortress Monroe and Washington Barracks, D. C., public says: "Similar schools should be established in the infantry and cavalry, and the infantry There have repeatedly been attempts at Fort Leavenworth and Fort Riley, but no sooner have they been organized than some global embroglio has arisen, and the troops called away the troops, so that at this time we have neither of these schools. But the day must come when schools for infantry and cavalry will be established in the regular course of military education, and if possible in time of peace, for the education in the use of the rifle and how to handle your officers and recruits are pushed into battle and danger."

Not a Bit Astonished.

The fact that the large majority of people in this country are prepared for anything that may happen at any hour of the day was strongly exemplified at the ferry-dock yesterday. Three or four "old heads" got together and cooked up a plan and then went in a body to a ragged, wee-begone chap who stood leaning over a pile and developed it. Greeting him with smiles they each took him by the hand, and then the spokesman said:

"It gives us pleasure to be honored with the errand of seeking you and informing you that at our State Convention, held this forenoon, you were chosen our nominee for Governor on the first formal ballot. It is our pleasure to ask your acceptance of the honor, and in so doing you insure us a candidate for whom we can work with earnestness and enthusiasm, and whose election to the Gubernatorial chair no same man can for a moment doubt."

The man had not changed a muscle of his face. He had preserved a calm and placid expression to the end, and when the spokesman stopped back, the stranger turned his quid, spit off the edge of the wharf, and replied:

"Well, being you want me to run I'll do it but I tell you beforehand that I haven't got a dirtied cent to spent on the canvass! You'll have to run me on my high qualifications entirely.—Detroit Free Press.

THE toothpick market is agitated. Those chiefly in use are of white wood and polished at both ends. Against for fourteen years was obtained for them in 1876, and the factory of the Boston owners at Rockfield, Me., used from three to five thousand cords of wood yearly, and turned out hundredfold quantities. A box of two thousand five hundred sold for twenty-five cents, and the profit was large. A log six feet long and about eighteen inches in diameter was placed in a machine, where bevel knives cut it in each direction and turned out the toothpicks, ready for market. About eighteen months ago another Boston firm started a factory in the woods of Ohio, and used similar machinery. The price then began tumbling, and fell to twenty cents at retail, then to eighteen, fourteen and twelve cents. Of late the original manufacturers have reduced the figure to ten cents, or eight cents at wholesale, and report their antagonists to be on the verge of stoppage.

Life and human activity will press insensibly toward the intertropical zone. Petersburg, Berlin, London, Paris, Vienna, Constantinople and Rome will fall asleep in succession under their eternal shroud. During many years eager material humanity will undertake arctic expeditions to find again under the ice the plain of Paris, Lyons, Rome and Athens.'"

The End of the World.

Camille Flammarion, the well-known French scientist, thus expresses himself in La Correspondance Scientifique, regarding the ultimate of our globe:

"We all of us situate to-day the beauties of terrestrial nature, the vast horizons, the perfumed meadows, the purling brooks, the mysterious shades, the groves animate with singing birds, the mountains crowned with glaciers, the immensity of the seas, the warm settings of the sun in clouds edged with scarlet and gold, and the soothing glimmering of the sun on the mountain tops when the first rays of the morning shine in the gray tints of the plain. We admire the human works which today crown Rome, or nature, the boldviaducts thrown from one mountain to another over the river which spans steam; the ships, marvelous structures, traversing the ocean; the brilliant and animated cities; the palaces and temples; the libraries, museums of mind; the arts of sculpture and painting, which idealize the real; the musical inspirations which make us forget the vulgarity of things; the works of the intellectual genius who explores the mysteries of the world and transports us into intuitive sight we live in happiness in the midst of this life so radiant, making ourselves an integral part of it. But all this beauty, all these flowers and these fruits will pass away. The earth will become, will die. She will die either of old age, when her vital elements shall have been used up, or through the extinction of the sun, to whose rays her life is suspended. She might also die by accident, through collision with some celestial body meeting her orbital route; but, this end of the world is the most improbable of all.

In the rays of the sun which will thereafter shine here below will be seen to set certain last human beings, who, aimlessly around a useless light and a barren heat."

A Slough of Despond.

Mrs. Mary Avery, of Honesdale, Pike County, Pennsylvania, will not easily be induced to go near a swamp again, if ever she does do so at all. She has just passed eight days in one, and will find that to suffice, no doubt, for the rest of her life. But the venture was so odd, and painful, and nearly fatal as it was, grotesque, as it proved with peculiar and noteworthy interest.

The lady had been plotting some friends at a place called Bunker Hill, and on the 5th inst. and she set out toward evening to walk home. Unfortunately she missed her way and was benighted in the swamp. While seeking to discover her whereabouts Mrs. Avery got into what is known as Lackawaxen Swamp, and there she stuck. All in an instant, as it seemed to her, she began to sink into the ground. She cried for help, but in vain. She had no neighbors near, and no wayfarers chanced that way to see and succor her. Then she made vicious struggles to extricate herself, but they only served to sink her deeper in the bog. Finally, when plunged to her knees in the inexorable mire, she ceased to strive to get out, and deliberately considered her position. She was surrounded by timber, out of sight and out of hearing of any human being. She had no food and no prospect of getting any. It was pitch dark, a night for aught she knew wild animals might assail her in the night. She seemed to be sinking, and that very slowly, still deeper in the treacherous mud, and her doom, if not to starve, was probably to perish by suffocation.

Womble fit to say, Mrs. Avery survived in this perilous situation for one hundred and ninety-four hours. She managed to avoid lamenting further into the swamp, although quite unable to make progress in it. She contrived to get hold of some birch-bark that grew on bushes within her reach, and by eating this to avoid starvation. She quenched her thirst by drinking the dirty water in which she stood. By slight but continual movements she kept her blood from stagnating, and, which is perhaps most remarkable of all, she retained her mental faculties unimpaired during the whole period of her terrible imprisonment. On the eighth day her deliverance came in the shape of a wandering hunter, who found her nearly at death's door, but by degrees restored her to reason. He also recalled her from the swamp. She was taken to the nearest house, which is three miles distant, when a doctor was called in, and proper food and drink immediately provided. Mrs. Avery will recover, it is confidently anticipated.—London Standard.

It is feared that she will be a permanent mental sufferer from the dreadful ordeal she has undergone.

It is a pity that more members of unhappy persons have, first and last, died by being caught in swamps, and this has proved to be the fourth more than once of late with little children who have strayed from their homes; but we have heard of no instance where a person so situated has passed more than a week in so shocking a plight and has lived afterward in robust health to tell the tale.—N. Y. Evening Post.

A YOUNG lady was recently buried at Brighton, England, under romantic circumstances. The day of her interment was the day originally fixed for her marriage, and her friends complied with her wishes in having that she should be drawn to the grave by the horses which had been engaged to convey her to the church. To the gladsome there were attached four gray horses' heads were decked with floral rosettes of white and red geraniums, and the coffin was covered with a white and amber silk pall. The carriages which followed were also drawn by horses caparisoned similarly to those which drew the hearse.

MECHANICAL AND SCIENTIFIC.

—The principal reforms to be introduced on Prussian State railroad are the following: 1. The exclusive use of steel rails. 2. All run-shed new roads to be supplied with only one line. 3. The discontinuance of the optical signals between station and station. 4. The introduction of a central position for sliding rail and signal apparatus which can be worked by one man. 5. The introduction of — among brakes.

—An ingenious contrivance, or vehicle, is described in the London journals, the body being of a light form for construction, and the arrangement of wheels like a tricycle. The motive power, concealed in the body of the vehicle, is obtained by the combustion of benzoline, a small jet of which is admitted into a burner about the size of an ordinary chimney-jet but, the steam passing into the cylinders of a small turning-gear, which rotates a horizontal shaft. There is no steam given off, for it is recondensed and passes back into the tubular boiler. The weight of the steam power is about one hundred and eighty pounds. On lighting the benzoline, the steam requires no attention from the driver during a ride of many hours, and, by pressing with his foot to a pedal, he can regulate the speed and power of draft. It travels at the rate of twelve miles per hour, and is easily directed in its course.

The wood-rail success achieved in manufacturing large and perfect passes in cast and wrought steel, of immense strength and superb finish, has added greatly to the power, the security and the profitableness of railroad transportation, and the general introduction of the metal in the construction of the musical inspirations which make us forget the vulgarity of things; the works of the intellectual genius who explores the mysteries of the world and transports us into intuitive sight we live in happiness in the midst of this life so radiant, making ourselves an integral part of it. —It is a remarkable fact that, according to the statistics of the Health Department, diphtheria is more prevalent among the Protestants and other communities than among the Catholics, and the facts as difficult to account for as it is remarkable. As for the cause of the disease, no theory has ever been promulgated by the medical profession to account for it, and yet the question is one well worth the consideration of the faculty. It is not a mere disease, nor is it of a temporary character. A study of the health statistics of Montreal for several years past reveals the same state of things. It is the more peculiar inasmuch as the general death rate is much higher with the Catholics, and especially so in the case of small-pox. But these additional facts only deepen the mystery of the problem; we have been offered does not come from the medical profession, but from a layman, Alderman Childs, who suggests that the bulk of the Protestant community reside in the upper part of the town, where the drainage is less perfect than in the lower town. The subject, like the drains, will bear ventilating.—Montreal Witness.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

WILLIAM ROBINSON, a prisoner in the Kalamazoo County jail, while engaged in cleaning up the jail on the other evening, suddenly disappeared. In a few minutes a man in the employ of Mr. Isaac Brooks came to the jail and told of a desperate assault by Robinson upon his (Robinson's) wife. It appears that Robinson, immediately upon his escape, proceeded to Brooks' house, where Mrs. Robinson was employed, and said that he would kill her, and endeavored to execute his threats with a club and succeeded in striking her several times on the head before Brooks and his hired men could interfere. Brooks received slight injuries, and Mrs. Robinson was badly hurt. Robinson was confined at the jail for a previous assault on his wife. His explanation of the former assault was that he wanted her to get a divorce so he could marry another woman.

Some of the candidates are making a vigorous canvass, and others are sitting still and waiting for the nomination to come to them. Among the latter class is Hon. Don M. Dickinson, who has not yet announced himself as a candidate, but who will be nominated by the Democrats of the Second district if he will accept the nomination. Mr. Dickinson is a man of ability, and would make a good representative, but he is not a candidate, and will not be unless he changes his mind."

AGRICULTURAL AND DOMESTIC.

—A sheet of paper dipped in chloride of cobalt when the weather is to be dry and pleasant will become blue. When wet weather approaches it will become pink.

If you would feed profitably you must bring the pasture into the grain lots. Summer-feeding pays better than winter, because cattle need less to keep up the natural heat of the body in summer, and their blood is kept cool by the grass. These elements of success can be brought into winter feeding by warm houses and the use of roots and oil cake.—Farmer Wilson.

Every farmer should consider the condition of his soil and surroundings before he decides what is best for his particular farm, for that practice which may be best for one farmer may by reasons for another. There are few if any departments of agriculture where a rigid rules of action can be laid down. The successful farmer must necessarily be a thinking, observing man.—Iowa State Register.

A novel system of agriculture has for a number of years been practiced on a farm in Rapides parish, Louisiana, the owner, Mr. Prunt, instead of harvesting the crops himself, divides the fields into lots which the grain is reaped, the corn and the crops are sold upon their roots at public auction. No live stock is kept, and the fertility of the soil is naturally kept up by artificial means. For the thirteen years since 1866 the average expenses of running the farm have yearly amounted to $2,500, and the net income for the same period has yearly averaged sixteen per cent of that sum, or $2,500. The system has proved a decided success, while numberless farms cultivated by the ordinary methods have been abandoned, and many have run bankrupt.

—Chicken Pudding.—Cut up as for fricassee, and parboil, season with salt, pepper and a piece of butter the size of an egg to each chicken. The fowls should be young and tender, and all clean on Friday. Stew slowly for half an hour; take them out and lay them on a dish to cool. Set aside the water in which they were cooked for your gravy. Make a batter of one quart of milk, three cups of flour, three tablespoonfuls of butter, two eggs, and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and four eggs well beaten, and a little salt. Put a layer of chicken in the bottom of the dish, and pour about half a cup of batter over it; then more chicken and more batter until the dish is filled, covering the top with the batter. Bake about half an hour or longer, depending upon the heat of the oven. Beat an egg and a tablespoonful of flour to set aside; thicken with two teaspoonfuls of rice or wheat flour, add a little chopped parsley, boil up once and serve with the dish of pudding.

Care of Tools and Farm Machinery.

Every farmer prefers putting his land to a bright plow which turns the furrows with comparative ease, to both team and driver, than one weatherbeaten and dulled with the previous season's dirt, and set many dollars draught imperceptibly but surely away each year, and feels more than he is able, all because of the careless handling of farm machinery. With one accord, reapers and mowers, plows and harrows are suffered to remain where last employed to bear the action of pelting storms and driving winds. The repairs required the following season will cost more than the building of a shed or tool-house, or the arrangement of a place for them in outhouses already erected. Everybody knows this, but everybody does not heed and profit by it. The man, however, who possesses a tool-house and requirements for properly storing farm implements could not be induced to abandon these convenances, for he has learned they not only put money in his pocket, but that the extra cost and labor attending the care of tools is more than paid for in the prevention of wear and tear on his patience when the busy season begins. Then is the interest returned on all time and money expended by properly storing, by finding things not only in place but in working order.

There are a variety of mixtures which may be applied to the iron portion of implements to preserve painting, the cheapest of which is grease that has not been salted. An excellent article can be prepared for the protection of either steel or iron by melting lard and common resin slowly together and stirring the mixture as it cools. When applied in large quantities make in the proportion of about six pounds of lard to two of resin. If only a small amount is desired, a piece of resin about the size of a hen's egg will suffice for one pound of lard. This mixture may be applied with a cloth or any article that will give a thin coating to the metal surface to be protected. The resin prevents the lard from becoming rancid, and the grease excludes air and moisture. Before applying the machines should be thoroughly relieved of dirt and dust, the bearings and oil with castor oil. Castor oil, by the way, is among the best of oils for iron axles. A wheel well lubricated with it will run not only more readily but wears much longer than when filled with cheaper sorts of grease. Not only is it important to look after the iron and steel parts of to-ls and machinery, but the wood-work claims attention. Repeated wetting and drying soon injures any wood, causing cracking and final decay. This may be prevented by the timely and occasional application of some cheap paint. When the wood-work from exposure has become cracked, it is advisable to give it a wash of crude petroleum previous to an external coat of paint. Petroleum has a strong preservative power, running soft, particularly wood to the durability of hard woods. It not only improves all wooden tools, but is also valuable for rustic furniture exposed to the weather. An occasional coat of this oil improves their color and renders them more lasting.—*N. Y. A Bloody Fight With Cats.

SEVERAL mornings ago a boy about fifteen years old, a nephew of Mr. Hurlston's, an inmate of his family, went out to the barn to feed the horses. When he entered the loft he discovered two large cats lying on the straw asleep. Boy like, he took up a bundle of fodder and, creeping up, struck both of them at one blow. There was something of an encounter, and the boy, seeing the cats, instead of running away, sprang at the boy with a fury that startled him. Having nothing with which to defend himself he tumbled around, while the cats squalled, clawed and bit him unmercifully. His cries did not bring assistance, and the fight progressed in the ladder leaning against the rafters, and ascended to the roof of the house. The cats followed him, and, despite his efforts to keep them away, fill and clawed him frightfully. Realizing his ladder fell, he jumped down on the hay. The cats followed him. By this time he was bleeding very freely, and his coat was almost torn to threads. Seizing one of the hay forks, he managed by dodging to beat it to death against the wall, but the animal doubled around and ingeniously got in the rear of the boy, and up the ladder leading down. The animals followed him. Just as he reached the floor one of the cats sprang upon his head. The other animal still fought with fury. With a heavy blow the boy stretched out the first combatant, and beat out its brains. Catching them by the tails he marched to the house to give an account of his battle.—*Little Rock Ark.) Army Report of General Sherman.

WASHINGTON, November 2.

General Sherman's annual report to the Secretary of War was completed to-day. It is prefaced with the usual tabular statements and returns compiled by the Adjutant-General, commenting on which General Sherman says:

"The eleven Generals, 1,549 officers, 20,866 men and 229 Indian scouts, together with officers of the staff as assigned to the War Department to duty with the troops, constitute the army proper of the Executive force. All other parts of the military establishment are provided by law for special service more or less connected with the army or militia, but are not available for frontier defense. Thus, for instance, the 367 enlisted men of the Ordnance Corps are to be "workmen at arsenals; the 62 men of the Engineer Corps are at West Point and Willet's Point, except in time of war or when specially detailed to the Dismal Dragon Commander. The 456 men of the Signal Corps are employed in observing the weather or on working telegraphs; the 191 Ordnance Sergeants have charge of the gun factories, magazines, etc., and the necessary Sergeants are in charge of the Recruiting Service, Military Prisons, the West Point detachment, the Invalids, the Soldiers' Home, the Military Academy, the prison guard at Fort Leavenworth, companies of instruction and recruiting depots—all which [illegible] in time of war, or when the detachments, [illegible] are removed from the garrisons. [illegible] are consolidated in part of the garrisons, which are then provided for by the [illegible] men specially detailed for the [illegible] service.

I mention these figures to show that the cavalry, artillery and infantry actually available for immediate use in time of war do not exceed 20,000 men, and that special service is made from these several detachments, as has already been done in the Signal Service [illegible] the 20,866 men cannot, with justice, be held responsible for the work of 40,000, which is a large fraction necessarily diverted to other uses, by reason of existing laws.

The points above referred to show that the general aggregate of the army rut is 2,317 officers and 25,866 men in service, and also officers retired.

General Sherman devotes a large portion of his report to the Indian troubles. He introduces the subject with a history of the tribes. These Indians, he says, are in many cases, and occupy 12 reservations, part of our country for farming, grazing or military operations. Each reservation is complicated by the fact that their country is known to possess mineral deposits which attracts a bold and 4.3 contiguous class of white men, for with any excuse, will have no difficulty in procuring in exchange for their game, skins, horses and ponies any amount of the best rifles and ammunition. As long as the game lasted they will not work or attempt farming, except in the smallest and most rudimentary way, and that only by compulsion.

The report details at some length the history of the well-known events leading up to the uncontrollable outbreak of the Sioux, under command of Major Thornburgh's command, and continues:

"With a knowledge of the result, and to throw as much light on the immediate cause of this war as possible, I give the last letters which passed between Major Thornburgh and Mr. Meeker, and I will here record my judgment that Major Thornburgh was an officer and gentleman of whom the army has reason to be proud. He was young, ardent, sometimes, of good judgment, and to whom I would have confidence in his ability to deal with more heroism.

THORNBURGH TO MEEKER.

"HEADQ'RS WHITE RIVER EXPEDITION, CAMP ON FORTIFICATION CREEK, September 27, 1879.

"Mr. Meeker, Indian Agent, White River Agency:

"SIR,—In obedience to instructions from the General of the Army, as an escort to the Agency, are expect to arrive on the 29th inst., for the purpose of delivering you and your service in my power, and to make arrests at your agency upon proper warrants for such of your Indians as you desire until investigations are made by the civil authorities. I have heard nothing definite from your Agency for ten days, and do not know what state of affairs exists, whether the Indians will leave as per contract or not. Please immediately send this letter to Mr. Lowry, one of my guides, and desire you to communicate with me as soon as possible, giving me all the information in your power, in order that I may know what course I am to pursue. If practicable, meet me on the road at the earliest moment.

"Very respectfully, yourobedient servant,

T. THORNBURGH."

MEEKER TO THORNBURGH.

"To this Agent Meeker replied, under date September 27, as follows:

"SIR: Understanding you are on the way hither with United States troops, I send a messenger, Mr. DeCrispe, and two Indians, Henry Dittegregater and John, Jr., to inform you that the Indians are greatly excited and wish you to stay at some convenient camping place, and then [illegible] five soldiers of your command come into the Agency, where a talk and a better understanding can be had. This I agree to do, and propose to order your movements; but it seems for the best. The Indians ask to consider the advance of the troops as a declaration of real war. In this I am agreeing to undesirable them, and at the same time in case time that they cannot do whatever they please. The first object now is to allay apprehensions. Respectfully,

"N. C. MEEKER, Indian Agent."

THORNBURGH'S REPLY.

"Under date of September 29, Major Thornburgh writes to Agent Meeker as follows:

"SIR: I shall move with my entire command to your convenient as soon, and within striking distance of your Agency, reaching such point early in the 30th. I shall then halt and examine the troops and proceed to the Agency with my entire command, [illegible] as communicated in your letter of the 27th inst. You are authorized to say for me to the Indians that my course is entirely friendly, and desire to help them. Our object is to avoid trouble, and we have not come to it. I respectfully request a letter of the Utes to meet me on the road before I reach the Agency. I expect to arrive quiet that you do so, any further delay that you bring upon us. Please let me hear from you.

MEEKER TO THORNBURGH.

KEEPING ORDERS.

"The Alabama Senators will stay the objects aimed at, and are the orders existing at this meeting of time."

[HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY,

"WASHINGTON, D. C., October 8.

"General P. H. Sheridan, Commanding Division, Chicago:

"I have received your three dispatches of yesterday, giving an account of the killing of Lieutenant Wilkinson and Forts Garland and Lewis. All these seem strong enough, and are well selected, but all preparations necessary and to meet the movement I give the word to pitch in. Should Agent Adams fail in his mission, I understand the civil authorities will attend rules, and the military will take absolute control of this whole [illegible] question and settle it for good and all. Meantime, have in mind to the captive women and the friendly Utes over of the White River Agency, [illegible] Red this scouting waste of time.

"W. T. SHERMAN, General."

"All the world now knows that Special-Agent General Charles Adams, of Colorado, appointed by the President with the consent of the Senate, has been [illegible] to the Ute Agency, to [illegible] the surrender of Mrs. and Miss Meeker, Mrs. Price and two children, who are also reported to be with the Indians. He is now supposed to be again with the hostiles, as though [illegible] the Utes by the honorable [illegible] of the Utes by the honorable [illegible] of the Interior, who is primarily responsible for the entire management of the Ute affairs. I cannot supplant the message and say this for displayed by General Adams, and hope he will not [illegible] succeed in his praiseworthy mission, and yet I [illegible] the opinion that [illegible] the military power, arations and precautions shall not slacken. Further [illegible] Indians [illegible] the Utes and twelve soldiers killed, so that they have no more troops to spare.

The report next treats of the Apache raid in Arizona, which troops are in pursuit, but nothing definite can be given as yet. The Apaches, he remarks, are a very cruel race, and [illegible] are unpopular and make [illegible] for the most part [illegible] and [illegible] reservations. He infers that as soon as [illegible] they will return to their wardens and be good. General Sherman refers at length to the [illegible] of Indians from savage to civilized life, and blames the [illegible] that some more permanent security [illegible] the rights [illegible] and [illegible] surroundings. He therefore recommends that [illegible] be authorized to appropriate $10,000 to counties Fort Assiniboine, and $20,000 to build a new post near Wolf Mountain, and says: "In this connection I also beg to submit the question that very soon the purposes of guards will make it absolutely necessary to have a military post located in the Yellowstone Park. The Attorney-General [illegible] Mammoth Hot Springs. The Sioux reservation below Cannon Ball Creek, is also open to actual settlers all the land in the region north and west of that reserve [illegible].

General Sherman reports a highly satisfactory condition of affairs in the Department of Texas, especially about the Rio Grande frontier. The large immigration which has poured into Texas having now extended to "the unsettled and [illegible] country west and south of the frontier posts further west to secure, and General Sherman therefore indorses the recommendation made to him by General [illegible] for temporary military posts to protect the [illegible] and to extend military posts on the new western [illegible].

Referring to the troubles caused during the past year by the attempted emigration of colored men into Territory from the southern border of the States, General Sherman says: "The industry imposed on the military was admirably performed by the troops under the orders of General Pope. The opinion is expressed that [illegible] of the Republican military [illegible] could be sold to great advantage."

The report in conclusion treats of the subject of military education, and after referring to the excellent military schools at Fortress Monroe and academy at West Point, says: "Similar schools should be established and [illegible] for cavalry and infantry. There have repeatedly been attempted at Fort Leavenworth and Smelling, but no source have they been [illegible] time some [illegible] outbreak has imperatively called away the troops, so that at this time we have nothing of the kind. But the day must come when schools for infantry and cavalry will be established, in the nature of a post graduate course, and it would be [illegible] instruction in the use of the rifle and horse, before your officers and recruits are pushed the battle and danger."

Not a Bit Astonished.

The fact that the large majority of people in this country are prepared for anything that may happen at any hour of the day was strongly exemplified at the ferry-dock yesterday. Three or four "old heads" got together and cooked up a plan and then went in a body to a ragged, woe-begone chap who stood leaning over a spile and developed it. Greeting him with smiles they each took him by the hand, and then the spokesman said:

"It gives us pleasure to be honored with the errand of seeking you and informing you that at our State Convention, held this forenoon, you were chosen our nominee for Governor on the first formal ballot. It is our pleasure to ask your acceptance of the honor, and in so doing you insure us a candidate for whom we can work with earnestness and enthusiasm, and whose election to the Gubernatorial chair no sane man can for a moment doubt."

The man had not changed a muscle of his face. He had preserved a calm and placid expression to the end, and when the spokesman stepped back, the stranger turned his quid, spit off the edge of the wharf, and replied:

"Well, being you want me to run I'll do it; but I tell you beforehand that I haven't got a dressed coat to appear on the canvass. You'll have to run me on my high qualifications entirely.—Detroit Free Press.

The toothpick market is agitated. Those chiefly in use are of white wood and pointed at both ends. A million a day, for fourteen years was obtained for them in 1865, and the factory of the Boston concern at Bucksfield, Me., used from three to five thousand cords of wood yearly, and turned out, in unbelievable quantities. A box of two thousand five hundred, sold for twenty-five cents, and the profit was large. A log six feet long and about eighteen inches in diameter was placed in a machine, where bevel knives cut it in each direction and turned out the toothpicks ready for market. About eighteen months ago another Boston firm started a factory in the woods of Ohio, and used similar machinery. The price then became [illegible], and fell to twenty cents at retail, then to eighteen, fourteen and twelve. Of late the original manufacturers have reduced the figure to ten cents, or eight cents at wholesale, and report their antagonists to be on the verge of stoppage.

MECHANICAL AND SCIENTIFIC.

The principal reforms to be introduced on Prussian State railroads are the following: 1. The excessive use of steel rails. 2. All timber now-to-be supplied with only one line. 3. The chrestomanes of the optical signals between station and station. 4. The introduction of a central position for sliding rail and signal apparatus which can be worked by one man. 5. The introduction of continuous brakes.

An ingeniously contrived car, or vehicle, is described in the London journals, the body being of a light form of construction, and the arrangement of wheels like a tricycle. The motive power, concealed in the box of the vehicle, is obtained by the combustion of benzoline, a small jet of which is admitted into a burner about the size of an ordinary shower-pot key, the steam passing into the cylinders of a small torpedo engine, which rotates a horizontal shaft. There is no steam given off, for it is recondensed and passes back into the tubular boiler. The weight of the steam power is about one hundred and eighty pounds. On lighting the benzoline, the steam requires no attention from the driver during a ride of many hours, and by merely his foot to a pedal, he can regulate the speed and power of draft. It travels at the rate of about eight miles an hour, and is easily directed in its course.

The wonderful success achieved in manufacturing large and perfect pieces in cast and wrought steel, of immense strength and superb finish, has added greatly to the power, the security and the durability of the modern steamship, for propelling ocean steamships, while the general introduction of this metal in the construction of boilers, engines and railroad machinery has effected an immense reduction in the cost of railway transportation. The full measure of the advantages already realized from the substitution of steel for iron—and in some measures what may be expected in the future—is shown in bargemen in the use of the better metal. A double-headed steel rail was recently exhibited by the Western Railway Company of France, which was certified to have been in use for eighteen years, during which 250,000 trains passed over it, and, while used but on one side, was not half worn away. The average age or life of an iron rail is given as about seven years, and as a prominent railroad engineer stated recently, there are now few railroads which can afford to use them instead of steel.—*N. It is a remarkable fact that, according to the statistics of the Health Department, diphtheria is more prevalent among the Protestants than among the Catholics, and the fact is as difficult to account for as the remarkable fact that the Jews are comparatively exempt. As Dr. Darwin can learn no theory has ever been pronounced by the medical profession to account for it, and yet the question is one well worth the consideration of the doctors. It is not a mere coincidence, for it is a temporary character. A study of the Health Statistics of Montreal for several years past reveals the same state of things. In the latter city the mortality from the general death rate is much higher with the Catholics, particularly so in contagious diseases, and consumption, than among the Protestants, and diphtheria more considerable than it is in our day. The terrestrial crust is penetrated by waters which ramble chemically with the rocks. It is almost certain that the temperature of the interior of the globe reaches that of boiling water at the depth of about six miles, and prevents the water from descending any lower; but the absorption will continue with the coming ages. The food, nitrogen and carbonic acid which compose our atmosphere also appear to undergo absorption, but slower. The Danube may forsake, through the mistof ages to come, the epoch, yet after all, in which the earth, deprived of the atmospheric aqueous vapor which protects her from the glacial cold of space by preserving the solar rays around her will become chilled in the sleep of death. As Henri Vivarez says: "From the summit of the mountains a winding sheet of snow will descend upon the high plateaus and the valleys, driving before it life and civilization, and masking forever the cities and nations that it meets on its passage. Life and human activity will pass inesitably toward the intertropical zone. St. Petersburg, Berlin, London, Paris, Vienna, Constantinople and Rome will fall asleep in succession under their eternal shroud. Then, many many ages equatorial humanity will undertake arctic expeditions to find again under the ice the place of the cities and nations and [illegible]."

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

William Robinson, a prisoner in the Kalamazoo County jail, while engaged in cleaning up the jail yard the other evening, suddenly disappeared. In a few minutes a man in the employ of Mr. Isaac Brooks came to the jail and told of a desperate assault by Robinson upon his (Robinson's) wife. It appears that Robinson, immediately upon his escape, proceeded to Brooks' house. There Mrs. Robinson was employed, and said that he would kill her, and endeavored to execute his threats with a club, and succeeded in striking her several times on the head before Brooks and his hired men could interfere. Brooks received slight injuries, and Mrs. Robinson was badly hurt. Robinson was confined at the jail for a previous assault on his wife. His extradition of the former [illegible] was the [illegible] to get a divorce so he could marry another woman.

James E. S. Ingalls, one of the pioneers of Menominee County, died on the morning of the 1st, after an illness of several months. The Judge has been one of the most active men of Menominee County, holding many offices of trust and responsibility, and always ready and willing to work for the benefit of the county. He was one of the first to open up the iron mines of the Menominee range, and at the time of his death was interested in several mines.

A Slough of Despond.

Mrs. Mary Avery, of Honeslain, Pike County, Pennsylvania, will not easily be induced to go near a swamp again, if ever she could be induced at all. She has just passed eight days in one, and will find that to suffice, no doubt, for the rest of her life. Her adventure was so odd, and painful, and nearly fatal as it was, grotesque, as to invest it with peculiar and noteworthy interest.

The lady had been visiting some friends at a place called Rowlands, not far from Honesdale, and set out toward evening to walk home. Unfortunately she missed her way and was overtaken by the darkness while seeking to discover her whereabouts. Mrs. Avery got into what is known as Lake Swamp, and Lackawaxen Canal ship. All in an instant, as it seemed to her, she began to sink into the ground. She cried for help, but she was far away from any habitation, and her voice echoed back from the surrounding forest. She struggled on, however, through the mist of ages to come, the epoch, yet after all, in which the earth, deprived of the atmospheric aqueous vapor which protects her from the glacial cold of space by preserving the solar rays around her will become chilled in the sleep of death. As Henri Vivarez says: "From the summit of the mountains a winding sheet of snow will descend upon the high plateaus and the valleys, driving before it life and civilization, and masking forever the cities and nations that it meets on its passage. The End of the World.

Camille Flammarion, the well-known French scientist, thus expresses himself in La Correspondance Scientifique, regarding the ultimate of our globe:

"We all of us admire to-day the beauties of terrestrial nature, the verdant hills, the perfumed meadows, the purling brooks, the mysterious shades, the groves animate with singing birds, the mountains crowned with glaciers, the immensity of the seas, the varied settings of the sun in clouds edged with scarlet and gold, and the sublime silkenness of the sun on the summer eves when the first rays of the morning shiver in the gray mists of the plain. We admire the human works which today crown cities of nations, the iron viaducts thrown from one mountain to another, and over which speeds steam; and palaces and scientific institutions, uniting the ocean; the brilliant and animated cities, the palaces and temples, the libraries, museums of mind; the arts of sculpture and painting, which idealize the real; the musical inspirations which make us forget the vulgar. All of things, the works of the intellectual genius who explores the mysteries of the world and transports us into infinity, and who in happiness in the midst of this life so radiant, making ourselves as it integral part of it. But all this beauty, all these flowers and these fruits will pass away. The earth was born; she will die. She will die either of old age, when her vital energy, having reached its maximum through the extinction of the sun, to which she owes her life is suspended. She will fall into the sun, perchance, through collision with some celestial body meeting her on her orbit; for this end of the world is the most improbable of all.

"She may, we repeat, die a natural death through the slow absorption of her vital elements. In fact it is probable that the air and water are diminishing. The ocean, like the atmosphere, appears to have been formerly much more considerable than it is in our day. The terrestrial crust is penetrated by waters which ramble chemically with the rocks. It is almost certain that the temperature of the interior of the globe reaches that of boiling water at the depth of about six miles, and prevents the water from descending any lower; but the absorption will continue with the coming ages. The food, nitrogen and carbonic acid which compose our atmosphere also appear to undergo absorption, but slower. A Fourth lady was recently buried at Brighton, England, under romantic circumstances. The day of her interment was the day originally fixed for her marriage, and her friends conquered with her dying wish that she should be drawn to the grave by the horses which had been engaged to convey her to the church. To the catafalque there were attached four gray horses' heads were decked with floral rosettes of white and red geraniums, and the coffin was covered with a white and amber silk pall. The carriages which followed were also drawn by horses caparisoned similarly to those which drew the hearse.

AGRICULTURAL AND DOMESTIC.

—A sheet of paper dipped in chloride of cobalt when the weather is to be dry and pleasant will become blue. When wet weather approaches it will become pink.

—If you would feed profitably you must bring the pasture into the problem. Summer-feeding pay better than winter, because cattle need less to keep up the natural heat of the body in summer, and their blood is kept cool by the grass. These elements of success can be brought into winter feeding by warm houses and the use of roots and oil cake.—James Wilson

—Every farmer should consider the condition of his soil and surroundings before he decides what is best for his particular farm; for that practice which may be best for one farmer may be ruinous for another. There are few if any departments of agriculture where right rules of action can be laid down. The successful farmer must, perforce be a thinking, observing man.—Iowa State Register

—A novel system of agriculture has for a number of years been practiced on a farm in Berkshire, England. The owner, Mr. Pront, instead of interesting the crops himself, divides the fields into lots when the grain begins to ripen, and the crops are sold unstripped from the stalk, in position. So live stock is kept, and the fertility of the soil is entirely kept up by artificial manure. For the thirteen years the system has been in use the expenses of running the farm have yearly amounted to $16,500, and the last year the net money realized by the yearly averaged sixteen per cent. of this sum, or $2,640. It has thus proved a profitable source, not only to barren farms cultivated by the ordinary method have been barely able to pay expenses, and many have run bankrupt.

Chicken Pudding.—Cut up as for fricassee, and parboil, season with salt, pepper and a piece of butter the size of an egg to each chicken. The fowls should be young and tender, and divided at every joint. Stew slowly for half an hour; take them out and lay them on a dish to cool. Set aside the water in which they were cooked for your gravy. Make a rich batter of a pint of milk, three cups of flour, three tablespoonfuls of melted butter, two scant teaspoonfuls of baking powder and three eggs well beaten, and a little salt. Put a layer of chicken in the bottom of the dish, and pour about half a cup of batter over it; then another layer, and more batter until the dish is filled, covering the top with the batter. Bake about half an hour in a quick stove, laying upon the heat of the oven. Beat an egg and stir into the gravy which is set aside; thicken with a little flour, a few bits of rice or wheat flour, add a little chopped parsley or celery; boil up and serve with the dish of pudding.

Care of Tools and Farm Machinery.

Every farmer prefers putting his hand to a bright plow which turns the furrows with comparative ease to both team and driver, than to one which is beaten and dulled with the previous season's dirt, and yet many dollars dazzle unperceptibly but surely away each year, and farmers generally are liable, all because of the careless handling of farm machinery. With one accord, reapers and mowers, seed drills, plows and harrows are ushered to remain where last employed to bear the action of stinging storms and driving winds. The repairs required the following season will cost more than the building of a shed or tool-house, or the arrangement of a place for them in outhouses already erected. Everybody knows this, but everybody does not heed and profit by it. The man, however, who possesses a tool-house and requirements for properly storing farm implements could not be induced to abandon those conveniences, for he has learned they not only put money in his pocket, but that the extra cost and labor attending the care of tools is more than paid for in the prevention of wear and tear on the implements when the busy season begins. Then is the interval returned on all time and money expended by properly storing, by finding everything not only in place but in working order.

There are a variety of mixtures which may be applied to the two portions of implements to prevent rusting, the cheapest of which is grease that has not been salted. An excellent article can be made by [illegible] steel or iron by melting lard and common rosin slowly together and stirring the mixture as it cools. Often required in large quantities make in the proportion of about six pounds of lard to two of rosin. If only a small quantity is desired, a piece of rosin about the size of a hen's egg will suffice for one pound of lard. This mixture may be applied with a cloth or brush while thin will put a thin coating to the metal surface to be protected. The resin prevents the lard from getting rancid and the grease excludes air and moisture. Before applying the machines should be thoroughly relieved of dirt and dust; wipe the bearings and oil with castor oil. Castor oil, by the way, is among the best of oils for iron axles. A wheel well lubricated with it lasts not only twice readily but wears much longer than when oiled with cheaper sorts of grease.

Not only is it necessary to keep all of the iron and steel parts of tools and machinery, but the wood-work claims attention. Repeated wetting and drying soon injures any wood, causing cracking and final decay. This may be prevented by the timely and occasional application of some cheap paint. When the wood-work from exposure has become cracked, it is advisable to give it a wash of crude petroleum previous to an external coat of paint. Petroleum has a strong preservative power, converting soft, perishable woods to the durability of hard woods. It not only improves all wooden tools, but is also valuable for rustic furniture exposed to the weather. An occasional coat of this oil improves their color and renders them more lasting.—N. Y. Herald.

A Bloody Fight With Cats.

Several mornings ago a boy aloud fifteen years old, a nephew of Mr. Dunham's, an inmate of his family, went out to the barn to feed the horses. When he entered the loft he discovered two large cats lying on the straw asleep, like, he took up a bundle of fodder and, creeping up, struck both of them at one blow. There was a scrambling of a disappointment in the result. The cats, instead of running away, sprang at the boy with a fury that startled him. Having nothing with which to defend himself he tumbled around, while the cats scratched, clawed and bit him unmercifully. His cries did not bring assistance, and the boy sprang toward the ladder leading across the rafters, and ascended to the roof of the house. The cats followed him, and, despite his efforts to keep them away, bit and clawed his legs fearfully. Reaching the ladder fully, he jumped down on the hay. The cats followed him. By this time he was bleeding very freely, and his coat was almost torn to threads. Seizing one of the cats in the hind legs, he attempted to dash out its brains against the side of the barn, but the animal doubled around and began tearing his arm. Shaking it off, he ran into the house, and, reaching down, the animals followed him. As soon as he reached the ladder he discovered a monkey-wrench lying on the floor. Seizing it with his right hand, he struck a blow between the eyes, and before it could recover mauled the head. The other animal was then dispatched in the same manner. The boy's arm was in a badly lacerated condition. Two of his fingers were broken, and his body was covered with scratches and bites. This is a true story, and can be vouched for by any number of persons.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

VEGETINE FOR Chills, Shakes,
FEVER AND AGUE.

DR. H. R. STEVENS:
Dear Sir,—I feel very grateful for what your valuable medicine, VEGETINE, has done for me. I was in the most miserable condition from Chills and Fever, and could get no relief, although I tried various remedies. I was induced to try your VEGETINE, and before I had taken one bottle I felt that I was getting relief. By the time I had taken three bottles I felt well. My appetite returned, I was entirely free from Chills, and I have had a good deal of health ever since. The doctors did not help him a bit. I would say that my wife joins me in this letter. We are both well and hearty. I cannot say enough in favor of VEGETINE. It has done for me what several Chills and Fever doctors and [illegible] failed to do. I positively believe VEGETINE has saved my life. I am willing to do anything I can to make VEGETINE known. Yours truly,

VEGETINE.
Druggists' Testimony.
MR. H. R. STEVENS:
Dear Sir,—We have been selling your remedy, the VEGETINE, for some time, and have no hesitation in saying that it gives entire satisfaction, and is an honest medicine. We have had many testimonials from persons who have used it, and we believe it is the best blood purifier before the public. Yours truly,

The Iowa Republicans carried both the Congressional districts which elected greenbackers last year.

It is estimated that there are between eight and nine millions of men under arms in Continental Europe.

Col. "Bob" Ingersol says that the result of the elections this fall establishes the fact that Tilden and Hunman are the two political orphans of this country.

Next April Indiana votes on a proposition to so amend the Constitution of that state as to make it impossible for the Kentucky Democracy to vote regularly in the Hoosier State.

General Butler has baited his hook for the Massachusetts governorship six times—twice as a regular Democrat, twice as a Republican, and twice as Ben Butler. And he has failed just six times to secure the gubernatorial prize.

There is at least one newspaper man in Dixie who has sufficient brains to see and realize the truth, and courage and honesty enough to say so. It is the editor of the Richmond State, who says: "The way to head off the bloody shirt business is for the South to secure peaceful, quiet and fair elections."

IN MEMORIAM.

BY D. F. WIENER.

I heard a great shout in the city,
The far famed Queen of the West;
When all of her bounty had gathered
With her nobles, the knavish and best.
There, gathered were they in their splendor,
In fun to the words of the strong;
And loud were the plaudits which echoed,
Still louder, like thunder, and long.

At last there was silence and darkness
O'er the marble-paved Queen of the West;
From the spirits that raised an midnight.
Had sunk down at last to their rest.
But soon dawns again on the city,
The shameless, proud city which slept;
While Death on his cold, pointless bootstraps
In the Grand Pacific had crept.

And there in his chamber alone
Lay the form of the Stalwart undressed;
With a smile on his face as before,
In the halls of the Queen of the West.
Then the bells of the city rang out
In tones full of ingenuity and pow'r;
And from through the city is carried
A wail for our Stalwart old chief.

And all through Chicago as mourning
For Chandler who spoke in her halls;
And sorrow more sombre than midnight
Our of all her palaces falls;
For his voice no longer will thunder
In the halls of our Nation again;
As once, when sounding a grim voice
Sowed defiance on horses and men;

From Pacific's still billows asleep
Broke bright, shining portals of day;
The bells of Chicago are heard:
"They have borne our brave Stalwart away?"
From the waves of the Gulf in the South
To the North, in his snowy array,
These chief, had echoes are wafted;
"They have borne our brave Stalwart away?"

Let us mourn for our Chandler departed!
And weave for the Statesman slain
A wreath of immortals all bright,
That shall bloom in the future again.
Let us think of his deeds in the past!
And cherish them ever and well;
For long on the ear of our Nation
Will echo his funeral knell.

Always look on the other side of the street for the man that owes you.

Dinner has an Indian barber. It's all right, we suppose, but as for us we don't want our hair parted with a tomahawk.

The Rev. Mr. Gaul of Philadelphia attended a temperance and labored it on his pulpit as schooling. In other words, that Rev. Gaul was seen shaking up by Gaul.

Walt Whitman says the best promise in American literature is in certain young men who are now coming on the stage. That's the all we are waiting for is for those old fellows to "sit down in front."

It seems good to have these long evenings to come again. To a man who loves to be at home with his family these long evenings are a great and constant joy. Indeed. He can play at least four games more than every night, and get home no later than he used to in June.

The Detroit correspondent of the New York Tribune has been taking a survey of the political field in Michigan. Here is what he writes in regard to the Governorship: "Several candidates have been named, but it is believed that the struggle will finally be between Thomas W. Palmer of Detroit, the Republican silk leader in the State Senate at its last session, and John T. Rich of Lapeer, the speaker of the House of Representatives. They are both popular men, and stand well. Mr. Palmer is a leading business man of Detroit, and Mr. Rich is a farmer, who has served with honor four terms in the State Legislature.

The horizon begins to look threatening in Europe. Several of the leading governments are strengthening their armaments, and it is reported that Germany, Austria and Italy have formed an alliance against England and France. A big war across the briny deep at no distant day is by no means improbable.

Only a few years ago, all the Democratic papers in America wailed and howled and gnashed their teeth because Grant wouldn't stay in Washington all the time. Now they are wailing and weeping because they are afraid he'll go back again for another four year's stay.

Gen. Garfield is rapidly coming to the front as a candidate for United States Senator in Ohio. He is one of the ablest statesmen in the North, and Republicans everywhere will be pleased to see him succeed that political weather-cock known as Thurman.

Recent utterances of Ben. Butler appear to indicate a desire on his part to sneak back into the Republican party.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Domestic.

THURSDAY, November 27, has been appointed by the President as a day of National thanksgiving and prayer.

On the 3d the wholesale Chicago dry-goods house of Seetaurs Brothers & Co. suspended, with liabilities estimated at $1,000,000.

On the evening of the 2d the village of Mound City, Ill., was devastated by a terrific conflagration which obliterated nearly one-third of the business and residence structures, and inflicted a loss of from $400,000 to $450,000. All the public school buildings, court-house and about 11 fire other buildings were destroyed. The entire fire-bells were of the change come house disclosures. An appeal for assistance has been issued. Contributions of money or provisions are solicited to the Relief Committee of which H. Fenger, Mayor, is Chairman.

THE Secretary of the Treasury issued an order on the 3d prohibiting the importation of neat cattle from Canada, to take effect December 1.

THE announcement was recently made that the new two cent postal card would be ready for distribution in a few days. The universal Postal Union, to which the new card will be sent, includes Great Britain, France, Germany, Greece, Italy, Belgium, Russia, Spain, Switzerland, Turkey, Norway, Sweden, Portugal, Netherlands, Austria-Hungary, Servia, Denmark, the Argentine Republic, Roumania, Luxemburg, Montenegro, the British Possessions, Bosnia, Herzegovina and Netherland colonies, Egypt, British India, the Falkland Islands, Ceylon, Greenland, Honduras, Hong Kong, Gibraltar, Guatemala, Jamaica, Japan, Liberia, Mexico, Newfoundland, Peru, Perak and Trinidad. Canada belongs to the Union also, but the speed arrangement between that country and the United States remains in force, letters and cards are frequently delayed the transit of mails.

ON the morning of the 6th a passenger train on the New York & Greenwood Lake Railroad ran into an open draw at the Hackensack River, near Hackensack, N. Y., the bridge having been left open by the watchman on the approach of the locomotive and was killed. Several of the passengers were hurt, but none fatally. The engineer and conductor of the passenger were rescued by men in boats.

THE Grand Jury of the United States Court for the Southern District of Illinois have indicted Henry Greenebaum, late President of the German National Bank of Chicago, for misapplication of funds and misappropriating its funds. The indictment contains twenty-two counts. Mr. Greenebaum was arrested and held to bail for trial in the sum of $15,000.

A WASHINGTON dispatch of a recent date says an appropriation of $2,750,000 will be asked for during the expenses of taking the census next year.

At the meeting in New York on the 6th the General Missionary Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church appropriated $950,000 for missionary work the ensuing year, which is an increase of $50,000 over the amount appropriated last year.

THE Ohio State Grange will meet in Cincinnati in annual session on the 9th of December.

J. E. ADGER & CO., of Charleston, S. C., hardware merchants, failed on the 6th for $800,000. Their claim assets of $300,000.

A SPECIAL from Greeley, Col., on the 6th states that Edward Clark, who was employed at White River Agency, says Chief Douglass, the plotter of the Meeker massacre, was converted in the hospital Mountain Meadow massacre, where so many innocent women and children were butchered by the Mormons and Indians. Clark says that one day this summer Douglass and another Chief quarreled. The Chief in the anger said he could run Douglass if he told the truth about him, that he was a bad man and had participated in the crime at Mountain Meadows.

AT KANSAS CITY, Mo., on the afternoon of the 7th a three-story building, occupied by J. F. Corle as a cracker factory and confectionery, fell in with a tremendous crash, and in a few seconds flames sprang from the debris. In the building about sixty persons, mainly young boys and girls, were employed, and the cries and screams of these as the fire rapidly spread are described as being horrible. The flames soon finally subdued, and out of the debris sixteen corpses were recovered. It was believed that more would be found when the ruins were finally cleared up. Several persons were also rescued badly and seriously injured.

THE National Board of Health inaugurated a house-to-house inspection in Memphis on the 7th, with a view to ascertaining what sanitary improvements are necessary for each dwelling within the corporate limits of the city.

A STRIKE for higher pay was in progress among the packing-house employes at the Union Stock Yards, near Chicago, on the 7th—about 6,000 of the employes having quit. The rates paid had been about $1.50 per day for common, and from $2 to $4.50 for skilled laborers.

IT was reported from Lewes, Del., on the 8th that the steamer Champion, from New York for Charleston, was run into the day before by the ship Lady Gideon, off the Capes, and sank in five minutes after the collision. The ship was badly damaged. Thirty-two lives were reported lost.

SINCE the 1st of January 23,993 German emigrants landed at Castle Garden, against 18,721 during the corresponding period of last year.

A TUSCON dispatch of the 7th reports that the Arizona scouts and volunteers had defeated Victoria's band of Apaches at a point about sixty miles below the Mexican line.

THE Postmasters of all of the prominent cities of the country have sent their annual reports to the Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, last. These show that New York stands first in point of business done and Chicago next.

THE Commissioner of Pensions received a letter on the 7th complaining that a certain party had made a demand upon a female pensioner for $40, for services in quilting the Arrears of Pension bill through Congress. With a view to expose this disreputable scheme Mr. Bentley furnished for publication his reply to the above letter as follows:

"DEAR MADAM: In answer to your letter of the 30 inst., you are informed that writing Mr. ——— any other persons have any right to demand any of you for any efforts they may have put forth to secure the passage of the pending arrears. From the papers which you inclose, and which, with your consent, I retain, it appears that Mr. ——— is trying to collect a tax for his private use upon your generosity and generosity."

Personal and Political.

GENERAL HATCH, Chief Ouray and General Adams have been appointed a commission to make an investigation into the circumstances surrounding the recent outbreak at the White River Agency, and determine the punishment to be meted out to the guilty.

JAMES D. GILLESPIE has declined the Republican nomination for Lieutenant-Governor of Indiana.

FORT SCOTT (Kansas) dispatches of the 3d announce that Jesse James, the leading spirit of the notorious train and bank robbing band, was shot dead the day before by George Shepherd, a Kansas City detective. It seems Shepherd and James were riding over the prairie near the Indian Territory, when the former quickly drew his revolver, and placed it within an inch of Jesse's face and said: "You rubbish and murdered my brother. I have been long waiting for this opportunity for revenge." He fired and Jesse fell dead.

MRS. NELLIE GRANT SARTORIS will sail for this country so as to join her father and mother when they arrive in Washington.

THE American Female Suffrage Association opened its session at Cincinnati on the night of the 6th, with 200 delegates in attendance.

ON the 5th General Grant reached his old home at Galena. He was enthusiastically received by his old friends and neighbors, and an immense crowd was in attendance from the surrounding country. A welcoming address was made by State Senator McClellan, to which general Grant made appropriate response. Other speeches were made by Governor Cullom, Governor Gear, of Iowa, Governor Smith, of Wisconsin, Senator Logan, Senator Sherman, of Ohio, Hon. E. B. Washburne and others, several of which made an appropriate reply as to the address of welcome.

ON the morning of the 5th the republicans of the late Senator Chandler were taken from his late residence in Detroit and carried to the City Hall, where they lay in state until one o'clock, during which period they were visited by a large concourse of people. At that hour they were returned to his late residence, where funeral services were held, conducted by Rev. Dr. Bierce of the First Street Presbyterian Church, after which the body was laid away in the family burial vault in Elmwood. The United States Senate was represented by its Secretary and Sergeant-at-Arms and Senators Anthony, Blaine, Cameron and Ferry. The Departments in Washington were closed, and the Interior Department officers and clerks adopted suitable resolutions.

Canada is longer in the Union now, but the general arrangement between that country and the United States remains in force, letters and postal cards passing between the two at present rates.

ON the morning of the 4th a passenger train on the New York & Greenwood Lake Railroad ran into a draw at the Hackensack River, near Hackensack, N. Y. The bridge having been left open by the watchman. The engineer jumped from the locomotive and was killed. Several of the passengers were hurt, but none fatally. The carriages on the water and the passengers were rescued by men in boats.

THE Grand Jury of the United States Court for the Northern District of Illinois have indicted Henry Greenhaum, late President of the Greenhaum National Bank of Chicago, for abstracting valuable assets and misapplying the funds. The indictment contains twenty-one counts. Mr. Greenhaum has been arrested and held to bail for trial in the sum of $20,000.

A WASHINGTON dispatch of a recent date says an appropriation of $6,750,000 will be asked for during the expenses of taking the census next year.

AT its meeting in New York on the 6th the General Missionary Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church appropriated $650,000 for missionary work the ensuing year, which is an increase of $50,000 over the amount appropriated last year.

THE Ohio State Grange will meet in Cincinnati in annual session on the 9th of December.

J. E. ADGER & Co., of Charleston, S. C., hardware merchants, failed on the 6th for $800,000. Their claim against $300,000.

A SPECIAL from Bradley, Col., on the 6th states that Edward Ciara, who was supposed at White River agency says Chief Douglass, the plotter of the Meeker massacre, was concerned in the horrible Mountain Meadow massacre, where so many innocent women and children were butchered by the Mormons and Indians. Clark says that one day this winter Douglass and another chief quarreled. The Chief in his anger said he could run Douglass if he told the truth about him, that he was a bad man and had participated in the crime at Mountain Meadows.

AT KANSAS CITY, Mo., on the afternoon of the 7th a threatory building, occupied by J. Victories as a cracker factory and confectionery, fell in with a tremendous crash, and in a few seconds flames sprang from the debris. In the building about sixty persons, mainly young boys and girls, were employed, and the cries of fire aroused them as the fire rapidly spread are described as being horrible. The flames were finally subdued, and out of the debris sixteen corpses were recovered. It was believed that more would be found when the ruins were finally cleared up. Several persons were also rescued, badly, and probably fatally, burned.

THE National Board of Health inaugurated a house-to-house inspection in Memphis on the 7th, with a view to ascertaining what sanitary improvements are necessary for each dwelling within the corporate limits of the city.

A STRIKE for higher pay was in progress among the packing-house employes at the Union Stock Yards, near Chicago, on the 7th—about 4,000 of the workmen having quit. The wages paid had been from $1.50 per day for common and from $2 to $4.50 for skilled laborers.

IT was reported from Lawtes, Del., on the 8th that the steamer Champion, from New York for Charleston, was run into the day before by the ship Lady Getalon, off the capes, and sank in five minutes after the collision. The ship was badly damaged. Thirty two lives were reported lost.

THE Postmasters of all the prominent cities of the country have sent their annual reports to the Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, last. These show that New York stands first in point of business done, and Chicago next.

THE Commissioner of Pensions received a letter on the 7th complaining that a certain party had made a demand upon a female pensioner for $25, for services in getting the Arrears of Pension bill through Congress. With a view to expose this disreputable scheme, Mr. Bentley furnished for publication his reply to the above letter, as follows:

"DEAR MADAM: In answer to your letter of the 3d inst., you are informed that neither Mr. ——— nor any other persons here, any right to demand pay for any efforts they may have put forth to secure the passage of the law granting arrears. From the paper which you inclose, and which were evidently sent you for return, it appears that Mr. ——— is trying to levy a tax for his private use upon your rectitude and generosity.

Personal and Political.

GENERAL HATCH, Chief Ouray and General Adams have been appointed a commission to make an investigation into the circumstances attending the recent outbreak at the Ute River Agency, and determine the punishment to be meted out to the guilty.

JAMES L. GILLESPIE has declined the Republican nomination for Lieutenant-Governor of Louisiana.

FOUT SCOTT (Kansas) dispatches of the 3d announce that Jesse James the bandit and all of the notorious train and bank-robbing band, was shot dead the day before, by George Shepherd, a Kansas City detective. It seems that Scott and James were riding over the prairie near the Indian Territory when the former quickly drew his revolver, placed it within an inch of James's face and said: "You robbed and murdered my nephew. I have been long waiting for this opportunity for revenge." He fired and Jesse fell dead.

MRS. NELLIE GRANT SARTORIS will sail for this country so as to join her father and mother when they arrive in Washington.

THE American Female Suffrage Association opened its session at Cincinnati on the night of the 5th, with 250 delegates in attendance.

ON the 5th General Grant reached his old home at Galena. He was enthusiastically received by his old friends and neighbors, and an immense crowd was in attendance from the surrounding country. A welcoming address was made by State Senator Metcalfe, to which General Grant made appropriate response. Other speeches were made by Governor Colton, Governor Gear, of Iowa, Governor Smith, of Wisconsin, Senator Logan, Senator Allison, of Iowa, Hon. E. B. Washburne and others. General Grant made an appropriate response to the address of welcome.

ON the morning of the 6th the remains of the late Senator Chandler were taken from his late residence in Detroit and carried to the City Hall, where they lay in state until one o'clock, during which period they were visited by a large concourse of people. At that hour they were returned to his late residence, where funeral services were held, conducted by Rev. Dr. Pierson, of the First Presbyterian Church, after which the body was laid away in the family burial lot at Elmwood. The United States Senate was represented by its Secretary and Sergeant-at-Arms, and Senators Anthony, Blaine, Jameson and Ferry. The Departments at Washington were closed, and the Interior Department officers and clerks adopted complimentary resolutions.

THE American Women's Suffrage Association, in session at Cincinnati, elected the following officers on the 6th to serve for the ensuing year: President, Henry B. THE body of the late Major-General Hooker arrived at Tarrytown on the evening of the 6th, and lay in state all night. The funeral ceremonies were performed on the 7th, the city and military honors being paid to the departed hero.

ON the morning of the 7th Rev. Matthew Hale Smith, the well-known author and lecturer, died at his residence in South Brooklyn, after a week's illness of pneumonia. He ceased was sixty-three years old. Writing over the nom de plume on journals he became widely known in this country.

The Elections.

THE Colorado vote for Supreme Judge was canvassed on the 1st, and announced as follows: Beck, Republican, 16,020; Richmond, Democrat, 15,762; the Greenback candidate, 1,246. Beck's majority over all, 2,974.

THE returns received on the morning of the 6th from the Massachusetts election indicated that Long, the Republican candidate for Governor, was elected by over 18,000 plurality. The Republican candidates for State officers probably all elected. Legislature largely Republican. In Boston Butler had a majority of 3,578 over all opposition for Governor; over Long 8,367—the vote in full being: Butler, 22,449; Long, 14,082; Adams, 1,520; Eddy, 99.

THE Republicans elected their candidate for Mayor in Detroit by 1,800 majority, and fifteen out of the twenty-six members of the Common Council.

IN Minnesota on the 4th the Republican State ticket was elected by an average majority of about 6,000 to 8,000. Vote small.

THE Connecticut Legislature, a portion of which was chosen on the 4th, will stand about as follows: Senate—Republicans, 17; Democrats, 4. House—Republicans, 158; Democrats, 93. The net Republican majority in the seven Senatorial Districts is 2,013.

IN Virginia the election was for members of the Legislature only and of these it appeared on the morning of the 6th that the delegates would have a small majority in both houses, but the vote was so close that the official count would be necessary to positively settle the contest.

IN Maryland the Democrats elected their entire State ticket by over 30,000 majority. The Legislature will stand: Senate—Democrats, 19; Republicans, 5; Independent Democrats, 2. House of Delegates—Democrats, 60; Republicans, 18. Democratic majority on joint ballot, 60.

IN Chicago and in Cook County, Ill., the Republicans elected their entire ticket by majorities ranging from 6,000 to 10,000.

COMM (Republican) for Supreme Judge in Nebraska, has a majority of about 15,000. The seat of the Republican State ticket also elected.

THE Intelligencer from the Wisconsin election, received on the morning of the 6th, indicated the election of the Republican State ticket by from 30,000 to 35,000 majority. Both branches of the Legislature largely Republican—the Senate being composed of twenty-five Republicans and eight Democrats, and the Assembly sixty-five Republicans, twenty-eight Democrats, two Greenbackers and one Independent.

THE Democrats carried a majority of the local elections in Mississippi on the 4th. Holmes County was carried by the Greenbackers.

THE Republicans gain one State Senator in New Jersey and four or five members of the Assembly, and will retain control of both branches of the Legislature.

THE official returns from the late election in Iowa give Gear (Republican) for Governor, 187,871; Trimble (Dem.), 89,067; Campbell (Greenback), 30,356; Bowen (Prohibitionist), 3,586. Total vote, 291,315. Hear's majority over all, 28,893.

THE official returns from Pennsylvania give Butler (Rep.), for State Treasurer, a majority of 50,625 over all other candidates.

ACCORDING to returns and estimates on the morning of the 8th Connell (Rep.), for Secretary of State of Iowa, would have a majority of nearly 25,000. Solomon's (Dem.) majority in Brooklyn was about 10,000 and in New York City about 25,000. The vote of the State would not fall much short of 750,000. Potter (Dem.), for Lieutenant-Governor, probably elected by a small majority. The remainder of the State ticket was claimed by both parties. The State Legislature is overwhelmingly Republican.

Foreign.

ACCORDING to Constantinople telegrams of the 4th great excitement prevailed there, in consequence of a demand by Lord Ledyard, the British Ambassador, for a reconstruction of the Ministry. He was accompanied by a threat to enter the Bosphorus with the English fleet and take possession of the forts if the demand was not complied with.

THE Berlin Gazette of the 4th states that news had been received from its correspondent in Afghanistan that reports had been found at Cabul seriously compromising the Russian Government in connection with recent troubles in Afghanistan.

Remarkable Experience at Sea—Five Days Without Food.

News of another remarkable escape after shipwreck reaches us by telegraph from New Orleans. The American steamship Sally left Pensacola for Havana on the 20th of October. It is very clear that the Sally should not have left Pensacola at all. She was not seaworthy, and she set sail in a gale of wind. Such at least are the facts as set forth in the telegraphic report, or scare as these directly following from the

From the hour the Sally left Pensacola her crew were at the pumps. On Sunday, the 26th of October, she was laboring in a tremendous sea, and the wind was blowing a hurricane. At eight o'clock on Monday morning the vessel was thrown on her beam ends, and, half full of water as she was, it proved impossible to right her. This happened at a point about two hundred miles southeast of South Pass Light. At the moment the sails went over the following things capsized. The mainmast, which the crew had probably been trying to cut away, went by the board. A yawl was likewise carried away. The Captain had managed with three of the crew to scramble into the longboat and at the same moment they were clear of the wreck. Antonio Blay, a Spaniard, was knocked incredibly and washed overboard, but being entangled in the wreck was finally hauled in. In some mysterious way back to the ship again. Lindar Michel, a German, who was also washed, had lashed himself there, and so remained safely in his place. The remaining two of the eight men composing the crew were lost, unfortunately swallowed up by the waves.

Ten minutes after these events the long-boat was no more to be seen. The sea was very high, and Michel thanks the best mast soon have foundered, he helped his survivor comrades out of his difficulties, and on the next five days the two men clung to the wreck. Their situation was desperate and all but hopeless. They were entirely without food or drink. The Sally being nearly waterlogged scarcely rose above the level of the sea. Only one miserable resource in the way of sustenance was left them. They consisted of a hapless cat which had escaped in the rush of waters and remained with them in the vessel. The animal was killed on the second day and drank her blood. On Friday, the fifth day, the storm-tossed mariners were cheered up by the sight of a large black rabbit heavily in the trough of the sea, and then strength was almost exhausted. Both men, however, as they had seen a bark gliding along the horizon and had made every possible signal to attract her attention. But all in vain. She would not see them, and with the sunset her topgallant sails sank in the horizon. Then came the dawn of Saturday, the fifth day of November, instant, and it was a real thanksgiving and prayer and fervently remembered that, shrinking themselves in accordance with a hymn, the people of the United States do meet together to-day in their various churches and places of worship, there to give thanks and praise to Almighty God for His mercies, and to dedicate themselves anew to His service.

Issued at the city of Washington this 5th day of November, in the year of our Lord, 1879, and of the Independence of the United States the 104th.

By the President:
WILLIAM M. EVARTS, Secretary of State.

The young man who consulted the goose-bone to find out what the weather would be undoubtedly anticipated a bone-anza.—Hawkins Recorder.

A "MAMMY'S" LAMENT.

INCIDENT OF THE YELLOW FEVER EPIDEMIC.

"Yes, sar, dat is my little boy, de oulliest one I had—
De fever took him yisterday, he had it mighty bad;
Nothin' didn't do no good, he died at break ob day—
I had four oulder chil'en, sar, an' his'n am all dat
Leff 'pon de fever took all dem, an' left me just de sons,
My youngest, his, de baby, sar—no! now, oh!
Lord, he's gone.

"Wha' make I didn't 'port de case? At fus I thought I would,
But doctors dis de hardest no' day couldn't do no good.
Day's mighty kind an' 'siderate, an' does all
dat dey know;
But when de fever gits actin' it neither does

GRANDMOTHER DEAN'S CHINA TEA-POT.

A Thanksgiving Story.

Helen and Robert Gillespie were orphans. They sat looking out of their little upper window one evening in November, and talking in low, earnest tones.

What do you suppose they were talking about? They were laying their little plans for the coming winter—these two children, left without a mother two months before. They had a relatives in the great city, and none in the world, so far as they knew.

Miss Phebe Hannah, who, with her invalid sister, Miss Hannah, lived in the rooms across the hall, had been very kind to the children during her sickness; and she had promised to do what she could for the children when they should be left alone. This attention was owing partly to Miss Phebe's kind heart, and partly to the fact that her grandfather and Miss Gillespie's father-in-law were Scotchmen. Miss Phebe was very proud of her Scotch ancestry. It was little she could do for the children, for she was poor and supported herself and sister by doing fine sewing. But sympathy and kind words were given freely, and they often do more good than money. Robert and Helen fully appreciated their situation now, and knew that it would be wrong to get a turkey, as you said?"

Miss Phebe looked at her sister. What should she tell the child? They needed every cent of the money. That she well knew.

"I don't believe mother'd care," Helen went on. "She thought so much of Thanksgiving, and we always had turkey for dinner. Mother said it seemed as if she must."

That decided the case. Miss Phebe could not go against the mother's opinion.

"Yes, child, we'll take some of it and buy a turkey. It won't be wrong, either," she added, stoutly, as if somebody had said to the contrary.

"When can we go? This afternoon?" asked Helen, eagerly.

"Why, child, alive! the countrymen won't bring in the turkeys till a day or two before Thanksgiving. Can't you wait? Well, I don't wonder," she added, softly, thinking how free bright and happy these children should live.

"Oh! I'm so glad we can have it," said Helen. "Now it will seem like Thanksgiving. I thought it wouldn't. And I 'most thinking what a nice time we had last year. And we'll have Thanksgiving together. Won't we? Ain't you glad, Miss Phebe? Wouldn't it be nice not to tell Robert anything about it, and then surprise him? But do you suppose I can keep from telling him?"

Miss Phebe rather doubted her powers of secrecy; but Helen was sure that, if she made up her mind not to tell, she would not.

The little girl waited rather impatiently for the day when Miss Phebe had promised to go with her, after school, and buy the turkey. At last that hour they started. Helen proud and important, but very much afraid they should meet Robert, who would wonder what their errand might be. No Robert appeared, however, and they soon reached Main street, which was lined with farmers' wagons, laden with produce.

Miss Phebe stepped up to one man, and asked him the price of turkeys.

"Twenty-five cents, ma'am. Have this one? Ten pounds, ma'am. Won't find a better," he went on, glibly.

Miss Phebe looked at the turkeys, but did not take any. She thought she would go on a little further.

So Helen trudged along by her side, fully convinced that her escort understood the business perfectly.

"Why didn't you take that? Wasn't it a good one?"

"May be 'twas; but I didn't like the looks of the man. Then I'm not going to pay so much. Twenty cents a pound might to buy a good one."

She stopped before another cart, where a jolly-faced, gray-haired man, in a long blue farmer's frock, was trying to suit an Irish woman with a goose. At last she went off with her goose under her arm, and the man turned to Miss Phebe, who stood waiting.

"What would you like, ma'am?"

"I want a good turkey. How much do you charge for them?"

"Twenty cents a pound. How large a one do you want?"

"Why, I don't know," she thought. "Here is a nice fat one. Just ten and a quarter. I'll call it ten pounds."

Miss Phebe liked the looks of it, and said she would take it. She then inquired the price of some nice-looking pumpkins, and the result was that a pumpkin went into the basket with the turkey.

Helen looked longingly at a basket of bright red apples in the farther end of the wagon. Perhaps the farmer noticed it.

"Here, little girl, here's an apple for you, and one for your little brother," he said, handing her two rosy-cheeked specimens.

"What's my little brother. He's bigger than I am," said Helen.

"Just as well," he replied. "I guess he ain't big enough to apple." When Helen thanked him, her cheeks as rosy as the apples.

"Now shall we go home? Let me help carry the basket."

So, with the basket between them, they walked slowly homeward, Helen talking very fast all the way.

When they reached home, Miss Phebe took charge of the turkey, so that it should not by any possibility fall into Robert's hands. There was a little spirit outside of one of her windows, where she put things to keep them fresh and cool; and there the turkey was deposited, to rest until the next day.

Helen received the remainder of the money from Miss Phebe, and there was now, after buying the turkey, seven cents and seventy-seven cents. What a fortune! It seemed one to the little girl.

When she came home from school the next day at noon, Miss Phebe called to her, and, going to her cupboard, she displayed a pie, a delicious-looking pie, and two pumpkin pies. They looked delicious, and I don't know which was the more pleased—Miss Phebe, in showing, or Helen, in admiring them.

That afternoon Helen was to help Miss Phebe get the turkey ready for roasting. She could hardly wait for school to close, and when, at last, she was outside the big gate her feet fairly flew homeward.

"My mother used to boil the heart and gizzard and liver, and chop them in with the dressing. So I've got them all boiled ready," said Miss Phebe, when Helen presented herself. "It's much nicer that way. And, now, I want you to run around the corner, to the baker's and get a loaf of bread. Baker's bread is better for dressing."

When Helen and the baker's loaf came in, Miss Phebe told her to cut in thin slices and toast it.

"Some people never toast their bread," she said; "but my mother always did, and it's just as much better as can be. You don't want to toast it too hard. There, that'll do nicely," as Helen presented her first slice for approval.

So the turkey was stuffed and sewed and tied, amid much talk and planning.

"Miss Phebe," Helen began, "don't you suppose Mr. Sanford would like to have us ask him to dinner? Because he's been so good to me, and he said he would look any hours to go to."

"Why, yes, child, I presume he'd like it very much. The turkey 'll be good enough for anybody to eat, I guess. You can ask him, if you want to."

"I don't want to unless you'd like it."

"I should like it well enough. I don't care either way. Do as you please about it."

"But I wish you would!"

So Ask him yourself, child. He'll like it better from you."

"Oh! but there won't be cups enough," and Helen's face took on a look of dismay.

Truly, here was a dilemma. They had planned to use what remained of Grandmother Dean's china tea-set. There was the little tea-pot, the contents of which had brought so much happiness, a sugar bowl and cream pitcher, and three cups and saucers.

Helen never drank tea, so there would be just enough, unless they invited Mr. Sanford.

"I might ask Robert not to take any; but he always likes it so much, when he can get it," ventured Helen.

They had dispensed with tea, as an unnecessary luxury, since their mother died; but Miss Phebe occasionally sent in a cup to Robert, when he came home at night.

"We might put on one of the big cups; but it would look funny with the little ones."

"I'll tell you what I'll do," said Miss Phebe. "If I pour the tea, I'll take one of my tea-cups. They are smaller than yours, and I'll keep it behind the tea-pot, where nobody'll notice it."

So Mr. Sanford received his invitation, and promised to be on hand at the appointed time.

"What makes you look so smiling?" asked Robert, the next morning; for his little sister could hardly keep the secret to herself any longer.

At his words she drew down her face and frowned; but her eyes soon sparkling, and Robert was not to be deprived.

"You can't foul me. There's a-going to be—"

"Stop! What is it?"

"Don't ask me, or I shall tell, and it mustn't!" said Helen, running out of the room.

Robert looked at her in astonishment. What had the child got into her head? Robert felt very old. He felt as if he never should be a free, light-hearted boy, as he used to be. He had looked forward to this Thanksgiving Day with a sad heart. It had always been one of the happiest days of the year while his mother lived; and to-day there would be nothing to mark it from other days. Their dinner must be just what it had been for weeks past—bread and soup. Good and wholesome; but still he wished he could have bought something to make it seem like Thanksgiving, perhaps. But no. He must be thankful for what they had, and not wish for impossible things. So he wondered how Helen could feel so happy, when he was so down-hearted. She did not come back; and he went off to the office, wishing he could get some place where he would have more time to study. He improved every chance he had to read such books as came in his way. But such chances were few, for he was off with the doctor most of the day or busy in the office. His great desire was to learn book-keeping. But how? Do this he pondered day and night. The doctor had it in his power to help him; but he never did. But boys like Robert are sure to make their way in the world; in spite of circumstances. His chance came at last.

As soon as Helen made sure that her brother was really gone, she went back and busied herself with getting the room ready for the grand event. The little cot bed on which she slept was folded up and put in Robert's room. She swept and dusted and made everything as clean as need be. She was dusting the last chair, when somebody knocked at the door.

It was a grocer's boy, with a package, directed to Miss Helen Gillespie. She opened it, and found six large oranges. Who could have sent them? She at once consulted with Miss Phebe. She thought it not unlikely that they were Mr. Sanford's contribution to the Thanksgiving dinner. And so it afterward proved.

Robert had said, the night before, that he should be home to dinner at the usual time—one o'clock. That was to have to himself.

It was half-past eleven. Helen had set the table with the best that the united cupboards (her own and Miss Phebe's) afforded. The oranges she had arranged in a large dish of Miss Phebe's, and they occupied the place of honor on the table. Miss Hannah had just been rolled across the hall in her easy-chair, when somebody came running up stairs.

Robert opened the door.

"Oh! oh!" screamed Helen.

"Wasn't Dr. Smith good to let me off so early?" he began, and then stopped, amazed.

"Oh! Robert, I didn't want you to come quite so soon. But isn't it splendid?"

Then, of course, there were explanations and exclamations, and Miss Phebe stayed so long to talk that she almost forgot the turkey.

To say that Robert was pleased would but feebly express his feelings. It is enough to note that Helen was fully satisfied with his demonstrations of joy.

At one o'clock Mr. Sanford appeared, and seemed as pleased to be there as the rest were to have him. He kept them all laughing with his funny stories till Miss Phebe declared she could not tell a thing she was saying. But the best of all was that he found out Robert's desire to learn book-keeping, and offered to teach him one hour every evening. And now he had the money to buy the necessary books. I don't think Robert ate much dinner after that. He was so happy he couldn't.

Mr. Sanford praised Miss Phebe's pumpkin pie, and said that the turkey tasted just as if his mother had cooked it, which was the best thing he could have said.

So every thing passed off happily, and the Thanksgiving day which Helen began so sorrowfully for Robert ended with pleasant prospects and bright hopes.

Years afterward, when Helen had become a successful teacher and Robert occupied a responsible position in a large warehouse, and they, with their old friends, Miss Phebe and Miss Hannah, were living in the little house of their own to which they had so long looked forward, Grandmother Dean's china tea-pot occupied a conspicuous place in their little library. And Helen often told her friends of the Thanksgiving day years before, when it played so prominent a part.—Mrs. Mabel E. Dowd, in N. Y. Independent.

—The Chinese are doing religious missionary work in a way that must make Christians feel uncomfortable. The people of the Chinese Province of Yunnan are, in part, Mohammedans. An imperial decree offers freedom from taxation to every Mohammedan who renounces his faith and swears by Confucius. Beautiful new idols are also to be given as rewards for proselytes.—Exchange.

RELIGIOUS AND EDUCATIONAL.

—The Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions has but $50,000 by the failure of its English bankers.

—Presbyterianism in New York is represented by the following figures: Connected with the Presbytery of New York there are thirty-six churches with 17,090 communicants, and belonging to the Presbytery of Westchester, covering the annexed part of the city beyond the Harlem River, there are five churches with 545 communicants, making a total for the city of the New York of forty-one Presbyterian churches and 17,635 communicants. The total contributions of the Presbytery of New York for the last year amounted to $818,497.

—The object of education is to teach men to think for themselves, and everyclose their own understandings freely in all questions. Every man being responsible for his thoughts and acts, no other has a right to think for him, except in a state of infancy. God gave man an understanding that he might exercise it. More than this, every man who thinks for himself is rendered more happy, as well as more prosperous. It gives him the habit of self-reliance. It accustoms him to investigate, compare, and discriminate, perhaps. But no. It enables him from that mental indolence which is as fatal to the health of the mind as physical inaction is to the body. It gives him power and energy, and proves his ability to be useful. The necessity of education is imperious.—N. Y. School Journal.

—The Rev. Henry Morgan, of Boston, has addressed an open letter to Archbishop Williams (Roman Catholic) on the subject of a gathering in which he learns is to be allowed at the coming fair in aid of the Boston cathedral. In the letter he says: "I protest against faro banks and gambling. I have a list of the chief gaming hells of Boston and the names of the proprietors. The people demand that these infamous dens be suppressed, but nothing can be done until the Catholic population is aroused to the work of reform. Dark, dark be the day when Christianity is banished! Wool went to New England if there existed laws to shield. The church is already waning. It will altogether lose its hold if it encourages gaming. Now is your opportunity. You have more reformatory power vested in you than five hundred other men seen. You Archbishop of all New England. You say 'Church lotteries shall cease,' and they cease."

—The revision of the Bible, now nearly completed, has been a far more expensive work than most persons imagine. There are fifty-two members of the committee, and these meet for five days in every three weeks. No salary is paid to any one of them, but they are allowed their traveling and hotel expenses. These, with other items, will bring the cost of the first edition of the Revised Bible as estimated by the Oxford University Company, which is responsible for it, to about $200,000, and, consequently, it has been determined to sell the first few copies at a high price. The new Bible will receive no "authorization" either from Parliament or Convocation. It has been discovered incidentally during the sittings of the committee that the present Authorized Version never was in fact authorized either ecclesiastically or politically. It made its way by its own merits, and the Revised Bible is expected to do the same.—N. Y. Evening Post.

Does Not Owe You a Living.

No, my son, the world does not owe you a living. The world does not need you, just yet; you need the world. If you can convince the world that you are necessary to its well-being, its happiness, its pleasure, its moral existence, then the world will begin to shiny you and make room for you in the body pews, with the softest cushions and the easiest footstools. But don't fall into the common error of supposing that the world owes you a living. It doesn't owe you anything of this kind. The world isn't responsible for your being. It didn't send for you: it never asked you to come here; not in no sense is it obliged to support you, now that you are here. Your living is here; a good comfortable living. Plenty to eat, plenty to wear, and an abundance of good, beautiful, hard work, ripples of laughter and sprinkles of tears, hours of happiness and moments of heartache, days of labor and nights of rest, duties to be performed and rewards to be won; it is all here, son—disappointments, struggles, success and success—the world doesn't owe you one of them: not one. You can't collect your living as you would a debt, by simply presenting your bill, or giving your lawyer the account to sue. You have to work for it, son, and work like a Dreyfus, too. When you hear a man say that the world owes him a living, and he is going to have it, make up your mind that he is just making himself a good excuse for stealing a living. The world doesn't owe any man anything, son. It will give you anything you earn, and you just look out over the world and know that all the plunder you can gather in by honest work is yours, and no more. If you can't get any, why none of it is yours, and if you can reach out and carry away more than your share of your neighbor, why that is all yours, and he has no right to wail and whine over his bad luck and want you to divide. And, my son, in all human probability, you will not want to divide. I hope you may, but it is very likely that you won't.—Burlington Hawk-Eye.

THE SENATORSHIP.

Hon. F. C. Beaman, of Adrian, Appointed to Fill the Vacancy.

Gov. Croswell has appointed the Hon. Fernando C. Beaman, of Adrian, Senator to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Senator Chandler. There will be no extra session. The appointment is received with general satisfaction. It is understood that Judge Beaman will accept the position thus tendered him without the slightest solicitation on his part.

The new Senator was born in Chester, Vermont, June 28, 1814. When Mr. Beaman was only five years old his parents removed to Franklin County, New York, where the years of the remaining child hood and youth were spent. He taught school when a mere and three summers, in the intervening time attending the Malone academy, where he had for one of his classmates Vice President Wheeler.

In 1838 Judge Beaman came to Michigan, where he has since resided. In 1850 he was elected to Congress from the 2d district, and was reelected for four successive and consecutive terms.

He is a true-hearted and incorruptible man, and a sound Republican.

Political.

The Republican majority in Pennsylvania, according to the complete canvass, is 58,675. The Quakers must have voted that time.

It is now very evident that New York state will be the battle field of the Presidential campaign of 1880. With Grant as their candidate, the Republicans would carry it, no matter whom the Democrats might nominate.

In the new Connecticut Legislature the Republicans will have eleven majority in the Senate and eighty-one in the House—ninety-two on joint ballot. And yet some claim Connecticut as a "Democratic State."

Philadelphia is nearly as strong Republican as New York is Democratic. In the recent city and county election, the former gave upwards of 27,000 Republican majority, and the latter nearly 42,000 Democratic majority.

Last Wednesday Grant landed in Chicago, and never before has that city seen such a day. The whole State of Illinois was emptied into Chicago, besides thousands from other States. His reception was grand beyond conception. The cars actually surrendered to the conquering hero.

It has been estimated that the reforms instituted by Secretary Chandler by a more careful, systematic and economical management of the Interior Department, saved the country $3,000,000 in the reduction of expenses and more efficient collections. Even the 33 unwilling committees of the Confederate Congress, which applies their noses surreptitiously else for party capital, did not offer to look into Mr. Chandler's department, for their leaders avowed a frank conviction that nothing wrong could be found there.

The election of the entire Republican State ticket in New York, with one unimportant exception, over the combined strength of both the Tammany and Tilden Democrats; in spite of the Republican scratchers and bolters, and the dissatisfaction and apathy they were able to produce on the Republican side, is now made certain by the official canvass of the several counties of the state. This destroys the last pretense of the Democrats that New York is a Democratic state. On the contrary, New York is thus proved to be a Republican state. The wreck of the Democrat hopes is complete; the defeat of the Democratic party is thorough.

GRANT IN CHICAGO.

A Tremendous Outpouring of People Assembles to Greet the Ex-President on His Arrival in that City.

The City of Chicago gave ex-President Grant on its part such a welcome as she had never before extended to any human being. In this she was ably seconded by an immense host of visitors from adjacent cities and from the counties for hundreds of miles around. The weather for the occasion could not have been propitious, and the streets were consequently with the disagreeous sensation which passes for mud in that city. But the arrival of the ex-President was fixed for one o'clock p. m., and at noon the sun was getting in a terrific. The shower was over a half hour later, and the sun shone brightly all during the remainder of the day.

So far that the streets of Chicago were crowded, or that a vast multitude were scattered along the sidewalks, or that every window of every building in the business and residence portions of the city was crowded with a mass of sightseers, or the use any of the means of multitude or locus expressive of enthusiasm would give very indefinite ideas of the immensity of the spectacle or the intensity of the crush. Added to the home visitors in the direction of railroads were 100,000 people from abroad, so that 500,000 persons upon the streets, as was claimed by the Chicago morning papers on the morning of the 14th, does not seem to be an extravagant estimate of the numbers who welcomed the distinguished ex-President.

The whole city was in a blaze with color. Every available flag, banner, streamer, bunting, pennant, standard, appropriated the National hunting, and the front of the business portion of the city was a mass of flags, banners, streamers, lines, ornaments, lines, ornaments and festoons. Numerous mottoes, such as "Welcome, Chamberlain," "Welcome, Sheridan," roses and thistles flew, floated and danced from the front of almost all the buildings in the central portion of the city.

At the proper time the arrival of Grant on the lake shore announced the approach of the head of the procession. Then there was a waiting and uncertainty whether to the city were opened up a huge universal gab, in which the people labored and cheered for all they did from his train, and, escorted by Gen. Thomas Horse and Major Harrison, entered a carriage drawn by six white horses at the head of the column, led by a squad of mounted police, and by the First regiment of Illinois cavalry, supported by the second regiment of infantry, mounted, and formed the escort of honor.

When Chicago wishes to do an event honor to a great man she puts on a procession. This she outdid herself. There were soldiers and soldiers—infantry, cavalry, artillery, and Mexican veterans, the veterans of the 1861 war, distinguished soldiers in carriages, members of the Society of the Armies of the Tennessee, Cumberland and Potomac, Governors of Native Judges of Courts, civil authorities, the Post Department, thousand soldiers, Pack Commissioners, and an immense number of wagons, each with a large banner and gold, and waving flags, who vigorously seized the opportunity to do honor to the man who had done so much for them. The procession in the procession consisted of about 20,000 men, and in fair, being fully three hours in passing a given point.

When the carriage containing the ex-President came into the best quarters, the Palmer House, he disembarked, and took position on a platform in front of the building, where he and Sheridan stood and bowed to the people.

Throughout the people of Chicago reception is you the most remarkable of America's citizens. They watched him for the last thirty months, journeying around the world, they knew when he received the keys of honors heretofore conferred only upon those of exalted rank; and, yet, you had for no other passport than that you were an American citizen, and that your rulers and their people delighted to honor you; and in honoring you they honored no more upon your country. This possible, sir, now that the war clouds and banks, are dormant of brightening on a brilliant complexion. You can now go home to your country, a committee of five hundred gentlemen to receive you here in the heart of the city, and to welcome you to the homes and to the hearts of our people. I am the humble chairman of that committee, deserves the pleasing duty of greeting a citizen, what hosts would be warmly welcome, who for many years has been a country of the eyes of the whole civilized people.

Eighteen years and two months ago, a people—for State had adopted the role of neutrality in the impending struggle—were there. Commenced. Our statesmen were deeply troubled, and knew not how to solve the problem of that neutrality. You, sir, in the meantime, were engaged in your own country, with your sword on the Gordian knot, and the fresh-born daughter of the Constitution, and you were interested in her devotion to the Union, and to the Hebrew Tree. You could not be neutral. You were writing your name in blood at Belmont, Donelson, Shiloh, Vicksburg, Chattanooga, Missionary Ridge, and Atlanta. You were not neutral, you threw your regimental flag, your battle-scarred banner,

BYRON SEE,
County Treasurer.

Politic and Impolitic.

Thurlow says Grant could surely carry New York.

Some of the Mississippi papers take kindly to Horatio Seymour again.

Ex-governors Clifford, Rice, and Bullwell of Massachusetts go in for Grant.

Indiana McDonald thinks Kelly is a power to be conciliated and not contested.

Alex Stephens will not deny his preference for Grant, and says the country could go a great deal further and fare a great deal worse.

Senator Kernan objects to a state convention of New York Democrats for the reorganization of the party. It is, unless trouble, he thinks.

One Hutchins, of the Washington Post, says he is going to New Hampshire to publish the recognized organ of the Hopperheads of that state.

Ex-governor James E. English of Connecticut, is another hint for the Democrats of 1880; and Senator Eaton feels as if English was trampling on pre-empted ground.

The New York Express says of its brother Democrat of the Louisville Journal that he is an exuberant lunatic, who seems to mistake the Democratic party for an asylum for the insane.

The Louisville Journal says that if Kelly and his followers are not treated as outlaws the Democratic party may as well be abandoned. If it can be any more abandoned than it is, the world would like to see it done.

It is said of Senator Chandler as a business man, that, when in 1837 nearly every merchant in Michigan failed, he, too, had difficulty in making his collections and could not see his way clear to the settlement of his own liabilities. He made a statement of his affairs, and taking what money he could raise, went to New York and proposed to his creditors to make an assignment. His principal creditor said to him: "You are too straightforward a man and too honest and enterprising a merchant to go under. You can take your own time for payment, and we will furnish you with a new stock of goods." The young merchant accepted the extention of time, and going home went to work again and was soon able to pay all his debts in full.

In a few words—the brigadiers will cease to furnish Republican campaign thunder in the next session of Congress, or to the Solid South.

State Certificates for Teachers.

LANSING, October 24, 1879.

States certificates are granted to teachers of approved qualifications, in accordance with section 1, act No. 231, laws of 1879, which reads as follows:

"The People of the State of Michigan enact, That the State Board of Education shall hold stated meetings, at which they shall examine, and may grant State certificates of qualification, to such teachers as may, upon a thorough and critical examination, be found to possess eminent scholarship and professional ability, and shall furnish satisfactory evidence of good moral character. Said certificate shall be signed by the President and the Secretary of the Board and impressed with the seal thereof; and shall entitle the holder to teach in any of the schools of the State, without further examination, and shall be valid for the term of ten years, unless revoked by said Board. Each applicant for examination shall on making application, pay to the Secretary $5 as an examination fee."

The following rules will guide the Board in carrying out the provisions of this law:

1. There will be two grades of certificates, to be denominated, respectively, as first grade and second grade.

2. Certificates of the first grade will be granted only to those who may be invited to make application for the same.

3. Only such persons will be invited to apply for a certificate of the first grade as are known by the Board to be eminent as scholars, and successful educators of large and varied experience in the public schools of the State, and who are now engaged in that work. Not more than fifteen will be invited to become applicants for this grade of certificates prior to January 1, 1881, and the number invited during any year subsequent to that date shall not exceed five. Each applicant will be required to read before the Board a thesis upon some educational topic, and deposit the same with the board.

4. Applicants for certificates of the second grade must comply with the following conditions:

a. They must furnish satisfactory evidence of good moral character.

b. They must furnish satisfactory evidence of having taught not less than thirty months with decided success, at least ten months of which shall have been in this State.

c. They must pass a very thorough examination in orthography, penmanship, reading, arithmetic, grammar, geography, United States history, algebra, plane geometry, school law of Michigan, and the theory and art of teaching.

d. They must pass a satisfactory examination in natural philosophy, physical geography, anatomy and physiology, botany, zoology, astronomy, chemistry, general history, and geology.

Written testimonials from responsible persons will be required as evidence of good moral character.

In respect to length of time taught, the statement of the applicant, giving time, place and kind of school will be sufficient.

Written testimonials from employers will be required as to success in teaching. The testimony upon this point must be clear and explicit.

The application, accompanied with the examination fee, together with satisfactory evidence relative to character, length of time taught, and success in teaching, must be furnished at least twenty days before the first day of the examination. Any one whose credentials are unsatisfactory will be promptly informed of that fact, and thereby save the expense of attendance upon examination.

Papers forwarded as testimonials must in all cases be original. When copies are sent for filing in the office, the originals will be returned, but not otherwise.

Both the oral and written methods of examination will be employed. A definite time will be allowed to each topic, varying with the nature of the subject and the number and character of the questions proposed.

Each examination will continue three days, and applicants for a second grade certificate must be in attendance through the entire examination. Applicants for the first grade certificate must be in attendance the last day of the examination.

No announcements of the results can be made at the immediate close of the examination. The careful examination of papers written and the filling out of certificates, will require several day's time.

A State certificate entitles the holder to teach in any school district in the state without further examination, and is valid for ten years, provided the personal and professional reputation of the holder remains unblemished.

It is intended by the State Board of Education that this certificate shall be granted to those only who, by their broad culture and successful experience in educational work has given character and dignity to the profession in the State.

Examinations will be held at Lansing during the current school year as follows:

Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Dec. 31, Jan. 1 and 2.

Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, March 30, 31 and April 1.

Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, June 29, 30 and July 1.

Examinations will begin each day at 9 o'clock a. m.

If circumstances make additional examinations desirable due notice of the same will be given through the press.

All communications should be addressed to the Secretary of the State Board of Education, Lansing, Mich.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Domestic.

A STRIKE of the cattle butchers, near Chicago, was ended on the 8th by an agreement on the part of the employers to advance the wages of their butchers and laborers twenty-five cents per day, as demanded. The percentage value had been about $1.50 per day for common, and from $2 to $4.00 for skilled, laborers.

A PHILADELPHIA special of the 8th says: "In spite of the high prices and steadiness of the English market there has been a sharp advance in steel rails during the past week, from fifty-five to fifty-six dollars per ton to sixty dollars, and even as high as $70 to $80 dollars, the latter price being paid for 10,000 tons Western delivery in the spring of 1880. Roads that might have bought last week at the lower figure consider themselves fortunate in securing contracts this week at sixty dollars for April delivery, and the market would be full of buyers at that price."

THE silver coin in the Government Treasury vaults in Washington on the 15th amounted to over $82,033,650, of which $32,-540,000 were in standard silver dollars.

THE grain trade, at a meeting in New York on the 10th, decided to rescind the rule referring to the casus fœderis, and a committee was appointed to confer with the Board of Managers of the Produce Exchange as to the advisability of continuing the old system of weighing and measuring grain.

AT New York City on the 10th the Anti-Tax Treasurer purchased the whole of $10,000,000 of six per cent. Government bonds of July, 1881, which he had been authorized by the Secretary of the Treasury to buy at 108.

THE imports of specie at New York during the week ending on the 8th amounted to $1,376,000. These included $1,000,000 dollars in gold carried there on the 13th from Europe.

A NOVEL case has recently been tried before the Superior Court of Springfield, Mass., involving the right of ecclesiastical discipline to the extent of injuring an excommunicated man's business. Joseph Parker, a thirty-two year old Frenchman, was a member of the Holy Name Society, a French Catholic organization, and on charges, claiming that the priest had, after excommunicating him, ruined his business by undue exercise of pastoral authority. The case was left in charge to the jury, said the law of the country does not allow ecclesiastical interference with a man's business after he has been excommunicated from a church, which is the extent of the power parliament ecclesiastical authority can inflict, nor is ecclesiastical authority allowed to interfere with any business after it has from getting his patronage to that business. If defendant only forbade communion of plaintiff from being brought to church in plaintiff's hack, he did not exceed his ecclesiastical authority; but if after the excommunication of Parker he prevented the employment of his hackmen for other than church purposes, then plaintiff is entitled to a verdict, and the damage must not be limited to the mere sum of custom entailed, but to all losses which have occurred therefrom. The jury evidently thought from the charge given on the trial that the plaintiff's business had been seriously injured by undue and unwarranted interference on the part of the defendant, who had forbidden his communicants to patronize the plaintiff's hacks under any circumstances, and hence they brought in a verdict for Parker for $3,433.

MRS. MARGARET MYERS, of Memphis, Tenn., committed suicide the other day, by pouring kerosene oil over her clothes and then setting them on fire. She stated before her death that she had been invegled into a marriage with a man who had practiced robbed and deserted herself and children.

IN Lancaster County, S. C., a few nights ago, a white woman named Mrs. James Adams cut the throats of her five children, set fire to her own clothing, and was burned to death. It is supposed she was insane.

A SUCCESSFUL strike has recently occurred on the Conglorenem at Hudson, Mass., the employes yielding to the demands of the workmen.

A LABOR CONVENTION of citizens' meeting was held in Cincinnati on the night of the 11th to devise means to aid the suffering people of Ireland. Speeches were made denouncing as false Lord Beaconsfield's statement that Ireland had never appealed to the Government of Great Britain in vain.

A DISTILLERY fight took place on the 10th at Sandusky Mountain Station, a suburb of El Paso, Texas, in the State of Chihuahua, Mexico, between a large band of Indians, about two hundred and fifty in all, of fifty men from Cochise, N. M., thirty-seven of whom were fight lasted all day.

EDWARD C. PALMER, late President of the Louisiana Savings Bank, was arraigned in New Orleans on the 10th on two indictments by the Grand Jury, one charging him with embezzlement in June, 1878, of $47,497 in notes belonging to the bank of depositors thereon, and the other with publishing false reports and willfully concealing facts as to the condition of the bank, to deceive the public. He was imprisoned to default of $40,000 bonds.

GENERAL HAZEN, of the Indian Peace Commission, reached Los Pinos Agency on the 13th. General Adams arrived there three or four days earlier. The hostile chiefs, with the exception of Jack, were there and willing to surrender. Jack had persistently refused to come to the agency and insists the Commission. It has been determined almost beyond doubt that he led the hostiles in the Thornburgh fight. Quray-tail, in a conference on the 11th, said the hostiles had asked Ouray for mercy.

POSTMASTER-GENERAL KEY has arrived at the conclusion that all lottery companies and lotteries agents are doing a fraudulent business within the purview of his statutory powers concerning "schemes to defraud the public," and on the 13th he commenced the issuance of special orders to postmasters forbidding them to pay any postal money-order or to deliver any registered letter addressed to persons named in the orders as being concerned in the lottery business. Such letters are to be stamped "fraudulent," and to be returned, as are also moneyorders, to the senders. All ordinary mail matter addressed to names that are known to be fictitious are to be sent to the Dead Letter Office.

WHILE a fire was in progress on the second floor of a tenement house on Canon street, New York City, early on the morning of the 14th, Mary Baleski, who occupied apartments on the third floor, leaped from a window to the street and was fatally injured. Joseph Bozarie, who lived on the fourth floor, also threw himself from a window and was killed. His entire family, consisting of wife, two children and mother-in-law, were suffocated.

TWO MEN (Charles Drews and Frank Ingstebber) were hanged at Lebanon, Pa., on the 14th, for the murder of Joseph Baker at Indiantown Gap, in December last. On the same day a young man named Myers Abell was hanged at Independence, N. Y., for the murder of a young girl named May Richards, in June last. Both made a full confession of his brutal and fiendish crime.

THE schooner C. G. Hreel foundered in a squall on Lake Erie on the afternoon of the 15th, and of the eight men on board only two were saved.

BY a terrific boiler explosion in a shingle mill near East Saginaw, Mich., on the afternoon of the 16th, three men were fatally and one slightly injured.

Personal and Political.

THERE is to be a meeting of the National Republican Executive Committee in Washington on the 27th of December, for the purpose of electing a Chairman in the place of Senator Chandler, deceased, and also to determine the place of holding the next Republican Convention.

RICHARD SCHELL, the noted New York Democratic politician, died in that city on the 10th, after a three weeks' illness.

THE wife of Senator David Davis, of Illinois, died at her old home, in Rockbridge, Mass., on the night of the 9th. She had been in poor health for many years.

REAR ADMIRAL AUGUSTUS R. KIP, one of the United States Navy, died at his residence in Baltimore on the 10th, aged seventy-two years.

THE District of Columbia Board of School Trustees recently had before them the question of the application of Mrs. Belva A. Lockwood and six other women for placing a woman on the School Board. A report was finally adopted admitting that there is no legal obstacle to women serving as members of the District School Boards, but basing the ground that there are grave objections to it as a matter of policy, and that therefore the application should be refused.

CHARLES H. VORHIS, member of Congress from the Fifth District of New Jersey, was examined at Paterson on the 13th by a United States Deputy Marshal on a charge of obstructing from the First National Bank of Hackensack, one of which he was President, and collateral sufficient to secure a private loan. The affidavit was made by Cashier Bower and [illegible] De Groot.

GENERAL GRANT received the members of the Army of the Tennessee, the veterans, the members of different posts of the Grand Army of the Republic and citizens generally at the Palmer House in Chicago on the 13th. In the evening he was duly banqueted. After the cloth was removed there were speeches from Generals Sherman, Grant, Logan, Sheridan, Schofield, Hancock, Crawford, Pope, Colonel Robert J. Ingersoll, Admiral Stevens, Leonard Swett, Emory Andrews, and a humorous address on "Retiring," by Mark Twain." The banquet was a brilliant affair.

THE Governor of Michigan on the 10th appointed Hon. Fernando C. Beaman Probate Judge of Leawee County, to succeed the late Zachariah Chandler in the United States Senate.

THE New York Tribune of the 14th says exact results had been received from forty-five out of 4,331 counties, which would change the election of the entire Republican State ticket except Secretary of State and Surveyor. The majorities were estimated as follows: Hoskins, for Lieutenant-Governor, 2,150; Carr, Secretary of State, 2,900; Wadsworth, Comptroller, 3,100; Ward, Attorney-General, 2,600; Wendell, Treasurer, 1,900; Seymour (Dem.), Engineer and Surveyor, 3,000. Cornell's plurality for Governor would reach nearly 40,000.

Foreign.

THE London Standard's correspondent at Constantinople reported on the 9th that the Director of the Press had ordered Turkish newspapers to desist from attacking England, under penalty of suppression.

TEN Italians at Williams' Lake, British Columbia, are reported starving. Their chief has had translated for publication a pathetic appeal to Her Majesty, reciting how they have been deprived of their lands and means of subsistence by the whites, and asking relief, saying his young men will not starve in peace.

ACCORDING to Vienna dispatches of the 10th the oft-reported resignation of Prince Gortschakoff, the Russian Premier, has become an accomplished fact at last. It was stated that the letters would administer the Foreign Department until a successor to the Prince was appointed.

IN a late dispatch to the State Department Mr. Bailey, United States Consul at Shanghai, China, reports that the cotton crop in that country will not be more than half the average yield. The Consul at Ghesa reports that the total crop of Russia will fall far short of the usual harvest.

THE Irish Local Government Board has made a special report respecting the state of affairs in Ireland. The report says the potato crop is everywhere defective and diseased, and that, connected with the absence of peat fuel, owing to rain, is regarded as the leading cause of distress, which is expected to be considerably during the next spring. Pauperism is greatly increased, especially in Ulster.

ANNOUNCEMENT was made from Paris on the 11th of the death, at Constantine, of Abdel-Kader, the famous Algerine chieftain. He was seventy-two years old.

ACCORDING to financial telegrams of the 11th the cattle plague was spreading virulently in Meddaria.

GREAT agitation prevailed in Bosnia on the 10th and 11th, and was caused by fears of a rising against the Austrians. The Christians and Mussulmans were making common cause against the Austrians.

A BERLIN telegram of the 11th says the editors of all the principal newspapers in St. Petersburg have been summoned separately to the Press Bureau of the Ministry of the Interior, and instructed with reference to the conduct of their respective papers. They were informed that fresh restrictions had been received from Livadia that articles in the St. Petersburg press interested with the imperial policy, and whether they emanate or continue in the same strain. Neither Germany nor Austro-Hungary, nor the relations of Russia with either of these two powers, nor France, must be discussed. England might be discussed, but judiciously. These rules would be contained until the Emperor's return to St. Petersburg, a month hence.

AN autograph letter of the Czar was published on the 11th in which he thanks the old Count Schouvaloff as Ambassador to England, and conferring upon him the order of St. Vladimir, in recognition of his public services. Schouvaloff will remain a member of the Council of the Empire.

THE Liverpool Cotton Trade Journal, with one hundred and twenty passengers, sailed for Texas. There are many farmers among them, some with families, and a number of merchants.

A NOTIFICATION has been received at the Post-Office Department in Washington that the Russian Government has become a member of the Universal Postal Union, to date from the 1st of next January.

ACCORDING to Constantinople dispatches of the 12th the Porte had demanded of the British Government an explanation of the movements of the British fleet in Turkish waters. It was reported that a cordial understanding had been reached between Russia and Turkey, and that in the event of trouble with Great Britain, the Czar would be found with the Ottomans.

AN explosion of fire-damp occurred in the Shorncheath colliery, near Wolverhampton, Eng., on the 13th. Up to the morning of the 14th 41 corpses had been recovered.

AT Leeds, Eng., on the 14th, Princess Anna Gagarin, of Russia, was married by Archbishop Vaughan to Lord Edward Fitzalan Howard, brother of the Duke of Norfolk. The ceremony was performed in the Roman Catholic Church, and was attended by a large number of the nobility.

THE Bishop of Manchester, preaching recently at Blackburn, England, remarked that since there were only 43,500 churches in England, while there were about 53,000 clergymen, there must always be a large number of unbeneficed clergy, and of the 18,000 clergymen without benefices more than a thousand had served as curates for fifteen years and upwards, many would never be promoted, though they did their duty faithfully and diligently.

A NOVEL phase of the labor question has been developed in the South Carolina cotton fields. The colored people in one section held an excited meeting, extending through a recent Saturday night and Sunday, and adopted resolutions binding themselves, their wives and children, not to pick cotton for less than fifty cents per hundred pounds, under penalty of a whipping—a member of the organization to apply the lash.

NEW machinery for the spinning of yarn directly from the seed cotton promises to work a revolution in the cotton business.

National Finances.

WASHINGTON, November 13.

The report of James G. Gulliss, Treasurer of the United States, will show that the total net receipts for the fiscal year 1879 was $273,-437,384. The total net expenditures for 1879 were $257,950,000, leaving a net balance of funds of $6,979,393. There were received from customs during the year $137,250,000, from internal revenue $112,961,000, from bonds $20,000,000, from miscellaneous sources, $2,000,000. A comparison of the receipts from all sources for the fiscal years 1879 and 1878 shows the following result: There was a decrease in 1879 of the revenue from duties of $19,-000,000. From all other sources there was an increase of $19,000,000. The increase in 1879 over 1878 from customs was $7,675,367; from internal revenue, $2,000,000, and from miscellaneous sources, $6,158,911. The total net increase of receipts in 1879 over 1878 was $16,083,533. On the other hand, there was an increase in the net expenditures in 1879 over 1878 of $29,580,566. Of this increase, $5,827,054 is attributable to the interest on the public debt. The remainder of the increase arises from the civil establishment and in the miscellaneous expenditures.

The operations in bonds during the fiscal year 1879 were very large. There was issued, in funded loan certificates, gold, $95,000,000; new loan, refunding certificates, and United States notes, $162,315,350. There was redeemed, from the same sources, $266,447,850, making a net decrease in the net outstanding debt of $90,-961,850.

The number of National Banks which had failures, and the number of failures	7,596

Actual number in voluntary liquidation June 30, 1879	70
Number of banks doing business June 30, 1878	3,620
Total	3,627

The United States Treasury held in trust for National Banks, on June 30, 1879, as security for circulation and public deposits, a total of $236,000,000 of United States bonds, against $214,000,000 of United States currency, and of public deposits $14,000,000 in United States bonds. The National Banks for the last fiscal year annexed to their circulation $6,500 chargeable without limitation, and $8,500 secured by bonds. The amount of United States bonds received by purchase, conversion and redemption was $182,-288,950.

The Dead-Letter Office.

WASHINGTON, November 14.

The report of Mr. E. J. Dallas, Chief of the Dead-Letter Office of the Post-Office Department, shows that 4,042,-000 letters, 1,876,000 contained drafts, checks, etc., to the value of $1,105,782; 47,797 contained postage stamps of the value of $2,357, and 52,000 contained other papers representing a monetary value of 21,024 letters containing photographs, and 26,306 contained articles of all descriptions.

The efficiency of the system of registered letters is shown by the fact that, out of 5,292,243 registered letters sent in last year, but 2,193 found their way to the Dead-Letter Office, and of these all but 1 found their way finally to their owners.

The following is a statement showing the amount of fees collected at the leading post-offices of the country on registered mail matter for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, placed in comparison with the receipts of the previous fiscal year, and also the percentage of increase:

Postoffice.	Fiscal yr. 1878.	Fiscal yr. 1879.	Percentage of increase.

MECHANICAL AND SCIENTIFIC.

—Tea is as often adulterated as wine, and the detection of the spurious kind of tea is as difficult as in the case of wine. Good tea should contain thirty per cent. of extractive matter soluble in water, 7.5 per cent. of tannin, not more than 6.4 per cent. of ash, and no less than two per cent. of ash soluble in water.

—Professor Baird, of the United States Fish Commission, will soon send to the Western States five German carp to be propagated there. The fish have been known to grow in two years so large as to weigh eight or ten pounds. They will do well in very shallow water. At St. Petersburg they are kept in ponds of water not more than fifteen feet deep, and are fed like chickens, and are excellent food. They do not spawn until three years old, but then become very prolific.—N. Y. Evening Post.

A new invention has been tried with success in Leeds in the utilization of the power generated in stopping street-cars for the purpose of restarting them, and thus saving the extra expenditure of fuel. The contrivance is a coiled spring, which is wound up by the stopping of the car, and which, when the brake is released, is made to impart motion. It gets two or as assistance to horses up a street grade, but power is also required in a preceding downgrade and also forward in the spring until the energy is required.

Mr. Bechamp read a paper before the French Academy of Sciences on the presence of alcohol in animal bodies. He found in the oil-grains of horsechesnuts for ten minutes in boiling water to coagulate the surface, and the liquid to be placed in a vessel and then examined after remaining there a month. About one-eighth grain of alcohol was got from the lubertine, and one-grain of salts (sodium, butyrate, etc.,) of soda. About four kilograms left to itself for four days gave less alcohol. That putrefaction is essentially similar to fermentation. He also found alcohol in various healthy tissues, brain, muscles, liver.

A new antiseptic is described by the Journal of Chemistry. It is a double salt of borate of potassium and sodium, and is said to be prepared by taking equal portions of chloride of potassium, nitrate of sodium, and finely powdered borax and mixing the whole in a porcelain dish. The mixture is then heated until it fuses, some purple fume everything in this world. I wonder if they are so lucky in that? I am very gravely he would look at me if he were in Rome the express, such a frivolous thought. He has a sweet face; but how kindly he can look out of it. Only the other night when I burned my arm at the candy-pulling, he dressed it as carefully as a mamma's darling. So kind and sorry that what with his sympathy and the hot, I could hardly keep back the tears. He seems already a dear friend one of life's hardest battles. Texas. There are many farmers among them, some with families, and a number of merchants.

THE SENTINEL.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor and Proprietor.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

GIVING THANKS.

The golden glow of autumn days
Has almost run its course,
And on the dreary bushes and trees
The first shivers of November
Until loose leaves are through with their reviewed
Of all their leafy glory.
As thus the seasons do their round
Repeat the endless story.

The earth hath yielded up her fruits
To those the sons of men,
And peace and plenty smile to see the Dove
Of liberty replenishing and weighing
In snowdrift tones, as pastime broad,
In heaven to take and rove.
The thousand graceful leaves unite
To bless the gracious giver.

Thanksgiving for the harvest full,
The orchard's golden treasures,
The purple plum, the golden corn,
And all the joys and pleasures
And hearts—which hold manifold,
That make life worth the living.
For these and all the gifts of God
Join in a glad Thanksgiving.

The bloody past, whose weight of years
With fresh graves deepens daily,
Are seared as all fatal beast
With scars of battle fields.
The father grieves for every thanks
Let mingle with the buried years,
All strifes forgotten, and
All heartaches forth his aged hands
Of holy benedictions.

Thus friends, long sundered, reunite,
Become each other's pleasures.
The answers of a fellowship
And full again the measure
Of youth and love and happiness,
As in the days gone by.
Then shall the world be new, and life was new,
And all the days were golden.

Thanks to the Heavenly Powers, then,
Whose all-embracing arms
Works out, through all the buried years,
Our blessed destinies.
And to the land whose gracious gifts
Make life so rich and beautiful
Who dwells above, whose name is Love,
Be endless Thanksgiving.

POLLY'S PUMPKIN PIES.

Great golden pumpkins, yellow enough to be apples of the Hesperides, were lying about the kitchen floor, and Polly at the kitchen table was making pumpkin pies.

Her thoughts were in this wise, as she measured out the ingredients: "One and one-half pounds of brown sugar, one-half pound of butter, two quarts of cream—no, one quart. So Melissa's call this morning was to invite me to tea, some people have everything in this world. I wonder if they see so lucky it is? Such a gravely he would look at me if he were in Rome the express, such a frivolous thought. He has a sweet face; but how kindly he can look out of it. So kind and sorry that what with his sympathy and the hot, I could hardly keep back the tears. He seems already a dear friend one of life's hardest battles. Texas. THE Bishop of Manchester, preaching recently at Blackburn, England, remarked that since there were only 43,500 churches in England, while there were about 53,000 clergymen, there must always be a large number of unbeneficed clergy, and of the 18,000 clergymen without benefices more than a thousand had served as curates for fifteen years and upwards, many would never be promoted, though they did their duty faithfully and diligently.

A NOVEL phase of the labor question has been developed in the South Carolina cotton fields. The colored people in one section held an excited meeting, extending through a recent Saturday night and Sunday, and adopted resolutions binding themselves, their wives and children, not to pick cotton for less than fifty cents per hundred pounds, under penalty of a whipping—a member of the organization to apply the lash.

NEW machinery for the spinning of yarn directly from the seed cotton promises to work a revolution in the cotton business.

A new invention has been tried with success in Leeds in the utilization of the power generated in stopping street-cars for the purpose of restarting them, and thus saving the extra expenditure of fuel. The contrivance is a coiled spring, which is wound up by the stopping of the car, and which, when the brake is released, is made to impart motion. It gets two or as assistance to horses up a street grade, but power is also required in a preceding downgrade and also forward in the spring until the energy is required.

Mr. Bechamp read a paper before the French Academy of Sciences on the presence of alcohol in animal bodies. He found in the oil-grains of horsechesnuts for ten minutes in boiling water to coagulate the surface, and the liquid to be placed in a vessel and then examined after remaining there a month. About one-eighth grain of alcohol was got from the lubertine, and one-grain of salts (sodium, butyrate, etc.,) of soda. About four kilograms left to itself for four days gave less alcohol. That putrefaction is essentially similar to fermentation. He also found alcohol in various healthy tissues, brain, muscles, liver.

Other Disasters.

Last Evening's Dispatch to Detroit Post and Tribune.

This port has again been the scene of disaster in shipping, and of wonders in the magnitude. The losses are all the greater owing to the heavy gale except in one instance, as will appear. Lake men except the wind began to blow in great force and has continued ever since. Of course after such a night there was an extensive wreck to vessel property, and the full list cannot be had to-night. The number of vessels ashore and sunk in the harbor and on the beach will exceed 200 vessels in the aggregate. They vary in size, all of them with heavy cargoes making them every valuable, as any one and scanning them steadily and making near distinction almost a certain fi

There were crowds on the beach looks, and through the grey dim light and the raindrops were in full bloom and well sheltered, with inner boat chairs placed upon current calculations, they caused the entrance by a length, and were too far in to escape. They were the large barge C. O. B., and the schoon. Elm City. They were thrown so far on shore that there was little danger to life, and the crews came in shore when they pleased, though the surf was still mid boisterous. At daylight there were fully a dozen ships of all kinds in sight and apparently looking for the harbor. An hour after with the splendid steam barge E. B. Ward, Thompson of Muskegon came with in tow towing two barges all loaded with lumber, having started for Chicago late last evening, and not getting the danger up very far on the lake. The steam barge Todd got safe came in on her return trip to Whitehall, with the large schooner, Sources of Chicago, laden with ore from Lake Superior, and several smaller craft. The Milwaukee steamer Minneapolis and Nelson had safely rounded in port.

About 5 o'clock the Ellis came. Mystic, owned by N. Rouse of this city, put more on the entrance and went on the beach [illegible] the C. O. B. and Elm City. A few passengers have the schooner Mason Dell took the chance and left the wreck remain. The wind was absolutely fearful. How all saw those ships up in the morning [illegible] waves, and appear to toss them as a whole. Again all these vessels in an instant. Capt. Wellman, who brought the Presto safely in this morning, says that he has sailed the lakes 23 years and he has no recollection of seeing a more angry and dangerous sea than there was last morning. The Boss Belle, sunk by the lower gate early in the morning, was also [illegible] on the end of the pier or just outside, when a tremendous wave thrown her over and into the entrance proper to the mouth. Miller and the crew.

At 2:30 o'clock last evening the propeller Gen. H. E. Paine left Chicago for this port. It was mild in the river, and the lake was in a dead calm. Before midnight she came into the breeze, and long before daylight into the gale and rough sea. The course was held regular and very good time made. About 8 o'clock her barlow was lighted, and half an hour later the propeller was nicely headed in, with a sea on that tossed her about as if she were a feather. But her position was good, her course correct, and will, steam sufficient to take her through, if not over, any waves that could be formed. But she struck on the sand bar. She struck several times. The [illegible] could feel that her hull was being shore in. The wheelsman could feel the floor of the pilothouse moving and rise [illegible] under his feet. They all knew that the Paine was aground, but she kept right along, slowly, it is true, but she kept the course. The waves would lift her almost out of the water. The engineer were at work, and though in chaos as the waves pounded she would [illegible] still she painted right where she was going and steaming. Had the lake been [illegible] there would have been a good seven feet of clear water under her keel, but she got inside the piers, ground the sands just a little as she came to calmer water, and in two lengths from the entrance sank. She was breaking to pieces fast, as she came in, and in 30 minutes after she arrived all her upper works were broken to fragments and floated on the water. The wind was very strong up the river, and the operations of the floating steamers [illegible] up to the waves and ships. Every [illegible] was saved by the Life Saving crew. On board were Thomas Doherty, captain; [illegible] Doherty, mate; Wm. H. Dash, [illegible]; Wm. Berge, second engineer; [illegible] Mollard and John Haggerty, [illegible], Chas. Rosenkrantz, steward, and his wife and two children; ten firemen. The Gen. H. E. Paine was a government dispatch boat on the Carolina coast during the years 1867-8 and at Newport News and the James river during 1861. After the war she was sold and brought around to the upper lakes, and was owned by Kirby, Furlong & Co., of this city. She was one of the fastest propellers the government had in the service, was built regardless of expense, every spike being brass. The machinery was the very best that could be obtained, and in game respects unlike any other ever put to sea. She could make 17 miles an hour in smooth water. Her engine and boilers will be raised and put in shape to-day.

THE SCHOONER.

The big Schooner, of Sydenhamg, left Cape Vincent on Monday last with four hundred thousand shingles, and eight cords of wood for Buffalo. Rising the night a gale on Lake Ontario was encountered, and three tugs, and all of the small craft and steamers were lost. Orders came only six persons were saved—twenty-two lost.

DISASTER AT EL RAPIDS.

Grand Traverse Herald.

The schooner Two Pastors, Capt. Simmel Moore, has gone to the bottom, about half a mile from Elk Rapids. Her spars and sails is all that can be seen. There is one man frozen to the rigging close to the water all covered with ice. Two up on the cross trees, and a woman and man on top of the cabin. Two sailors have got ashore; they got the yawl boat large and floated until some small sails set to them from shore; their clothes were frozen stiff. Schooner had loaded 200 tons iron for Buffalo and left the dock last night.

Later—Latest dispatches say five more have been got off the wreck, all with legs and feet frozen stiff. Only one more remained in the rigging and the boat had returned for him.

LATER NEWS.

The following disasters are the latest reported:

The tug Clark capsized and sunk above Detroit—one life lost.

Schooner Mercury ashore at Pentwater.

THE SENATORSHIP.

Judge Beaman Declines, and the Governor appoints ex-Gov. Baldwin

It is announced that Judge Beaman has declined the appointment recently tendered him by the Governor, because his health is such as renders it unlikely that he would be physically able to discharge the duties of the position. Governor Croswell has tendered the appointment to the Hon. Henry P. Baldwin, a man of fine ability and sterling Republicanism, who served Michigan well as her Governor for two consecutive terms from 1868 to 1872, and will serve her well again in the Senate of the United States. The new appointment gives general satisfaction. Senator Baldwin has ere this departed for Washington, accompanied by his family.

ELECTRICAL SCIENCE.—The first meeting of the Charlevoix Historical Society was held Monday evening the 24th, at the SENTINEL editorial room, and a permanent organization effected. The Society starts out with a membership of eighteen, and the following are the officers:

President—Hon. John S. Dixon.
Vice President—H. Prosser.
Secretary—Willard A. Smith.
Treasurer—E. W. Mayne.
Librarian—A. E. Mason.

The object of the society is mutual benefit in the study of history, and to this end the funds of the society will be principally devoted to the purchase of Historical works. It is the intention of the society to provide a lecture once in each month, and Hon. J. S. Dixon has been invited to deliver one on the last Monday in December. The admission fee to the association is one dollar.

More new jewelry at Crouter's Drug Store.

A full line of stationery at the postoffice. Also photograph albums, autograph albums, books for the children, slates, paints, and most everything else.

THE Petoskey Record understands that the Charlevoix Historical Society was organized for the exclusive and noble purpose of perpetuating the Mormon history of this region. Wrong, neighbor. We post up Uden contracts our powers, the whole township lay or none is ours." We propose to die right down to the bottom of this historical business, and beat the endeavors of the Democrat's articles on "Ancient History."

—J. Milo Eaton left yesterday for Saginaw, and other points.

—J. C. Glenn and W. F. Empey, of East Jordan, called on us Saturday.

—Mr. Schuler, of Saugatuck, is again in town. Mr. Schuler intends going out shopping material here this winter.

Boots cut shoes at old prices at Byron See's.

CHARLEVOIX COUNCIL.—At the meeting of the Village Council on Saturday evening, the matter of establishing a street on the north side from Bridge street to the foot of Pine Lake, below the terrace, was referred to the Committee on Streets and sidewalks, with instructions to report at next meeting. A remonstrance against the establishment of said street was presented.

The bills of John Nichols of $72.45 for sidewalk lumber, etc., and of J. Milo Eaton of $7.25 for running, were allowed.

MARINE.—The steamer Nellie Booth is still running.

The snow Supply has been stripped and painted.

The schooner Nellie Hammond is reported lost.

—The steam lighter Petrie will fit up here this winter.

—The old schooner Emma has been sold to Manistee parties.

—Capt. Blair is looking up timber for that new vessel which is to be built here this winter.

—The schooners Little Georgie and Rose cleared Sunday morning, but the Chapman and Content are yet in port as we go to press. With the departure of these vessels navigation may be considered practically closed for this port.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.—In this issue will be found the new advertisement of Messrs. Fisher & Iverson, who have just opened a stock of ladies' furnishing goods on Bridge street. They have a neatly fitted up store, and an excellent assortment of goods. We bespeak for them a liberal trade.

—J. C. Glenn, of East Jordan, commonly known as the "head of the Arm" on Saturday left an extensive order for job work, and the copy for his advertisement which appears in this issue. People who patronize the printer ought to succeed, and with the reputation which Mr. Glenn has for honest dealing, he is sure to succeed.

—R. G. Hopp, who lately established a blacksmith shop in this village has set up settlement in this issue. Mr. Hipp is a skilled workman, and is already building up a good business.

On the 15th inst., ten kegs of beer were thrown overboard from the propeller Hurd, while between Waugoshance and Skilligalee lights. The reel was waxes washed a large quantity of it ashore at Grass Island, where some of it was taken from the beach and locked up for safe keeping by white residents of the place. Much of it was captured by Indians, who, under its stimulating influence, inaugurated the largest kind of a grand jollification, which proceeded to such extremities that it was found necessary to send for Sheriff Miller to preserve order. One Indian became the possessor of a wagon load, which he proceeded to take to a place of safety, but being somewhat oblivious during the drive, in consequence of heavy potations, it was found when he reporters at headquarters that of his saber counselors had succeeded in stealing every keg from the wagon, with the exception of the one upon which he was sitting.—Record.

The Clara Belle touched at this dock on Wednesday morning on her way to Traverse City.

The chief event of the week has been the Entertainment held in the Good Templars Hall on Wednesday evening. The weather was propitious, and attendance good,—the room being well filled. The exercises were participated in by only those who were members of the lodge. About three hours were consumed in going through the programme, which consisted of Duets, Quarrettes and Choruses, Dialogues, Declamations and select Readings. The west end of the room was occupied by a neatly arranged stage, and adjoining dressing rooms, and the preparations for the occasion seemed to have been all made with care and good taste, and with a view to convenience. The costumes used in the various pieces represented were highly appropriate, and some of them really beautiful. After the first drawing of the curtain, at the commencement of the exercises, every thing appeared to move on like clock work, no hitch being observable at any time during the evening. To make distinctions as to the merits of the different characters and individuals personated would be perhaps both difficult and unwise. To say that all did equally well would not be strictly correct, but it may be safely said that all did well, and fully met the expectations of their friends, while the applause which was so frequently but respectfully bestowed, exhibited the approval and gratifications of the public. Much credit is due for the success of the entertainment to Mr. William Hayes, who has had principal charge of the whole affair, and has worked industriously from first to last to insure a favorable result. Mr. Harris, we understand, is regarded as the musical man of Norwood. As to his talents in this direction we presume the public will require no further proof than the able manner in which he rendered the closing piece of music. At all events, the Norwood Lodge have reason to congratulate themselves on the success of the enterprise, and, Mr. Editor, our Charlevoix sisters, and brothers, and friends, have reason to deeply regret, yes, and shed bitter tears of genuine sorrow (if they see fit), over their neglect to be present and receive the cordial welcome which awaited them.

Report of the Postmaster-General.

WASHINGTON, November 18.

The annual report of Postmaster-General Key is made public to-day. Large portions of it are devoted to the presentation of statistical information already published in the abstracts of reports of his subordinate officers.

RAILWAY SERVICE.

The Postmaster-General renews the recommendation contained in his last report for the enactment of a law restricting the compensation of railroads for carrying mails on a basis of space, speed and frequency, supplemented by the weight of the mails carried. The railroad companies have as a general thing responded to Department statistical requests, expenditures, etc., as requested. The recommendation is made that the appropriation to enable the Postmaster-General to obtain the proper facilities for the prompt transmission of mails be increased this year to $50,000.

The cost of railway service on the 30th of June, 1878, was at the rate of 49.86-.9 per cent. of the revenue for the year, the service during the preceding year of $125,068. This increase does not, however, represent the actual rate of increase in the service, as account must be taken of a reduction of five per cent. in the rate of compensation from July 1, 1878, made under the act of January 12. The annual rate of this deduction is, in round numbers, $600,000, making, with the $125,068, an increase of $725,068 for 1878 over 1878, being little less than 5.5 per cent. The general increase of business all over the country, and the remarkable evidence that the general prosperity will continue for some years, will render a corresponding increase in railway service for the next year to be necessary to all but $600,000. The Postmaster-General earnestly renews the recommendation of last year for a reclassification of the employés of the Railway Mail Service by the General Superintendent of that service.

STAR ROUTE SERVICE.

General Key reports that the operation of the present law regarding the increase of compensation for increased speed and decreased frequency of service on "star routes" is, at times, obvious the mails are transported in some are ordinary vehicles, results in great loss to the Government, and encourages the Department to enable him to do in this direction.

The estimate for "star" service the next fiscal year contemplates the continuance of the present star service in other States and Territories in reasonable relation to the States of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, North Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi and Louisiana. The total amount asked for "star" service the next fiscal year is $4,500,000, exclusive of the sum required for ocean and inland mail service by steamboats and railroads.

FOREIGN MAIL SERVICE.

The report continues: The charter of the Department to establish a fast mail service with Havana via Cedar Key and Key West, in order to meet the Postal Convention, has been in force for several years on account of the unfortunate delay caused by the yellow fever for such service, and the Postmaster-General now submits to Congress whether a service between Havana and the United States ports mentioned is necessary, and, if necessary, what the necessary speed and frequency in the service should be. The Postmaster-General also calls attention to the necessity for additional compensation for the present ocean mail service, and for the establishment of new ocean mail service between the United States and South American ports. A recommendation also more particularly mentioned, for a fixed annual compensation for the ocean mail service to Europe, is made. The amount to be expended regularly by appropriation for the inland transportation of foreign mails is estimated, however, because it does not derive the revenues and the expenditures of the Department, it is worthy of less consideration in the assignment of clerks than I have estimated for will require the employment of additional, and in many instances delay the transmission of mails.

THE FREE DELIVERY SERVICE.

The free delivery service has been continued as having obtained great success, but the Postmaster-General renews his call with larger appropriations shown frequent deliveries could would be used and much improvement be effected in the present city limits. A delivery of about $50,000 is required in the funds available to pay $50,000 in excess of the amount which is collected by the end of last February, and Congress is requested to supply it.

THE OTHER RECOMMENDATIONS

of interest made are, in brief, that Congress should provide at the next session for superseding all U. S. surfaced postals date the mail-locks now in use by others of new and improved patterns, for which purpose an estimate of $25,000 is submitted; that the Public Printer be authorized to print a new edition of the Postal Laws and regulations, to be sold to the public at cost; that authority be given to the Department of Justice to fix the publication of a monthly Postal Guide for a term of five years.

Indian Affairs—Commissioner's Report.

WASHINGTON, November 23.

The annual report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs has been submitted. It shows that during the past year there has been among the Indians a general steady advance in civilization, which has not resulted in any serious outbreak. The Indians of Arizona and Nevada have taken the lead, and their progress during the last eighteen months has been simply marvelous. It is the opinion of many whether the Indians will work or those who are unwilling to do so now form a small minority. From all, except the fire civilized tribes in the Indian Territory, there is a desire for houses and agricultural implements, wagons, and also for citizens clothing.

The following table shows the first payment of pensioners in the year 1877 will require an amount less than that required for the first payment in the year 1878 by $1,000,000. This is largely due to the fact that the number of pensioners on the roll of 1877 will largely exceed in the army and navy cases for several years, owing to the new Subsistence Act, which requires the commencement of pensions by the end of the fiscal year, which is less than that of last year.

Number of farms cultivated	37,131
Number of acres cultivated	378,7
Corn, bu.	1,879,064
Vegetables, bu.	1,049,332
Hay, tons	48,393
By the Five Civilized Tribes:
Corn, bushels raised	7,000,000
Wheat, " "	1,000,000
Oats and barley, " "	1,000,000
Hay, tons	2,000
Irish potatoes, bu.	1,000,000

The most important way to make the Indians self-supporting is to induce them to labor. Experience has shown that the surest way to get them to labor is to give each head of a family 40 acres of land, and to each married adult eighty acres, and to issue patents for the same.

THE UTE OUTBREAK.

The history of the Ute outbreak is given in detail without disclosing any new facts. In relation to the removal of the Utes to some other location, the Commissioner suggests that the Indians be supposed to visit the Uintah and obtain its consent to remove their agency and organize a colony of Colorado Utes. Such removal would be attended with many advantages. The Indians in Southern Colorado are dissatisfied with the location of their agency, and

FOR PRESIDENT in 1880,

ULYSSES S. GRANT

MEMORIES OF CHANDLER.

How He Came to be Appointed Secretary of the Interior.

A Blunt Man Who Had Not the Faculty of Concealment.

His Honesty—His Opinion of President Hayes—His Self-Confidence, Uncouthness and Religious Views.

A Relief Entertained by Himself that he Would Die a Sudden Death.

The Washington correspondent of the Inter Ocean, Chicago, who possessed the confidence of Mr. Chandler and was intimate with him, contributes another reminiscences of the more current period of the Senator. The following is extracted from his reminiscences:

In his twenty-nine years of public life a man whose nature and habits was so peculiar as Chandler's could not but provoke antagonism. Mr. Chandler's honesty was never suspected. He had not the faculty (or concealment, which is so useful to a public man. He was not often impolitic in what he said about other people, but took no pains to withhold his own opinions.

When he was Secretary of the Interior, a committee called on his office and asked for him a hearing. When it came he went up, took a chair by the side of the Secretary's desk, and drawing a pile of papers from his pocket, began:

"Mr. Secretary, I have been badly used."

"I'm glad of it," interrupted Mr. Chandler; "you're a d—d scoundrel, and it's time you were getting your deserts."

The man coughed and "ahemed," and attempted to explain, but Chandler would not listen to him. He finally said that he would see that they were investigated.

"Although," said he to the contractor retired, "it's my opinion that the worst treatment you could get would be too good for you."

I don't know who this man was, or what he had done, more than that he was a contractor in the Indian service, and was suspected of fraud, but while he was Secretary Mr. Chandler obtained a very thorough knowledge of the entire ramification of the Interior Department, and stamped out all the corruption there was in it.

Mr. Chandler was very much gratified when Grant appointed him Secretary of the Interior. Delano had resigned, after a long struggle to keep the position, during which President Grant was very much annoyed on both sides, by Delano's importunities to compel his re-election in the Cabinet, and by the intrigues of his enemies to get him out. Assistant Secretary Cowen had been acting Secretary for months a month, while Grant made a search among his friends for the proper man to take the place. He offered it to J. Russell Jones of Chicago, then Collector of Customs and formerly Minister to Belgium, and to several others, but every body declined. The department was looked upon as a sort of Augean stable.

President Grant was out West and came home by way of Toledo, where he was met by Chandler, who came on to Washington with him. The same day they came I received a letter from a friend in Detroit to the effect that Chandler had been offered the Interior Department and would accept it if Grant would allow him to clean it out, because my friend wrote, "Chandler says it is the foulest place in the Government."

I would have voted for Chandler," said Postmaster General Key, "for any office he would have run for."

Last winter Mr. Chandler had sport with his friends over a paragraph which appeared in the Detroit papers, which was discussion his honesty, and admitted it, saying that although he was a very bad man otherwise, he never stole anything but the Presidency.

Mr. Chandler, in commenting upon it said, that it was an extensive "steal." The election of President Hayes

COST HIM UPWARD OF $35,000.

He told me the exact figures once, and showed me a check-book, with the stubs, upon which every item was accounted for.

THE REPUBLICAN CHAIRMANSHIP.

About the time time when the bill organized the Electoral Commission was passed, Chandler called a meeting of the Republican National Committee in his library and invited a large number of leading Ohio politicians, who were supposed to be Gov. Hayes' personal representatives, to be present.

After some ordinary business was transacted Mr. Chandler astonished everybody by offering his resignation as Chairman of the committee, stating his reason that it had became very apparent to him that he was not enjoying the confidence of the President-elect, and he presumed Gov. Hayes would prefer to have some other person in whom he had full confidence to manage his interests before the Electoral Commission.

The consternation which was caused by this unexpected announcement is hard to describe. Some leaped to their feet, literally speaking, got down upon their knees and besought him to reconsider his determination.

Chandler said he would withdraw his resignation if certain conditions were complied with, and the assurances were given very readily. They were easy conditions and involved no sacrifice upon the part of President Hayes or his friends. They were the most reasonable in the world, and fairly generous on Mr. Chandler's part. They were honorable, legitimate in every sense, and should have been taken as the ride of the Ohio men. When these conditions were guaranteed, Mr. Chandler withdrew his resignation and went to work. Their fulfillment was to have been immediate, but days passed, month passed, Hayes was inaugurated, Mr. Chandler was kicked out of the Cabinet; his services were ignored, his counsels rejected, and to the day of his death those assurances which were solemnly made how by the friends of President Hayes were never carried out. Their fulfillment was never even begun.

Mr Chandler felt this very keenly. I have heard him tell the story twice. I have heard him name the men whose broken promises were the most neglected remembrances of his long career, and his comments upon their dishonorable conduct were very severe.

HOLDING THE ELEPHANT BY THE TAIL.

This was just the time that Nast brought out one of his striking cartoons, representing the Republican party as having an elephant crossing the bridge over a precipice. The bridge had broken, the elephant was hanging, head downward over the chasm, and Mr. Chandler stood upon the bank, with his feet firmly braced, holding the animal by the tail.

This picture always gave him a great deal of satisfaction. He had cut it out of the paper, kept it in a convenient position in his library desk, and used to look at it very frequently when communing upon the events of the last Presidential campaign. I remember being in his library once with a party of gentlemen, when this picture was alluded to. Chandler took it out of his pocket-book and passed it around. As he folded the sheet up again he remarked:

"I came very near letting go of that tail, didn't I?"

for ignoring him in the early days of his administration, although he finally buried his grievance, and over them put an epitaph in his memory announcing that they were thus disposed of for the sake of party harmony and party good.

Chandler and Hayes did not "get along well together." I think each lacked confidence in the other. Hayes probably stood and underestimated Chandler, and this misunderstanding was very hard to Chandler to forgive in a man that he did not consider conspicuous for his greatness. Chandler was ill-prepared with a previous administration. Grant opposed him. Hayes saw his unsteadiness and thought that he was not a fit counsellor for the President of the United States. Chandler was very sensitive, and thought that he had contributed more money and more blunts to make Hayes President than any other fifty men, felt the indignity very keenly when he was entirely ignored. Chandler had

A VERY SAD LOT OF DREAMS OF HAYES.

I was at his home in Detroit once, during the first year of the present administration, and the President's administrations economy was alluded to.

"I am told," said Chandler, "that he only spends $6,000 a year, and saves $41,000 out of his salary. When you go back to Washington you can go and tell Hayes that I will fix it so that he can save his entire salary. He has been in office one year. He will receive $120,000 more salary if he lives his out his term. I will give him a check for that amount payable when he will write his resignation of President of the United States on the back of it. Wheeler will then be President, and this government will be run as it ought to be.

Chandler, however, lost most of his feeling of hostility when he and the President became better acquainted, and there was no man who had more influence with the President, last winter, than Chandler. Their original dislike was a very bad case of misapplied jaundice of both sides, and I know that the President to-day feels the loss of Senator Chandler as a personal friend and a wise counsellor.

A PACK THAT SUITED.

From the time that he was relieved of his duties at the Interior Department until Secretary Schurz, until the 12th of November, 1878 Senator Chandler did not enter the White House. It was a period of eighteen months, and he was in Washington repeatedly during that time, but he did not call upon the President, nor hold any communication with him. He would recommend no one for office, and would say to people who sought his influence:

"The President would not notice my wish if I should offer one. I have no influence with this administration."

On the 12th of November, 1878, I was quite astonished to see Mr. Chandler coming out of the White House grounds. I was not aware that he was in the city, and had not heard that his feeling toward the President had changed. He shook hands cordially with me as we met at the east gate, and I expressed some surprise at seeing him coming from the Executive Mansion. He jokingly replied and said:

"Come over to my house and I'll tell you something."

It was a cold, raw day, and he was well wrapped up. We went into his library, which was the front room of the basement in his house on H street, and after taking off his wraps he drew up a chair to the fire, and looking at me in a peculiarly earnest way that was characteristic of him, he said:

"You want to know, I suppose, what I was at up there at the White House. I'll tell you. I have been trying to stiffen the President's backbone."

He said it very slowly, and repeated:

"You needn't publish it. I'm only telling you for your own guidance. I came down here to Washington—I'm sick and wasn't fit to come—to stiffen the President's backbone."

"Did you succeed?"

"Never you mind. You wait awhile, my son, and then you go up and interview Hayes. You ask him if he doesn't think the Southern policy is about played out, and if he doesn't think having rebels is better than giving them office. Remember, now," he continued, "no one is going to print anything about what I say, but I want you to be posted, and before many days you'll hear something drop."

"Whom did you find that out?" I asked.

"I found it out to-day. I heard that Hayes was sick of his sentimentalism, and I came down here to give him a tonic. I didn't come for nothing. And now, my son, you mark these words. Before Hayes gets done with the presidency he'll be a blacker Republican than I am."

THE PRESIDENT'S CHANGE OF POLICY.

Sure enough, two days after that conversation with Mr. Chandler, there appeared in the National Republican newspaper an interview with President Hayes, in which he announced what was practically a change of policy toward the South.

Like all men who have risen by the force of their will and ability from humble poverty to influence and affluence, Mr. Chandler was very proud of his success. He was fond of being a rich man, and was decidedly without conceit, but his self-confidence was enormous.

HE CALLED HIS OWN SHOT, and that was when a combination of Democrats and a dissatisfied clique of his own party elected Christiancy over him to the Senate.

After the Senate adjourned in March, 1875, and Chandler became a private citizen for the first time in eighteen years, I met him at the Safe Deposit Company in Washington, where he was superintending the unloading of

A WAGON FULL OF CHESTS.

They contained the family silver and valuables of his Washington house, of which he had duplicates at his Detroit residence. In a brief conversation he told me what was in the boxes, and remarked with a broad grin:

"I tell Mrs. Chandler we will need these things in a year or two, when I come back to the Senate. Matt Carpenter," he continued, "has torn up all of his papers, and says he has got done with politics, haven't" said he emphatically, "not by a blank sight."

And to regain his seat in the Senate was the object of his life. When it was accomplished he enjoyed more satisfaction than is often allowed to men.

HIS INFLUENCE WITH THE PRESIDENT,

since the "backbone stiffening" occurred, on November 12, 1878, has been very great, surpassing that of any other senator. The President seemed to grow in the man's character of a sudden, and thereafter to depend upon him as much as he had slighted him before. Since his return to the Senate last spring, not a single important appointment had been taken to the President without first consulting Mr. Chandler. All the schemes of last session were discussed with him before they were sent to Congress, and he knew as much of what was going on in the Presidential mind as any of the Cabinet.

THE FAMOUS ELECTION TELEGRAM.

The morning after the election of 1876, when it looked as if Tilden was to be President, the Secretary of the Congressional Committee, Judge Edmunds, now postmaster, telegraphed Mr. Chandler who was in New York:

"What is your idea of the matter? We are very much discouraged here."

A few hours afterward came this reply:

"J. M. Edmunds, Washington, D. C.: Hayes has 185 votes, and is elected.

"Z. CHANDLER."

And of the hundreds of people who applied to him for information he sent the same stereotyped reply, and stuck to it, until the count was completed and the truth of his assertion proven. Under glass, on a handsome frame, in the rooms of the Congressional Committee in Washington, that telegram is preserved.

THE JEFF DAVIS PEECH.

Notwithstanding the boldness and pertinacity with which he [illegible] political principles on the floor of the Senate and elsewhere, notwithstanding the extreme frankness with which he uttered his views and attacked the Southern representatives, Senator Chandler was not unpopular with the ex-Confederate element of the Senate. His Jeff. Davis speech was an impulse. Judge Hoar had made an attack on the Mexican Pension Bill, and Jeff Davis, to whom it gave a pension, and Lamar, Garland and others answered him by eulogizing Davis. Chandler sat on his chair and heard them, boiling with indignation. When Garland sat down Chandler arose, white with excitement. He addressed the chair, put a large quid of tobacco into his hand and flung it unconsciously across the chamber. He then began that impassioned [illegible] speech that is now famous.

AND DURABLE.

At the time of the Conkling-Lamar difficulty, Chandler was asked if he did not sometimes fear that some hot-ed ex-Confederate would attack him.

"If they do," he said, "they will get all they want."

He then went on to say that he abhorred duelling, that he would never accept nor send a challenge, but if anybody wanted to attack him, he had a weapon always with him that he thought he could use effectively. When asked what the weapon was, he stretched out his brawny fist.

"There it is," he said, and he went on to describe how, in ante-bellum times, when the chances of his being attacked were greater than now, he had taken boxing lessons and cultivated quite a muscle so that he might use it in case occasion came.

HIS INVITATION TO MASSACHUSETTS.

In August last Mr. Chandler was very much astonished at receiving invitation from the Republican State Committee of Massachusetts to make some speeches in that State. He had always been snubbed and ignored by the blue-bloods of Beacon Hill, and felt that they considered themselves superior to such an uncouth old fellow as he. He promptly declined the invitation. As soon as his letter had reached Boston he received a very urgent telegram from Judge Hoar and other Boston Republicans, urging him, in the name of their party, to come. He then saw the desire to hear him was sincere, and by an effort accepted the invitation.

"Last month a friend of his was telling me this in Detroit, and was describing the satisfaction Mr. Chandler felt at the recognition his services had received from the Massachusetts Republicans. His recognition by the business men of Boston was a very gratifying surprise.

HIS PRESIDENTIAL VIEWS.

Mr. Chandler was one of those Republicans who sincerely favored the nomination of Gen. Grant as the candidate of the Republican party next year. I have heard him say so forty times. He was himself unopposed as a candidate, but I do not think he had any serious aspirations, although he would have made a splendid President. When his name was first mentioned as a candidate it was quite provoked, because he thought it was intended as a joke, but as editorial appeared in a Chicago religious weekly last spring naming him as the best man to nominate, which gave him great pleasure. He called new attention to it and said that he had no Presidential aspirations, and would under no circumstances be a candidate.

OWN BUSINESS IN ORDER.

so that a boy 10 years old could administer upon his estate. He was very methodical and orderly in his business habits, and kept his enormous wealth in such a condition that every dollar of it was productive. He was worth over $2,000,000, and had an income of at least $75,000.

His property consists in bank stock, railroad stock, government bonds, blocks of stone in the business portion of Detroit, and two very fine residences. He lived for some time next to the old Cass Mansion, in Detroit. His Washington residence is a large brown stone dwelling on H street, near Fourteenth. Mrs. Eugene Hale, the wife of the Congressman from Maine, is

HIS ONLY CHILD.

She, with some other relatives, will inherit his large property. When Mrs. Hale was Married he gave her a wedding gift of $100,000, and presented each of his grandchildren with $50,000 in Government bonds when they were christened.

He was very fond of Mrs. Hale, and she bears upon his face and shoulders were the reminders of

PATERNAL DUTTON.

When she was a child he heroically rescued her from a burning building, and was severely—at one time it was thought fatally—burned. He was devoted to his grandchildren, and kept them with him as much as his busy life would allow.

Although, at times, profane to an extent that would horrify an "army in Flanders," Mr. Chandler was

A MAN OF SINCERE RELIGIOUS CONVICTIONS, of profound reverence, and a believer in the Calvinistic faith. His wife and daughter are members of the Presbyterian Church, and he attended with them. He used to talk religious frequently and expressed himself very freely as believing in an all-wise and overruling Providence. His conviction upon every subject was intense: what he believed was as much a part of his life as the pulsations of his blood—whether it was politics, business or religious. I heard him apologize, once, for swearing.

"I am in the habit sometimes," he said "of expressing myself freely. It's a bad practice, I know; but the English language is deficient in some respects, and I don't speak another."

He was always very respectful to clergymen, and treated everything of a religious bearing with cardial reverence. He was intolerant toward those who differed from him in their religious views, as toward those who differed from him in politics. He once said of Bob Ingersoll:

"I like his politics, but damn his religion.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Domestic.

THE Agents of the Post-Office Department arrested 352 persons last year for offenses against the Postal laws.

ASSISTANT-ASSESSOR ALBERT GILBERT, of the New York Custom-House, was suspended from duty on the 17th, in order from Washington. Frederick Snyder, as Examiner in the same department," was suspended several days before. The Appraiser said they were not charged with the same offense, but declined making public the charges pending an investigation.

THREE HUNDRED AND TWENTY vessels from foreign ports arrived at the port of New York during the week ending on the 18th, being a larger number for one week than was ever before recorded on the Custom House books.

AT NEW YORK on the evening of the 17th Rev. J. V. McNamara, formerly a priest of the Order known as "the Congregation of the Mission," was installed Bishop of the "Independent Catholic Church."

A COLORED people's industrial exposition was opened at Raleigh, N. C., on the 17th.

CANTON, (Miss.,) dispatch of the 17th announce the arrest of Eliza Pinkston, of Returning Board notoriety, upon the charge of murdering her second husband.

THE trial of Mrs. Adelaide Robert for the murder of Theodore Weber, at Chicago, some months ago, terminated on the 17th with a verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity. She was committed to the Insane Asylum.

THE Captain of the schooner C. G. Breen, which recently foundered during a gale on Lake Erie, has been picked up and brought to Buffalo.

THE Supreme Court on the 17th rendered a decision declaring the provisions of the Trade-mark act unconstitutional. The ground upon which the decision was based appears to have been that the clause of the Constitution giving Congress the power to enact copyright laws is designed exclusively for the protection of property in literary productions. The decision will not operate to destroy any valid trade-mark, but it will hereafter be necessary for parties to have recourse to the law upon that subject as it was before the passage of the act in question, which was intended to afford additional security to the owners of trade-marks.

ON the afternoon of the 17th the tug Seymour left Cape Vincent for Oswego N. Y., with four small boats, three dredges, seven dump-scows and three derricks in tow. When within five miles of Oswego they encountered a heavy gale and the entire fleet broke loose. It was reported on the 18th that only the Seymour lived out the gale, and that of the dump-scows, dredges and derricks but one of each had perished.

AN explosion occurred in Tunnel No. 2 on the Narrow Gauge Railroad from San Jose to Santa Cruz early on the morning of the 18th. It appears that a blast was fired at about 4 o'clock, and from the mouth of the tunnel, which caused an exploding of gas generated by the filtering of coal oil through the rock and which set the timbers on fire. Two persons and two white men were at work in the tunnel at the time. Immediately about twenty more Chinamen rushed into the tunnel with buckets to aid their comrades. When they had penetrated about 1,500 feet their torches caused a second explosion, more violent than the first, shaking the mountain to its center. Two white men, Hinkle and Johnson, were brought out terribly burned, and about ten Chinamen, all seriously injured. As near as could be learned some thirty Chinamen were killed. The second explosion wrecked the engines and works.

THE agent sent by the State Department to see if the leading Powers would take the initiative in calling an international Monetary Conference has returned to Washington. He was not successful.

THE bank-keeper of the Wisconsin Marine and Fire Insurance Company's Bank at Milwaukee, one Charles H. Rosse, has been arrested upon the charge of embezzling the funds of the institution. It is alleged that his peculations have continued for a period of ten years, and that he has abstracted $300,000. Experts were, on the 20th, engaged upon the books, striving to fathom the mystery of his balances and understand his methods of abstraction. The President of the bank is Alexander Mitchell, formerly member of Congress from the Milwaukee District.

THE heaviest fall of snow in that section for years occurred at Augusta, Ga., on the 18th. It snowed for over three hours steadily.

ON the 18th the steamer Algeria, from Liverpool, reached New York with 600 persons on board. On the same day the steamer Gallier brought 450,000 in specie.

J. A. BRIDGES, Commissioner of Pensions, issued a circular on the 20th, addressed to pension claimants and their attorneys, which reads as follows:

"To enable this office to dispatch with letter facility the pupils pertaining thereto, it is requested that all letters of inquiry in the records and cases now on hand, whether still pending in this office or awaiting action by the committee of pension claims, be answered or sent to the committee of which the case may be pending. Letters of inquiry should contain the name of the soldier upon whose service the claim is based, the State from which he enlisted, and, as far as the claimant can possibly ascertain, all the facts bearing upon the case, together with the name and address of the attorney, if any, prosecuting the claim. Letters of inquiry received since these instructions were issued will be answered."

BARLY, on the morning of the 20th inst. Lestrade (Fred.) Vigilance Committee, took Patrick Shaw, a Colored man, and Richard Fredshaw, a Scotchman, both jail-keepers and desperads, from the county jail, and hung them by the neck until they were dead.

IN a speech before the White River Ute Commission, the account of which was received on the 20th, Ouray explained the fragmentation of the Indian witnesses. He said it was because they believed that a plot had been set for their capture. They had since learned that this was not so, and he believed they would hereafter testify truthfully. In response to the request that the further investigation in relation to the White River affair be prosecuted at Washington Secretary Schurz telegraphed on the 20th, according to the request, provided the guilty parties in the massacre be first pointed out and surrendered, and stated that, if this were not done, the whole tribe would be considered guilty of the crime, and treated accordingly.

A WASHINGTON dispatch of the 21st says Secretary Sherman would soon issue a circular for the information of parties desiring to register their trade-marks, to the effect that the Federal statute upon the subject, by recent decision of the Supreme Court, is declared unconstitutional, and that Patent-Office registration is consequently worthless as a means of protection, but that the Department will, however, continue to register trade-marks to persons so desiring.

WALL STREET, New York, was the theater of great excitement on the 21st, owing to a rapid decline in stock quotations, ranging all the way from one to twenty per cent. Various causes of railroad conditions, etc., produced the depreciation, which rumors were erroneously denied or proved false, and a partial recovery in values occurred.

Personal and Political.

A HARRISBURG (Pa.) telegram of the 18th announces that General Grant had accepted an invitation of the Grand Army of the Republic to visit that city on the 15th of December.

JUDGE F. C. BEAMAN has declined, on account of the state of his health, the appointment tendered him by Governor Croswell to fill the vacancy in the United States Senate caused by the death of Mr. Chandler. Governor Croswell, on the 17th, appointed ex-Governor Baldwin, of Detroit, to the position.

EX-PRESIDENT GRANT received the public-school children of Chicago in the Exposition building on the 17th. There were 50,000 children and parents. In the evening the Calumet Club gave him a reception and banquet.

POSTMASTER JAMES, of New York, has been sued in the Supreme Court of that State for the alleged illegal detention of a lottery-agent's letters. These letters were detained under orders from the Postmaster-General. Counsel claim that the law authorizing such orders is unconstitutional.

GREAT excitement prevailed in Augusta, Me., on the 17th over the report that the Governor and Council had decided to throw out certain election returns, the effect of which would be the seating of Democratic candidates for Governor and members of the House of Representatives, and the securing of the State to the combined Democrats and Greenbackers for the coming year. It was asserted that the loss of Kittery was to be thrown out because, as alleged, two-thirds of election instead of three were posted. The throwing out of these would change the result in York County, by unseating three Republican and electing three Democratic senators. A similar result would be reached in the county of Aroostook, by so alleged, the omission of election was posted in days' work, instead of seven. If this is thrown out it will change the vote in Androscoggin County. Similar changes on alleged technical grounds will change the figures in the State Senate, and give the Democrats and Greenbackers a majority in both branches of the Legislature. The vote as first returned gave the Republicans nineteen Senators, and all the others twelve.

F. P. DEWEES, of the National Committee, National party, and T. D. Murch, of the Congressional Committee, National-Greenback labor party, issued a call on the 18th for a meeting at Washington on the 8th of January next of the Union Greenback National Committee, Chairman and members of the various State Committees, representatives of Greenback and Labor organizations, and newspaper editors throughout the country friendly to the principles of the Greenback and Labor organizations, to decide upon the time and place for holding a National Convention.

ANNOUNCEMENT was made on the 18th of the suspension of the music firm of A. Reed & Sons, one of the oldest business houses of Chicago.

THE Sub-Committee of the United States Committee, appointed to investigate the spoiled-Kellogg contested election case in Louisiana began its labors at New Orleans on the 17th. Several witnesses were examined on the 18th.

THE statue of General George H. Thomas, erected in Washington and presented to the Nation, through the President, by the Society of the Army of the Cumberland, was formally unveiled on the 19th. The attendance in the city was very large, and many distinguished farmer civil and military participants in the proceedings. The oration was delivered by Judge Stanley Matthews, and at its conclusion he formally presented the statue to the people of the United States, through the President and President Hayes accepted the same in a few brief and appropriate remarks. The public buildings were draped in mourning, and on the evening of the 19th a banquet was given by the Society of the Army of the Cumberland, at which Republican Senators-elect, to restrain Governor Garcelon and the Council from interference with the returns of the late election, and to allow examination and correction of same, if any exist.

THE following officers for the ensuing year were chosen by the Society of the Army of the Cumberland at its session in Washington on the 20th: President, General Underwood, Massachusetts; General Barlow, New York, General Cramer, New Jersey; General Negley, Pennsylvania; General Duffield, Michigan; Colonel Hobson, Kentucky; Captain E. E. Rhun, Tennessee; General Morgan, Illinois; General Stanley, Indiana; General Berger, Ohio; Colonel Johnston, Wisconsin; Colonel Conover, Missouri; General Martin, Kansas; Captain West, Minnesota; Captain Sulloway, Iowa. Recording Secretary, Captain Tindt. Corresponding Secretary, General Clark. Treasurer, General Fullerton. Toledo was selected as the place for the next meeting of the Society.

THE will of Rev. Dr. Joseph F. Thompson, who died in Berlin, has been probated in New York City. It contains a clause bequeathing to Mrs. Sara Hackett, of Grand Rapids, Mich., the sum of 3,000 marks and certain pictures and books.

DENIS KEARNEY, the San Francisco agitator, was arrested on that city on the evening of the 20th, upon the charge of attempting to incite a riot that evening, and held to bail in the sum of $200.

THE following was the vote cast in Wisconsin at the recent election for Governor: Smith, Rep., 103,325; Bashford, Dem., 75,093; May, Greenback, 12,995; Bloomfield, Temperance, 387; scattering, 51. Total vote, 190,911. Smith's plurality, 28,494.

A Terrible Shipwreck and a Brave Rescue.

From letters received by us from Messrs. A. E. Cook and W. C. Ray, of Glen Haven, and from a private letter from C. A. Hosmer (of the same place) to F. Hamilton, of the firm of Hamilton, Muldern & Co., a perusal of which was kindly afforded us, we gather the following particulars of a disastrous shipwreck which took place near Glen Haven on Wednesday last:

The schooner H. R. Hoyt, of Oswego, N. Y., owned by John Dutton of the same place, and loaded with 17,000 bushels of wheat, consigned by John Morton, of Milwaukee, to parties in Oswego was towed two miles below Glen Haven on a tug-boat on Wednesday night of last week and became a total wreck. She came during a blinding snow storm, and, dragging her anchors, caught last far enough from shore to pound the beach violently as she broke completely in two. Two of the sailors held on until about nine o'clock, when they were swept ashore as shown the Captain gave out and was lost; another stood it until after midnight, and a fifth about three o'clock, when they too were swept ashore by the fierce waves. At one o'clock a. m. the wreck was discovered from the shore. Two men, the sole survivors of the disaster, were standing on a piece of the bow, with every sea rolling over them. A boat was at once put on sleighs and driven to the scene of the wreck. Charles Rosman, well known to many of our citizens, called for volunteers to go to the rescue. W. C. Ray and Ellsworth responded, but the same time a others could be found to risk their lives in the terrible sea, strong as it was with fragments of the wreck still dashing to and fro upon it. At length two other names unknown to us volunteered, and the brave men started on their errand of mercy. The first trip was a failure, the boat being swamped half way out and drifting to shore. Again they started, reached the wreck and took him, when a huge breaker swept over them, snapping their line, swamping their boat and forcing them ashore again. They reached the shore so drenched and covered with ice that it was impossible for them to renew the attempt that night, so no one would take their places then returned home for dry clothes, leaving a man to cheer the ship wrecked sailors. Back again to the scene of disaster they found the sea carrying its victims rapidly away, but the poor sailors were crying for help and could evidently hold out but a short time longer. Rosman, Ray, Clark, John Blanchfield and John Sabin started out once more in a blinding snow storm. Near the wreck they encountered some fearful breakers which drove them back in spite of all their efforts and as they rounded the point of the shore were intercepting a line, rebuilding their efforts, they came alongside and made fast. Leaving Ray in charge of the boat, Rosman and Clark made their way on floating spars and bits of the deck until they were near enough to supply the men on their perilous trip. These men were so weak as to be almost entirely helpless and were obliged to crawl on the timbers to the boat, and were under water most of the time. Between the seas, Clark passed them to Rosman and he flung them across the shaking to a label floating deck, then, watching their chance, passed over to them. Then came the most perilous moment. Drawing the boat to her one into the very midst of a seething sea of fierce waves, crushing timbers, flying spray and blinding snow, were only the utmost coolness and skill on the part of Ray kept her from being dashed to pieces they took up the sailors and threw them into the boat then followed themselves and pulled for the shore, swamping as usual but scattering through till a huge breaker flung them on the beach, where many outstretched hands waited to receive them.

The whole story of the rescue is thrilling in the extreme, and the daring of the brave fellows who risked their lives so gallantly recalls the old days of chivalry and knightly deeds.

"WHAT IS YOUR LIFE?"

JAS. 4: 14.

What is your life? How brief its day,
How swift the moments speed away,
Youth turns to manhood, and old age
Soon ends the record of life's page.

What are our hopes? Time fades as soon
Before brilliant sun-set as at noon;
And lights that gleam upon our way
Shortly many a false, delusive ray.

What are our friends? Oh! oft we see
Their fickle homes lone can be,
Vows soon forgot, professions vain,
And hearts removed by love again.

What are life's joys? Ah! heart, beware,
Each flower that blooms thy hand to invite
A ruthless thorn conceals from sight.

GLIMPSES OF CHARLEVOIX.

What a Visitor Thinks of the Personnel of Charlevoix.

EDITOR SENTINEL:

As it was my good fortune to spend a few weeks during the last autumn in your beautiful village, it has occurred to me that a brief complimentary notice of the personnel of some of your leading citizens might not be unacceptable to your numerous readers. I will therefore begin with the clergy.

Every community is supposed to contain at least three distinct religious elements; viz, the Enthusiastic, the Progressive and the Eccentric.

The first is represented by Dominie Whitman, whose stentorian voice and profecting under law, indicate that he is amply qualified to defend his cause against all opposition whatsoever.

The second is represented by Dominie Otis, who is said to be fluent of tongue and pen, but we should pronounce him a better judge of beef-steak and apple-dumplings than of theology.

The third is represented by Dominie Parmenter, whose spindling legs and agile form indicate that he is well fitted by nature to be a pioneer gospeler. The preachments of all three of these Reverends, is thought to be not very far below the average.

We found the legal profession well represented, first, by Major Green, a man of sound mind and dyspeptic body which is of the Zacheus type. He has an amiable temper when he is good natured.

The next is Judge Eaton, a man of fine abilities and pleasing address. His clear head and legal acumen teach him that any man can afford to be a good fellow, when he is well paid for it.

The third is Esquire Clark whose legal lore and ingenuous nature, are hardly in keeping with his Greenback-inflation-in-coherent platitudes.

The next are Messrs Wisner and Mason. As to the senior, though his name begins with W, it is nothing against him, for the W does not stand for wine, woman, whiskey or war. Whether the junior is a Free Mason or a stone-mason we did not learn. Like a lawyer out west, the new firm expect to take for their professional services anything that they can eat or drink except living water.

The medical profession is represented, first, by Dr. Lewis, an experienced and successful practitioner, who knows how to charge, and is full of business and bluster.

Second, by Dr. Perrin, a rising man of fine talent and Democratic proclivities; but his land-lady complains that he is late to breakfast on Monday mornings.

Your pedagogue, Prof. Mayne, is said to be not only a success as a teacher, but also as a student of law and love.

Your enterprising newspaper (and here we take off our hat) is ably represented by an editor-in-chief, and a senior and junior devil. Editor Smith is either good natured or irascible according to circumstances. When in the latter mood his adjectives are not always the most classic.

In our next we may have a complimentary word for some of the leading business men of your town, beginning perhaps with "mine host," of the Fountain City House, who can stand about as much rest as any man in the county, unless it be Hilton, or Hall at the head of the Lake.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

Secretary Sherman's Annual Report.

The following are the principal points of the report of Secretary Sherman:

The ordinary revenues from all sources for the fiscal year ending June 30 were $264,935,823.67, the ordinary expenditures for the same period were $236,967,203.63, leaving a surplus revenue of $28,968,620.04. The amount due the sinking fund for the year was $58,653,413.50, leaving a deficiency of the amount of $29,684,793.46, to be met by applying the balance of the previous year and a small per cent. United States notes held in the Treasury for the redemption of fractional currency, amounting to $1,235,000, to the payment of arrears of pensions as directed in Section 3 of the act approved June 20, 1878, the increased revenue derived during the months of July, August and September of the present year was fully absorbed by current expenses, but the payment of $26,684,481 arrears of pensions accrued under the act approved January 25, 1879, and the Secretary is unable to say how much of the $5,000,000 appropriated for the payment of arrears of pensions will be required by the Department has been able to purchase and apply to the sinking fund, out of the surplus revenues for the month of October, $12,000,000 at par and bonds of 1881 and 1891 bearing five per cent. bonds issued under the act of March 3, 1869, after the issue of redemption of three hundred dollars of four per cents under the Refunding act, and three hundred dollars of five per cents under the Resumption act, leaving a balance of $1,000,000 of the former and $2,000,000 of the latter unredeemed. Of the amount of $12,000,000 to be expended in the purchase of bonds for the sinking fund during the present month, $10,000,000 are now available, and the remainder will be exhausted by additional appropriations.

Should Congress make no appropriation for the fiscal year, or for repeal or restore existing taxes, other sources of revenue must be relied upon. Should this course be their subsequent action, which, however, he does not regard as probable, he would suggest as a measure meeting the deficiency the restoration of a moderate duty on tea and coffee, and the levy of an additional tax, which would involve a system, as heretofore there fully stated. With a view to permanent economy, the Secretary ventures to suggest to the consideration of Congress whether the present organization of the Appropriations Committees of the House and Senate should not be changed, so that the estimates will be considered by one committee instead of by the several committees of the Congress, as at present. The Secretary of the Treasury, in addition to paying the interest on the public debt, has paid $50 during the year, $5,000,000 of the principal of the bonded debt, and has purchased for the sinking fund $29,684,793.46 of bonds.

The revenue of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1881, estimated upon existing laws, will be $295,000,000. The appropriations for the same period, received from the several Executive Departments, will be $265,000,000, as estimated surplus of $30,000,000.

Estimating the amount due the sinking fund at $58,653,413.50, showing a surplus of $28,653,413.50, assuming that the conditions are based upon the requirements as to existing law, and that no change will be made during the year, no provision will be available for the purchase of or exchange for coin or bullion. Silver dollars in the Treasury may be exchanged for coin certificates.

Revised Statutes. When notes cannot be redeemed on presentation, interest will be paid thereon in the Treasury. Section 3,700 of the Revised Statutes, providing that no law the resumption fund be specifically set aside for the payment of the principal of United States notes, and that this never redeemed shall not be exchanged for or the purchase of coin or bullion.

Estimates were variously made by the Secretary of the Treasury, the Comptroller of the Currency, the Director of the Mint, and the National Bankers relative to the organization and the operation of banks in the present year, the date of the Secretary's report, the aggregate capital, $454,067,895; surplus, $111,795,508; undivided profits, $76,267,246; deposits by individuals, $1,000,000,000; deposits by United States and certificates, $12,000,000; deposits by banks, $1,000,000,000; United States certificates, $96,773,100; due to banks, $264,000,000; due from banks, $264,000,000; specie, $60,000,000; legal tenders, $60,000,000; United States bonds to secure circulation, $300,000,000; United States bonds to secure deposits, $50,000,000; United States bonds on hand, $10,000,000; total United States bonds, $360,000,000. The number of banks organized during the year ending November 1 was 120, with a capital of $12,000,000. Among the substitutes which have existed between the National banks and the people are the relations of special payments, and in the lending of the public funds to the banks, and the financial operations the co-operation of the National banks have been of essential service to the Government.

The disbursements for collecting the revenue from customs for the fiscal year ending with the following fiscal years have been as follows: 1877, $13,384,319.21; 1878, $8,878,767.2; 1879, $8,445,729.03. This shows a reduction for 1878 over 1877 of $4,505,552, and a reduction for 1879 over 1878 of $433,038.

A reduction in the cost of collection during the past year in the collection of the revenue from customs. The revenue, under the ad valorem system, has fallen short of the amount which should have been collected since a proper assessment of the real foreign market value. This was due to a system of undervaluations in the entries at the Custom Houses, especially upon goods consigned by foreign manufacturers to agents in the United States.

OUR MERCHANT MARINE.

The total tonnage (registered) of the United States on the close of the fiscal year ended June 30, 1879, was 1,726,000 tons. It is a grave question if public policy whether the period has not arrived when the unlimited right of purchase, as under the English statutes, should be restricted in such a way as to take effect on future additions, and when admission to American registry upon the payment of duties should be allowed them upon importation. The recovery of our old position by the carrying trade will come upon commercial nations any disadvantage likely to ensue upon a modification of restrictions upon the right of purchase, while a moderate tax upon ships imported will not obstruct shipbuilders to compete successfully in the construction of iron vessels of the largest class.

Comptroller Knox's Report.

WASHINGTON, November 21.

The Comptroller of the Currency has just completed the seventeenth annual report of the operations of the national system, which will be submitted to Congress at the opening of the winter session. The following extracts are taken from the report:

The total number of National banks organized from the establishment of the banking system to February 25, 1863, to November 1 the present year is 2,020. Of these 90 have gone into voluntary liquidation by the consolidation with other National associations, as shown in the report of their respective capitals, and eighty-one have gone into liquidation by the vote of the shareholders owning two-thirds of their respective capitals, and eighty-one have been closed by the Comptroller for the purpose of closing up their affairs, having $350 in operation at the date last named.

Since my last annual report thirty-eight banks have been organized with an aggregate authorized capital of $5,780,000, to which $5,344,000 in circulating notes have been issued. Thirty-eight banks with an aggregate capital of $4,450,000, have voluntarily discontinued business within the same period, and eight banks have failed, having a total capital of $1,000,000. The organized in 1879 with a capital of $750,000, which failed soon after the previously gone into voluntary liquidation.

The aggregate capital of the various classes of banks has diminished from $478,400,000 in 1878 to $454,067,895 in 1879, and the circulation based upon bonds has fallen off from $295,000,000 in deposits have fallen off from $2,000,000 in 1878 to $1,000,000 in 1879, and in deposits from $1,000,000 in 1878 to $1,000,000 in 1879. The decrease in the capital of banks during the last year has diminished $43,100,000, but the increase in the surplus and undivided profits has more than counterbalanced any diminution in the capital of the banks, the total capital, surplus and undivided profits of the banks in the City of New York to the Clearing House Association, which amounted to $200,000,000 in 1878, was $211,000,000 in 1879, showing an increase of $11,000,000 during the year. The increase in the capital, surplus and undivided profits of the banks in the City of Boston to the Clearing House Association, which amounted to $100,000,000 in 1878, was $105,000,000 in 1879, showing an increase of $5,000,000 during the year. The increase in the capital, surplus and undivided profits of the banks in the City of Philadelphia to the Clearing House Association, which amounted to $60,000,000 in 1878, was $63,000,000 in 1879, showing an increase of $3,000,000 during the year. The banking capital has diminished $43,100,000, but the surplus and undivided profits have increased $11,000,000, and the deposits $11,000,000, making the total increase of the National banks $22,000,000 during the last year. This is a satisfactory showing, and will be considered by the banks in the City of New York to the Clearing House Association, which amounted to $200,000,000 in 1878, was $211,000,000 in 1879, showing an increase of $11,000,000 during the year. The increase in the capital, surplus and undivided profits of the banks in the City of Boston to the Clearing House Association, which amounted to $100,000,000 in 1878, was $105,000,000 in 1879, showing an increase of $5,000,000 during the year. The increase in the capital, surplus and undivided profits of the banks in the City of Philadelphia to the Clearing House Association, which amounted to $60,000,000 in 1878, was $63,000,000 in 1879, showing an increase of $3,000,000 during the year. The banking capital has diminished $43,100,000, but the surplus and undivided profits have increased $11,000,000, and the deposits $11,000,000, making the total increase of the National banks $22,000,000 during the last year. This is a satisfactory showing, and will be considered by the banks in the City of New York to the Clearing House Association, which amounted to $200,000,000 in 1878, was $211,000,000 in 1879, showing an increase of $11,000,000 during the year. The increase in the capital, surplus and undivided profits of the banks in the City of Boston to the Clearing House Association, which amounted to $100,000,000 in 1878, was $105,000,000 in 1879, showing an increase of $5,000,000 during the year. The increase in the capital, surplus and undivided profits of the banks in the City of Philadelphia to the Clearing House Association, which amounted to $60,000,000 in 1878, was $63,000,000 in 1879, showing an increase of $3,000,000 during the year.

The banks outside of the large cities held $1,000,000 less in deposits than in 1878, while nearly equals threefourths of the full amount of the decrease of deposits of banks in the City of New York and in the Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago banks. Other banks than one-half of their legal reserve.

The addition of cash to the circulation should have the effect to increase the issue of paper money. If in excess of the wants of business such increase would add to the prices of the legal-tender and the National-bank currency. If the latter should be withdrawn from the Treasury, they cannot again be issued, except upon the deposit of bonds by the Government, and the accumulation of such notes would enable the Secretary to purchase two hundred and seventy millions of bonds now held to secure the circulation. The people would thus be relieved from the payment of interest on these bonds, and the Secretary would be enabled to meet the requirements of the sinking fund without calling upon the people for additional taxation.

The great war debt of the United States was contracted for less than four and half years. In 1875 the country was relieved of debt, and the amount is but $50,231,281. During the next three years the amount of annual payments of principal and interest increased at the rate of almost one hundred millions a month, being on the first day of July, 1865, $80,000,000. During the next year the increase at the rate of more than thirty-six millions per month, and the aggregate for the first year ending July 1, 1866, it had reached $1,030,000,000. At the end of the succeeding year it was considerably more than $1,173,000,000. During the following year it increased nearly $1,200,000,000. During the following year, reaching on July 1, 1866, the sum of $1,815,000,000. During the next year, ending April 1, 1865, the debt increased at the rate of over two millions a day, or sixty millions a month, and for the next three months more than one hundred millions per month, or almost ninety millions a day, or almost ninety millions a day, reaching on the first day of July, 1865, at which date it amounted to $2,844,000,000.

The United States debt since 1871, under the Refunding act has been reduced $1,000,000,000, or 50, one hundred and eighty-five millions of 5s, one hundred and eighty-five millions of 6s, one hundred and eighty-five millions of 4½s, and one hundred and eighty-five millions of 4s, or $1,000,000,000 in all, more than one thousand three hundred millions of bonds have been issued under the Refunding act. Bonds have also been sold for resumption purposes, since March 1, 1875, under the act providing for the resumption act of January 14, 1875, at the rate of about two millions per day, or about ninety millions a month, the latter being at a premium of 10 per cent.

The reduction in the interest-bearing debt of the United States, from its highest point, on August 31, 1865, to November 1, 1879, is $1,000,000,000, which amount has been accomplished since the refunding operations were commenced on May 1, 1871.

At the highest point the annual interest on the debt was $150,000,000, while it is now $68,775,778 only. There has, therefore, been a total reduction in this charge of $77,000,000.

The total annual reduction of interest under these refunding operations since March, 1871, has been $12,297,197, while the saving on this account, growing out of the operations of the present year alone, is nearly nine millions ($8,800,000), and the total annual saving from the refunding up values of the Government since 1871 is nearly fifteen millions ($14,800,000).

The refunding of the National debt commenced in 1871, at which time the National banks held nearly four hundred millions of bonds bearing six per cents, and from that date to the present time they have held more than one-fifth of the interest-bearing debt of the United States. A large portion of the bonds held by them in 1871 bore interest at the rate of six per cent. This class of bonds has since been greatly reduced, and is now less than one-sixth of all the bonds pledged for circulation, while more than one-third of the whole annual charge is paid to them.

The Government has still outstanding $775,320,000 of five per cents, and more than $500,000,000 of six per cents, all of which will mature before July 1, 1881. The refunding of these bonds into four per cents will save $13,450,000 in interest annually. The Secretary is not aware that there is now such that is not impossible that long before the maturity of the present debt may be refunded into three and a half per cents, and possibly into three per cents, than the rate of the English consols, that sum would be added to the investment a large additional amount of interest.

The act of Jan. 14, 1875, required the Secretary of the Treasury to redeem in coin the legal-tender notes then outstanding, at their presentation for redemption at the office of the Assistant Treasurer of the United States in the City of New York, to the amount of not less than $10,000 on and after June 1, 1879. At the time of the passage of the act of the public debt statement showed the amount then to be $346,681,016. Previous to that time, in view of the coming event, the banking capital has diminished $43,100,000, but the surplus and undivided profits have increased $11,000,000, and the deposits $11,000,000, making the total increase of the National banks $22,000,000 during the last year. This is a satisfactory showing, and will be considered by the banks in the City of New York to the Clearing House Association, which amounted to $200,000,000 in 1878, was $211,000,000 in 1879, showing an increase of $11,000,000 during the year. The increase in the capital, surplus and undivided profits of the banks in the City of Boston to the Clearing House Association, which amounted to $100,000,000 in 1878, was $105,000,000 in 1879, showing an increase of $5,000,000 during the year. The increase in the capital, surplus and undivided profits of the banks in the City of Philadelphia to the Clearing House Association, which amounted to $60,000,000 in 1878, was $63,000,000 in 1879, showing an increase of $3,000,000 during the year.

Secretary McCrary's Report.

WASHINGTON, November 21.

The following is a synopsis of the annual report of Secretary-of-War McCrary:

The Secretary, in referring to the Ute outbreak, takes the ground that the Government should look to the criminals for the surrender and punishment of the Indians responsible for the Meeker massacre, and the troops who attack upon Major Thornburgh's command, and not to the innocent members of the tribe. The Government of certain military posts, and censures the action of General Crook in withdrawing the army in fixed at 25,000 men, exclusive of the Engineer's estimates for river and harbor improvements, have been reduced to 15,000 men. The also recommends that three regiments of infantry be added to the present force of the army, and that the Signal Service be transferred to the War Department, and that the Military Academy be allowed 100 cadets instead of 50 as at present.

The expenditures of the Department have decreased. In 1871 they were $44,500,000; in 1879 they were $35,700,000.

He recommends the enlistment of Post-Quartermaster's sergeants, each assigned to duty in command and of supplies, and to receive additional pay for such service. He also recommends that the condition of buildings and property at posts, now lost by frequent changes of station of the detachments who set them up, be remedied by the Post Quartermaster and who, being at the head of the command, is responsible for its property. He also recommends that three companies of engineer troops be added to the army, and that the Military Academy be allowed 100 cadets instead of 50 as at present. He also recommends that three companies of engineer troops be added to the army, and that the Military Academy be allowed 100 cadets instead of 50 as at present.

The Chief Signal Officer has made improvements in established lines of field and mountain telegraphy, standing and instructions in military signaling and balloon ascensions, and has established telegraph lines at various points of observation and report, both by wire and by signal, during the year. He also recommends that the School of Instruction be continued at Fort Myer, Va. The appropriation for the year ending June 30, 1880, was $25,000, which has been expended in the purchase of supplies and the construction of buildings and property at posts, and in the establishment of telegraph lines

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 9, - 1879

For President in 1880,

ULYSSES S. GRANT

Polite and Impolitic.

Major Poore writes the Boston Journal that Hayes is a Grant man.

Rep. Butler paid $75,000 to the new paper champions in the late contest.

There is a state temperance ticket in Louisiana, this time.

The war department has brought three paper dogs to surrender from Apaches.

Senator Conkling is in Washington and big talk about the bigger President.

Red Mouthed Kearney has been fined $20 for carrying a revolver.

Dr. Holland, the editor of Scribner's Magazine, is up and out again.

Mr. Gladstone believes that he will be called to power at an early day.

The Sultan isn't quite sure of tilings and lives in continual nervous apprehension.

The rebel Joe Johnston is engineering the plan to make General Grant captain general in the army.

The brooding silence of Voorhees is raising anxious suspicions in the bosom of the Cleveland Herald.

The red-mouthed Kearney nominates Thurman for President. This is kicking a man when he is down!

Senator Eaton says the chance of experimental success next year are mostly stalwart and statesque. What's that?

Mackey, Fair and Flood an all candidates for senatorially succeeding their fellow bonanzon, Sharon, from Nevada.

The way the Ku Klux papers pitch into Grant shows that there are lots of southern rebels who don't want to be saved.

New York city Democrats are organizing to fight both Tammany and anti-Tammany.

Aleck Stephens will be 68 years old in February if he doesn't evaporate before that time.

Alec Hewitt says that if Tilden owes him $110,000 for money spent in 1876, it's nobody's business.

Dr. Gallaher, the new bishop of Louisiana, was a rebel soldier during the rebellion.

When James Buchanan was minister to England, he came very near purchasing the London Telegraph.

Queen Victoria has godmothered a very infantile daughter of Sir Michael Beach, the British colonial minister.

Judge David Davis, the sit-on-the-fences politician, is coming to the front as a Democratic candidate for the presidency.

In one of its clearing off spells, the Louisville Journal admits that several of the southern states are liable to go Republican next year.

The leading Democratic paper of Indiana predicts that that state will go Republican next year if Hendricks is not nominated for the Presidency.

The New York Herald expresses a doubt of Bayard's ability to drive the insides and guide the jackasses of his party. Such doubts have existed long ear this.

Beaconsfield finds that it cost England $3,355,000, or $765 a man, to bring the 7,000 Sepoys into European waters last year.

Whether it is Louise, or Beatrice, or the German crown princess who is to become Roman Catholic, they don't seem to know.

Bismarck still attends to the affairs of state, though thoroughly discouraged and depressed by the painful ailments that beset him.

Horatio Seymour is judging from the violence of his refusal to accept the nomination for 1880, next to Tilden, among the busy aspirants for that honor.

Not a Democrat can be found, but what in making their calculations for the presidency, starts off with 168 electorial votes from the south.

Dr. Wenns, who died at Louisville, Monday, aged 94, delivered the farewell address to Lafayette at New York, when he left this country finally for Europe.

Father Murrow, at Attleboro, Mass., has been fined $72 for selling beer and cigars at a church fair without license, dealers in those articles making the complaint.

The Louisville Journal warns us that if Grant is elected again he will hold possession as long as he lives and saw off the heads of all who object. The outlook is gloomy, glorious indeed.

At Grant's visit to the Comstock mine, Col. Fair, the Superintendent, gave Mrs. Grant a little vial with $40 worth of gold dust, half of what he found in his first day's work in California in 1849.

A writer in the Chicago Times says that he can prove that Robert Ingersoll's lecture on "The Mistake of Moses" is a plagiarism, and the Times tells him to "prove it then."

A Democratic paper of New Albany, Indiana, openly advocates the importation of 20,000 Kentucky ruffians to counteract the copperhead cowards of that state next year.

The Vermont City Enterprise well says that if Gen. Grant were now, while in his right, to set himself to write the history of the last 18 years he might produce something which would last when Washington's farewell address would be forgotten.

I heard Andrew Johnson say, after his contest for the senate, that his policy of reconciliation was a failure so far as the rebel leaders were concerned, and that the remainder of his days should be devoted to "revolving the d——d leaders to the ranks." —[Col. J. B. Brownlow.

If the chuckle-headed Democratic leaders at Washington continue the gait they have been going they will break themselves and their party steam, individually making Grant's way for him, and the south once divided the existing Democratic fabric will go to pieces. That is all there is to it.—[Louisville Journal.

General Grant expects to start east next month, and will visit Cincinnati, Philadelphia, and New York, and other cities, where he will be received by them in a manner after the San Francisco and Chicago style. He then expects to go to the West Indies to spend the winter and return home through Mexico.

Benj. C. Morse, of Marquette, aged 20 years, received the appointment to the West Point Academy from this district after a competitive examination in Big Rapids. An Old mission lad named Reynolds, who is a Yale student, stood second best.

It is reported that Gen. Grant will go East next month, and will spend January in the South. During next summer he will occupy his residence at Long Branch, and may possibly serve that he will remove to a big white house in Washington about the 4th of March following.

A Chicago correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette says it is of great importance to the friends of Gen. Grant for the Presidential nomination:

"It may be said that Grant is not a candidate to the extent of saying a word or giving a sign, but whether he would accept, if nominated, no one knows. It is safe to say, however, that Grant would not permit himself, to be made a part to a contest for the nomination, now would he accept a nomination that would result from a contest in the National convention. The opinion of those nearest to Grant is that his reticence may be interpreted as meaning that he considers it time enough to speak when authoritatively appealed to, that future events may lead him to a different conclusion from what he might reach now, and that he would not, under any circumstances, permit his name to be used, unless it should seem to be the substantially unanimous desire of the Republican party to nominate him, as it was in 1868 and 1872, and that even in that case he would express a firm purpose not to serve more than one term. In fine, Grant's purpose, as interpreted by those nearest to him, is to keep silent until future events shall seem to demand from him an expression."

Rev. Mr. Thomas, of Chicago, himself a Southern-bred gentleman, seems to be among those who grasp the full meaning of the National triumph over secession rebellion in our civil war, and frank enough to declare it, even from his pulpit. On Sunday after the reception given to Gen. Grant, he said in his sermon:

"We must stand by the underlying principles of our Union. That which takes a number of separate States and makes of them a nation, makes of them a Government. This was the real underlying principle on which the war was fought. It was fought over this one principle, whether or states have a right to secede from the Government and set up independent of that Government, and when at last Lee surrendered to Grant, that was the principle which was there established—I do not mean in the normal terms of that capitulation, but I mean by the issues of the war. And, though a Southerner myself, and living in its hills and its sunshine, and loving its people, I have felt all the time that love of one nation, this government, was a grander and greater thing, and I have felt that the honorable men of the South ought to give up that question [applause] consider it as settled. And when we ask them to give up that question and consider it settled—and a question so settled as never to be opened again—we are asking for them only what we ask for ourselves. The principle is like for all, and for all alike. We mean to say that we are a Government and not confederated states."

Detroit Post & Tribune.

THE GREAT

Republican Paper of Michigan.

The year 1880 will be marked by one of the most important political campaigns in the history of this republic. In the Republicanism will be charged with the championship of financial soundness and honor, and with the defence of the cardinal doctrines of Equal Rights and National Supremacy. Under a banner thus inscribed it will, with the spirit of '64, resist repudiation, fiation, sectional aggression, ilicgun role, conspiracies against the integrity of the ballot-box, and disloyal nonchalancy in all its forms. In this important battle Republicanism must rely upon the press for the most efficient service to its cause, and there is no more certain way to "organize victory" than by insuring the circulation among the voters, now and constantly, of a sound political literature.

The Detroit Post & Tribune has an established reputation as a vigorous and able Republican journal, which has for years upheld the cause of genuinely loyal institutions and of rational finances. It is also a thorough newspaper, perfectly equipped and complete in all departments, with large resources, a great and growing circulation, and a system of newspaper gathering which covers the entire field, locals, state, general and foreign. No paper has equalled it in rapid growth in the public confidence. Its weekly is the largest published in the state, and does not yield to any rival in interest and in value to its readers.

During 1880 its news will be kept fresh and accurate, its commercial reports full and trustworthy, its miscellaneous selections abundant and entertaining, its tone clear and elevating, and its Republicanism sound and vigorous. New features will be constantly added, and those which have already been established will be enlarged and improved. Care will be exercised to see that all Michigan interests are properly upheld, and especial pains will be taken to make its agricultural department and the LETTER BOX of constant practical use to its patrons. It has received the testimony of hundreds of its readers that these departments alone have saved to them annually far more than its subscription price.

Among the stories told of the late Senator Chandler is the following. It is good enough to be true: Mr. Chandler had a most stalwart hatred of Don Piatt, the editor of the Washington Capital. One evening at a dinner party he was greatly incensed at comments on an attack upon him which had just appeared in that journal. It was a rainy night, and on his way home he stepped into an office in "Newspaper row." "Do you know where I can find a critter named Don Piatt?" he exclaimed, glaring at a correspondent who was seated at his desk." "Who?" "Don Piatt—a beast who writes for the Capital." "Don Piatt, you mean," suggested the correspondent. "Well, Don Piatt, then: is he around here?" "No, sir; his place is down town." "Well," said Chandler, "when you see him you may tell him I am looking for him, and when I find him I'm going to run this umbrella into him and open it," and left the room.

Cross Village now has four general stores, two good hotels, and there will soon be completed one of the largest saw mills in the county.

We see by the Eagle that Messrs Hannah, Lay & Co., have bought this year upwards of 40,000 bushels of new wheat, and that they have shipped this season 28,000 bushels.

State Treasurer Pritchard and Auditor General Latimer visited the upper peninsula to look after mining taxes. As a result of their visit, $2,500 has since been received for these taxes and more coming.

It is reported from Washington that Secretary Sherman, in his forthcoming annual report, will recommend the cancellation of a considerable portion of the greenback issue, expending its place with gold.

On the occasion of Gen. Grant's visit to the Comstock mine, Col. Fair, the superintendent, gave Mrs. Grant a little vial with $40 worth of gold dust, half of what he found in his first day's work in California in 1849.

The latest talk on a Presidential ticket is Grant and Blaine. Some who pretend to know say Blaine would accept the second place if Grant would take the first. Stranger things than this have happened, and what a ticket that would make!

Rev. Geo. Cole, of Plainwell, is trying to teach his congregation with an unnecessary habit it is for all the men in a pew to get up and file out, and thus make room for a lady, when one wishes to enter the seat. It is easier, less noisy and better all around to simply move up to the end of the seat.

Last August General Grant presented a valuable drop curtain to the manager of the principal theater in Tokio, Japan. The manager now sends in return a splendid set of bureaus, ornamented with gold lacquer.

War in South America is a mere pastime and we pay little attention to it. But now the Chilians have attacked the Peruvians with a force of from ten to eleven thousand and have driven them from Pisagua on the coast inland some ten miles where at this writing they are awaiting their enemies approach, nine thousand strong. It is said that the ruler of Tarapaca is the motive for this attack and that if successful she will turn her attention to guano deposits in the same latitude.

"The National Greenback Labor party" is the nickname of that assortment of odds and ends of agitators whose committees are called together in Washington to consult about further operations of the little that is left of the greenback but party. The Chicago Journal pertinently remarks that the Greenback movement is as much a matter of completed history as the anti-Masonry of some fifty years ago. Every position made by its users has been a grand mistake, and every one of its fundamental stones has crumbled. The use of the term "labor" in the name of the defunct party can deceive no one. Industry requires honest money. The wages class find employment now, and the currency with which they are paid has a full purchasing power. To "unite" it would be to reduce their own wages and lessen the profits of their own toil.

THE MESSAGE.

President Hayes' Third Annual Message to Congress.

His Views on the Currency Question—The Suspension of the Silver-Dollar Coinage Recommended.

He Favors the Retirement of the Legal-Tender Notes—Other Important Suggestions.

Fellow-Citizens of the Senate and House of Representatives.

The members of the Forty-sixth Congress have assembled in their first regular session under circumstances calling for mutual congratulations and grateful acknowledgment for the favor of all good for the large and essential measure of National prosperity which we now enjoy. The most interesting events which have occurred in our public affairs since my last annual message to Congress are connected with the financial operations of the Government directly affecting the business interests of the country. I may congratulate Congress on the successful execution of the law providing for the resumption of specie payments, and on the judicious manner in which the Treasury Department, under the lamented administration of my predecessor, and the able management of his successor, has conducted the business intrusted to it by the law. Since the 1st of January last they have been promptly redeemed on presentation, and all the business transactions, public and private, in all parts of the country have been conducted and paid out as the currency of coin. The declared intention of the Treasury to redeem and keep in exchange for United States notes has been conspicuously made, and the authority to issue, sell, and bullion in exchange. The notes has been very large. The excess of the receipts over disbursements during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1879, was $13,633,000, and the amount of United States notes redeemed is about $13,000,000.

The resumption of specie payments has been followed by a very great increase of business. With a currency of the exact value of the money of the commercial world, we are prepared to enter upon an equal competition with other nations in trade and production. The great increase in the demand for our merchandise and agricultural products has caused a large balance of trade in our favor, which has been paid in gold, from the 1st of July last to the 1st of the present month, to the amount of $46,000,000. Since the resumption of specie payments there has been a marked and gratifying improvement of the public credit. The issues of the Government bearing five per cent interest have sold at or above par, and invited in amount far in excess of the sum offered, which was redeemable under the present law. The amount of bonds which were taken by the process of refunding the debt since March 1, 1879, is $162,315,400. These bonds were largely in small sums, and the number of our citizens, as the public creditors, is thus in a much greater than ever before. The annual interest of the National debt reduced in less than two years, is $792,121,750, of which $3,030,000 is interest on bonds not bearing per cent, and the balance on liable hereafter per cent. During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1879, the ordinary receipts of the public debt can be reduced by the sum of four per cent. Besides this is the reduction of interest which will thus be effected the sum of $3,000,000 will be annually saved to the Treasury. To secure this important reduction of interest now paid by the United States further legislation is required, which it is hoped will be provided by Congress during its present session. The success of the refunding operations of the Treasury Department directly affecting the business interests of the country, I may congratulate Congress on the successful execution of the law providing for the refunding of the National debt, and in the manner contemplated by law. United States notes began to be issued in January, 1862. Since the 1st of January last they have been promptly redeemed on presentation, and all the business transactions, public and private, in all parts of the country have been conducted and paid out as the convenient —Philo French, the veteran hunter, returned Friday from a successful hunt on Sturgeon River, having succeeded in killing five deer in six days. He exhibited the head and antlers of a fine buck which he shot directly through the heart, at a distance of 55 rods, with his sporting rifle.

—Jackson Ingalls has lately added to his grist mill a patent corn sheller. Farmers or others, who are patrons of the mill, will be allowed the use of the corn sheller gratis. A large barn is also situated convenient to the mill, where persons with teams can find shelter for them while waiting for grists, or transacting other business at the mill.

—The sudden death of J. A. T. Wendell recently, at Point St. Ignace, will have a tendency to complicate real estate matters in some portions of the county, as he claims land in many cases by virtue of purchase from the Indians, which claims though not generally recognized, are said to furnish abundant evidence in some instances, out of which future suits may be instituted in lieu of the rejection of compromises that may be offered. He was, also the executor named in the will of Hon. T. Wendell, his brother, who died a short time since at Mackinac, and who was Judge of Probate of that county at the time of his decease. Both were influential and active men, and had long been identified with the politics of that county, J. A. T. Wendell being Supervisor of Holmes, at the time of his death.

Try a pail of our Ground Coffee it is tip-top, all-to-us. See's.

The Treasurer of Cook county, Ill. [which embraces the city of Chicago,] must be backed by wealthy men. The Treasurer recently elected presented his official bonds to the county board for approval one day last week, one as County Treasurer in the sum of $1,000,000, and another as Tax Collector of the city of Chicago in the sum of $2,000,000.

The Macon [Georgia] Telegraph is honest enough to say that nothing will kill Grant's candidacy so certainly and quick as the idea that it will be all agreeable to the Southern States. We apprehend that this explains the efforts making in certain quarters to create the impression that the South would be for Grant, if nominated. It is a sharp dodge, but few will be fooled by it.

GENERAL JEFF. C. DAVIS, of the U. S. Army, died at the Palmer House, Chicago Sunday afternoon after an illness of four days. General Davis was a private in the Mexican war, and at the breaking out of the Rebellion took an active part in the great contest, supporting the Union with all his energy and ability. He was rapidly promoted to a Generalcy and won high honor and distinction. He leaves a wife and one daughter, twelve years of age.

Bob Toombs, once a United States Senator from Georgia, was invited to attend the recent Soldiers' Reunion and Grant reception in Chicago. He didn't go, but he sent the following telegram: "Your telegram received. I decline to answer, except to say: Present my personal congratulations to General Grant on his safe arrival to his country. He fought for his country honorably, and won. I fought for mine, and lost. I am ready to try it over again. Death to the Union!"

The Catholic Archbishop of New England has issued an order to the priests in his jurisdiction for the establishment of church schools, to which Catholic parents are ordered to send their children, on pain of denunciation by the church. We do not understand the occasion of this growing hostility to our free public schools on the part of the Catholic priesthood in New England or elsewhere. Our public-school system has no sectarianism in it, and we do not see why either priest or parent should seek a quarrel with a system, the only aim and object of which is to the public the rising generation.

School Law—Official Rulings and Decisions.

The following from the Lansing Republicans of the 25th is of great interest to both teachers and officers of the schools of the State:

1. It has been held that a contract made by a majority of the members of a school board, acting individually, without meeting in their corporate capacity, and without consulting the minority, or giving such minority, an opportunity to be heard, is not binding upon the District. The individual members signing a contract in such manner make themselves personally liable.

2. Applicants for teachers' certificates at any other time than at the regular examinations should be required to pay the township superintendent for his services in holding a special examination for their benefit, unless some very good and extraordinary reason for absence from the regular examinations are given, in which case the superintendent may charge the township for his services.

3. Section 59 general school laws of 1879 makes it the positive duty of the district board to prescribe uniform text books for use in the school. If members of a district board neglect or refuse to do this they make themselves liable to the penalties prescribed in the neglect of duties. The same section of the laws also gives to district boards the authority to establish such rules and regulations as are necessary for the government and management of the school. It is held that under the provision a district board may establish such rules as will secure the adoption in the school of the prescribed text-books, even to the exclusion from school of any pupils who may refuse to provide themselves with the same. Of course, indigent pupils are to be supplied with proper books at the expense of the district.

Philadelphia is getting ready for a 5000 plated banquet to General Grant in the great Exhibition building, where all the Governors they can get together will surround him.

Polite and Impolitic.

George H. Boker of Philadelphia says he will not be a candidate for the United States senate.

Vice-president Wheeler thinks Grant will not be nominated, but will surely be elected if he be a candidate.

The unabashed Kearney, who was recently fined for carrying a revolver, says he will strap a revolver on outside of his coat and tramp the streets of San Francisco and don't you forget it.

The Columbus, Ga. Enquirer, says that Gen. Toombs is not a citizen of the Union, but the able member of a little Confederacy of his own, and is proud of it.

The Nashville American complains that the Northern Democrats have been very prompt to take the lead, and then have thrown the responsibility for blunders upon the South.

The Republican party makes no crusade against the South. It asks of the South only what it asks for the North. Free opinions, free speech, free and honest voting, free travel, complete freedom under the law—these are conceded and established in the North, and these it seeks in the South. No proscription on account of political convictions—no ostracism on account of past differences—this is the rule on one section, and Republicans only ask that it be made the rule of all. Their principle simply is that it shall be as safe to be a Republican in Mississippi as it is to be a Democrat in Michigan. Is this unreasonable?

The game of Authors at the postoffice.

Look out for Lewis & Acker's new ad vertisement next week.

Mrs. A. M. Parmenter, lately received as a gift, a fine new bureau from our cabinet maker, Kirkpatrick.

Remember the masquerade ball on Christmas night. White and Richardson are to furnish the music.

We call attention to the new advertisement of Dickinson & Emery in this issue. They report a growing trade.

Geo. W. Crouter has a new advertisement in this issue concerning Christmas gifts—a matter in which all are interested.

Rev. John S. Dixon has a lecture in preparation to deliver before the Charlevoix Historical Society the last Monday of this month.

The M. E. Church is to have a Christmas tree in the shape of a full rigged ship and Hon. E. H. Green is to address the Sunday School.

Lewis, son of Rev. A. M. Parmenter of this place, was lately presented with a fine six octave melodeon by a friend in Grand Rapids.

The Baptist Church society at Boyne is receiving considerable assistance from friends outside in the erection of their Church. The Methodists have their new parsonage well along.

Lewis & Acker will soon be in their new store. A large force of carpenters are finishing up, and the painter is close upon their heels. The Dr. has a fine building, and very neat rooms.

Cash for Tile, Etc. T. B. Dutcher has an advertisement in this issue. Mr. Dutcher wants large quantities of cedar ties and telegraph poles, and pays cash for same. He may be found at the Fountain City House.

Rev. Geo. W. Woon, of this place, has received from the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, an appointment as Missionary to the Dakota Indians, and will remove there with his family soon. Mr. Wood will prove a zealous and faithful Missionary, and his friends here wish him God speed.

Religious.—Rev. N. L. Otis left yesterday for Gaylord to attend the congregational District Conference. He will be absent during this week. He is accompanied by Daniel H. Pierce, of Hayes, Township, who goes as a delegate from the Church, in Banks, he having recently united with that organization.

Fox, Rose & Butters will take your measure for clothes when they are not able to fit you.

Willard A. Smith, of the Charlevoix Sentinel, an ever-welcome visitor, was in town Friday, and on his brow was no shade of sorrow or care notwithstanding his town was recently worked up by the "conquering hero," who informed him that 1,000 patent (?) letter heads were his'n, upon the insertion of his card, and the payment of the usual fee.—Petoskey Record.

School Teachers.—Three of the rising young men of Charlevoix have schools under their charge in country districts—Chester See at Advance; Will See at Sedan, and Henry Cooper in John Hammond's district. The muscular young men learning grammar or those pedagogues, want to be careful about rebelling, or they may find their heels knocking together.

Almost a Fire.—On Wednesday afternoon, M. J. Stockman looking accidentally in that direction saw sparks issuing from the roof of H. C. Nettleton's residence across the harbor. The alarm was given and soon a lively procession of our citizens was hastening to the scene, armed with pails. The fire was promptly extinguished, after a hole about two feet had been burned. It originated from a flu chimney.

The Postmaster General has issued an order that on and after Jan. 1st, 1880, Atwood postoffice will be embraced in the mail route between Charlevoix and Elk Rapids, and Antrim City omitted. Placing Atwood back on the route is doing what ought to have been done long ago, as the section of country around it is naturally tributary to Charlevoix, and a direct mail communication is necessary for the interests of all concerned.

South Arm.—The head of the Arm froze over on the night of the 12th, and people are crossing on the ice.

—The recent heavy rain did considerable damage to mills in this vicinity. D. A. Sholes' mill near Intermediate, has washed out and gone down stream a complete wreck. Vance's mill on Intermediate is undermined and part of the dam washed out.

—Monroe has the piles driven for his dam on the Jordan.

Common Council.—At the meeting of the Common Council Saturday evening, the committee on streets were allowed further time to investigate the north side street matter.

The committee on Licenses were instructed to ascertain if the liquor bond of Geo. Hethune is in force.

In these winter meetings of the Council when very little business is brought before them, much of the time is spent in pleasant and elevating conversation. Historical and scientific subjects especially are discussed. On Saturday evening, after adjournment an hour was spent very pleasantly in this way.

Married.—At the residence of the bride's parents, in Charlevoix, Dec. 11, by Rev. B. H. Whitman, Mr. Byron W. Miller, to Miss Kate Carpenter, both of Charlevoix.

The wedding was a private one, and was only attended by the immediate relatives of the young couple. As a graduate of the Sentinel office, Byron has a special claim on our editorial good wishes, and as a prince of good fellows, he receives those of the entire community, among whom he has developed from a "crazy" young printer's devil to a tall young gentleman with dimly discernable side-whiskers and a home of his own. The bride has many friends in Charlevoix who will mentally throw their shoe after her for a life of happiness. A generous supply of wedding cake graces our table, and we extend both hands and pronounce our benison with the unction of a god-parent. Billy, God bless you and yours! The happy couple will occupy their fine new residence this week.

You will find the nicest selection of ladies' and gents' silk handkerchiefs and gents' scarfs that is in town, at Fox, Rose & Butters.

Norwood Notes.

It has been decided to have a Christmas tree in connection with the Sabbath school, and arrangements are progressing to that effect. The public, however, are desired to be in attendance, and to make use of the tree for the bestowing of their presents. Efforts will be made to make it an occasion of interest. The evening has not yet been definitely fixed, but further notice will be given.

Colds, coughs, and sore throats have been of general complaint for the last week or two, but no serious results are apprehended.

Mr. F. J. Mueh went to South Arm on business this week,—and it stormed.

The steamer Leland was observed passing Friday, on her way to Elk Rapids, from Escanaba, Mich.

Our school will take a vacation of two weeks during the holiday season, during which time all studying, or other intellectual effort, calculated to disturb the given the enjoyment of the holiday festivities, is strictly forbidden; under no less a penalty than our worthy preceptress, Miss Nellie E. Mueh, acting under the school laws of the State of Michigan, may see cause to inflict.

Personal.—J. Milo Eaton returned home from East Saginaw Friday.

—Wm. Nelson of Boyne Falls, was in town yesterday.

—Rev. A. M. Parmenter gave us a pleasant call Friday.

—A. Bottara leaves to day to spend the holidays at Port Huron, where his mother, sister, and daughter are now visiting with his brother.

Don't forget that we have got the largest and nicest stock of ladies' ties cashna, leggings and knit jackets at Fox, Rose & Butters.

Notice!

There is now in pound at the Village of Charlevoix, two neat cattle which are detained for ranging at large contrary to a By Law of said Township which prohibits cattle from running at large between Dec. 1st, to April 1st, each year. Description.—One cow light red or mouse color with piece of tail cut off. One red calf with some white on face, &c.

Ex-Gov. Bagley was among the guests and one of the speakers at the Commercial Club banquet in Chicago last Saturday evening, given in honor of General Grant. Gov. Bagley responded to the toast, "Our Inland and Foreign Commerce," and the papers represented at the gathering speak very highly of his speech.

If the people don't stop insisting upon daily and nightly receptions and banquets and little speeches and handshaking pretty soon, General Grant, in the desperation of self defense, will have to pray to be saved from his friends and either stay at home or travel incognito. The worst enemies the General has had to encounter since the war are the lion-hunters and the hero-worshipers, and those are worse than a pestilence.

The Democrats in Congress have come to the present session with the flag of distress at the mast-head. If they renew the contest of last Spring they challenge the same fate over again. If, on the other hand, they abandon their own issues, they confess their crimes and their failure. Still worse, they have no other rallying cries to substitute. Between these difficulties, they are utterly destitute of a policy and have only the desperate hope that some chance may somehow spring up.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Domestic.

AN immense meeting was held in Chicago on the evening of the 1st to express sympathy for the land-reformers of Ireland. Speeches were made by several prominent gentlemen, and an address, setting forth the oppression under which the Irish people suffer and requesting the moral and material support of all Americans, was adopted.

THE coinage at the United States Mints during November was $3,000,185 in gold, $2,000,000 standard silver, and $31,230 minor coins; total, $5,439,415.

THE published statement, issued on the 1st, shows the following: Total debt (including interest of $21,150,295), $2,235,267,418. Cash in Treasury, $207,376,888. Decrease less amount in Treasury, $2,016,902,732. Decrease during November, $709,925. December drain, June 30, 1879, $11,337,000.

THE Catholic Bishop of Boston has given his views in regard to public schools, in a communication published in Boston on the 2d. He urges the faithful to make every effort in order to establish institutions where possible, and if such schools do not exist, to establish them; but he does not advocate extreme opposition or other severe measures in the case of those who disregard his advice.

COLONEL, or White Horse Dog, testified before the Peace Commission at Los Pinos on the 1st, and then voluntarily surrendered himself a prisoner. He said that Independent was the leader who took Mrs. Price prisoner, who claimed to her that he was an Uncompahgre Ute. General Hatch's theory that hostilities between the Indians and the soldiers was an accident was clearly proven, the Indians had left the main road to avoid the soldiers, and if Major Thornburgh had kept the main road he would have reached the agency unmolested. Colonel Lee's letter to Secretary Morgan was then presented in full, a synopsis of which was published in this paper last week. Colonel Lee's letter to the Indians coming into the agency, and seemed inclined to testify more freely.

GEORGIA is in the very throes of a blue-ribbon Temperance agitation. In atleasta three thousand people have taken the pledge, and one county has voted for prohibition.

A RALEIGH (N. C.) dispatch of the 3d says that 2,000 colored men would leave that State for Indiana before spring.

ON the 3d Secretary Sherman issued a circular inviting proposals for the sale to the Government of $1,000,000 of the six per cent. interest-bearing bonds of the United States, known as "5-20s of 1881." The bonds thus to be purchased will be applied to the sinking fund.

AT Smithport, Pa., on the 4th Andrew Tracy was found guilty of killing Mary Reilly, his cousin, whom the rules of the Catholic Church, to which both belonged, would not allow him to marry. The first attempt at hanging was a failure, the knot untying, and Tracy falling to the ground uninjured. The knot was readjusted, and this time he was satisfactorily executed.

THE Ute Chief Jack reached the White River Agency on the 3d, and at the date of the dispatch, which was received on the following day, was testifying freely. The Commissioners were confident they would arrive at the truth of the matter.

OWING to the great demand for ornamental bronze pieces the Philadelphia Mint turned out over 3,000,000 pieces of that denomination during November, and the demand still continues.

AN ANSONIA (Conn.) man named Upton returned home drunk, on the night of the 4th, and threw at his wife a flatiron lamp, which fell into the cradle, and a child was burned to death. The wife, in endeavoring to save the child, was fatally burned.

THE steamer Labrador, which reached New York on the 4th, brought $1,422,000 in gold, and the Suevia, $475,000.

THE Secretary of the Interior decided on the 5th that the benefits of the Timber-culture law may be secured by planting cotton-wood trees. This reverses a previous ruling.

THE Board of Managers of the New York Produce Exchange issued an order on the 5th that the centre system, so far as it relates to grain, shall go into effect on the 24th inst.

ON the night of the 6th the burning of a grain and lime mill at Brockton, Mass., gave way, precipitating three men and about 8,000 bushels of corn into the cellar beneath. The men were buried up in the grain and lime. Two were rescued alive, three corpses were taken from the cellar.

CHIEF JACK, in his testimony before the Commissioners on the 5th, stated that the removal of the agency was the commencement of the recent troubles; that at an elevation of 8,700 feet, with frost every month in the year, farming was impossible; that he and his band received no rations for a year, which he claimed was a violation of the treaty of 1868; that the Indians, seeing the troops were a fair fight. He called Honorable Nathaniel Merrill a white man would, under the same circumstances, have fought Thornburgh.

IT was stated on the 6th that Secretary Sherman's proposal to purchase $1,000,000 of the bonds known as 6s of 1881 for the sinking fund had elicited offers of $1,670,000, at prices ranging from 104 to 107.

A FIRE at Troy, N. Y., on the 7th destroyed a number of shirt and collar factories, inflicting a loss of over $500,000, and throwing about 1,500 men and women out of employment.

SECRETARY SHERMAN received a dispatch from Los Pinos on the 6th stating that the Commission had closed the testimony relative to the White River troubles and had dismissed the attendants of the parties recently tried at the mission. The list included the head chief Douglas. The Indians were holding a council relative to the removal.

A PAVILION attached to the Bellevue Hospital in New York was destroyed by fire on the night of the 6th, and twelve children were burned to death and several female patients were severely injured.

Personal and Political.

THE President, on the 1st, made the following nominations, among others, to the senate: George W. McCrary, of Iowa, to be United States Judge in the Eighth Circuit; William H. Hayes, of Kentucky, to be United States District Judge of the District of Kentucky; Charles G. Bonnet, to be Chief Justice of Arizona Territory, Norman Buck, of Idaho, to be Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Idaho Territory.

THE New York Inspector of Elections convicted of making false returns of the election in 1878, was sentenced on the 1st to imprisonment for eighteen months.

THE Democrats elected their ticket in the municipal election in New Haven, Conn., on the 3d.

THE Trustees of the church in New York where Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage preaches have voted to withdraw from the Presbytery because of the alleged "persecutions to which their pastor has been subjected."

ON the evening of the 3d ex-President Grant arrived in Chicago, where, it was stated, he would remain for a week and then start for the South and East.

ACCORDING to New Orleans (La.) dispatches of the 3d Wiltz (Democrat) for Governor had received a majority of 20,000. The Legislature was also largely Democratic. The new Constitution was believed to have been adopted by an equally decisive vote.

A RESOLUTION was adopted in the United States Senate on the 3d to continue for the present the Standing and Select Committees appointed at the last session, with but two changes—Mr. Ferry to take the place of the late Mr. Chandler on the Committee on Naval Affairs, and Mr. Baldwin (the new Senator from Michigan) to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Chandler's death, on the Committee on Commerce.

THE Kellogg-Spofford Investigating Committee finished its labors in New Orleans on the 3d, and adjourned to meet in Washington to prepare their report.

THE seventieth anniversary of the birthday of Oliver Wendell Holmes was celebrated on the 3d at Boston, by a breakfast, at which Emerson, Longfellow and a number of other men of letters of note gathered in honor to the author and his generation.

ON the afternoon of the 4th application was made to the State Supreme Court upon the petition of Andrew R. G. Smith, Senator-elect from Lincoln County, and Nathan T. Hill, Senator-elect from Hancock County, asking the court to issue a rule of court to the Secretary of State, commanding him to appear before said court December 9, and show cause why he should not give said Senators access to the returns of the Senatorial votes of their respective districts, and an opportunity to examine the same, and for a writ of mandamus to issue against said Secretary. The Judge issued the order.

AT a meeting on the 5th of a committee of Republican Senators appointed to decide upon a committee to be appointed at the present session of Congress it was almost unanimously decided to recommend that no action whatever be taken affecting paper money.

Foreign.

CARDINAL MANNING on the 1st issued a stirring appeal for contributions to relieve the distress in Ireland. It is stated that in the west of the island such hunger, poverty and want have not been known since the great Irish famine.

A BERLIN dispatch of the 1st says negotiations between Bismarck and the Vatican have been suddenly closed, as Bismarck would not agree to the restoration of the German Bishops. These seemed to be every probability that the old struggles were recommencing.

DISPATCHES from Winnepeg (Manitoba) received on the 1st report the Canadian Indians as becoming troublesome. They were coming into the settlements, demanding food, and threatened to take it by force if it were not given them.

AT Constantinople on the 2d an unknown man entered a room occupied by the medical board of the Turkish army, and began an indiscriminate attack upon the members with fire-arms. Before he could be arrested he shot four of them.

A ST. PETERSBURG dispatch of the 31 says the Czar had decided to form a Council to be made up of nobles appointed by the Emperor and members of the nobility and peasant classes chosen by ballot. The body thus constituted will have advisory powers only.

THE British Government has removed the restriction on the importation of American cheese.

THE London Times of the 2d says the Canadian Government had decided to appoint a Minister Resident in London, and who will also be a member of the Cabinet, and says Sir A. T. Galt had been appointed.

ST. PETERSBURG telegrams of the 3d give the details of the recent attempt upon the life of the Czar. It appears that the conspirators had dug a tunnel 150 feet long extending from an unoccupied house to the cellar of the railroad-shed, and in this had placed wires connecting at one end with a battery and with a large quantity of powder at the other. The train carrying the Czar left St. Petersburg in the rear of the train carrying his baggage, but before reaching Moscow the position of the two was reversed, and the powder was fired just as the baggage train was over the mine. The train was almost entirely wrecked, and several officials on board were badly hurt. So great was the force of the explosion that a hole was created in the road-bed five feet deep, eighteen broad and sixteen long. Great excitement prevailed throughout the Empire, and the Czar was in constant receipt of congratulatory messages.

A WAR has broken out in Western Africa between rival chiefs, in which two hundred persons have already been killed, and all the prisoners on both sides cooked and eaten.

A DUBLIN dispatch of the 3d says the principal Irish merchants are actively engaged in relieving the distress in Ireland.

ON the 4th, by a vote of 240 to 107, the French Chamber of Deputies declared its confidence in the Ministry, the latter threatened to resign if the vote of confidence were not given.

REV. ARTHUR WAGNER, a distinguished Church of England clergyman of Brighton, Eng., has seceded and joined the Catholic Church.

A BERLIN dispatch of the 5th says the famine in Upper Silesia had become so serious that in many villages utter starvation of the populations were staring.

THE London Times, in its financial article on the 4th, says that United States Government bonds were hardly to be got there, and their prices were a mere redex of those of New York.

THE French Government has directed the Governor of Senegal, Western Africa, to send an expedition to explore the region lying between the Upper Senegal and Niger Rivers and report on the feasibility of the construction of a railway between the two rivers.

ACCORDING to Alexandria dispatches of the 5th the Egyptian Government was actively preparing for war with Abyssinia.

SEVERAL of the native Afghans appointed by the British to govern the districts in Afghanistan lately been murdered by soldiers belonging to the ex-Ameer's army.

AT Dublin, Ireland, on the 5th Thomas Brennan, a leading land agitator, was arrested for seditious utterances, and taken to Castlebar.

ACCORDING to St. Petersburg dispatches of the 7th the Czar was greatly depressed over recent events. His Majesty only had returned, and at times almost evaded his duties.

DURING a recent cyclone in the Bay of Bengal a tidal-wave swept over the island of Sonkidehal and drowned several hundred of the inhabitants.

CETTINJE dispatches of the 6th say that several thousand Albanians had that day attacked the Montenegrins at Vrilka. After heavy fighting, in which both sides lost heavily, the Albanians were defeated and driven off.

THE sudden rise of the river Koros, in Hungary, has inundated and almost depopulated the city of Grosswardein.

XLVIth Congress.

THE Senate was called to order at noon on the 1st by Vice-President Wheeler, and prayer was offered by the Chaplain. Messrs. Anthony and Bayard were appointed a Committee to wait on the President, in conjunction with the House Committee, and inform him that Congress was assembled. The President's Message was received and read. Mr. Davis then formally announced the death of his late colleague, Senator Chandler, of New Hampshire, which took place at Detroit on December 1, and after paying a tribute to his memory moved that the Senate do now adjourn. The motion prevailed, and the Senate adjourned. The roll of members present and absent was called, and the New York case of the two Senators was presented. The President's Special message was received and read, and together with accompanying documents was referred to the Committee on Privileges.

IN the Senate on the 2d Mr. Gordon introduced a joint resolution, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, declaring that the Government pledges to accord such aid and protection to the Texas Pacific Railroad as is granted concession to the Southern Pacific Railroad, by the resolution of the American Congress, and that such protection, if an interoceanic Canal in that country, and will receive every Congress and Executive encouragement and support. Mr. Gordon also introduced a joint resolution providing for the purchase of one silver dollar of each design, date and mint of coinage of the United States, to be deposited in the Museum of the Smithsonian Institution. Mr. Hill introduced a resolution directing the Secretary of the Treasury to report to the Senate the number of persons employed in the several branches of the public service in the District of Columbia, and the number of persons employed in the several States and Territories, and the number of persons employed in the several States and Territories, and the number of persons employed in the several States and Territories

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1879.

FOR PRESIDENT IN 1880,

ULYSSES S. GRANT.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8, 1879.

The inconveniences of being too sociable have been felt by a score or two respectable married country merchants of the name of Blair. He, it appears, formed the acquaintance of two fascinating females on a Boston boat, and with one of them had some passages of a very tender, not to say soft, nature. More and more infatuated, this respectable man made an appointment to eat his Thanksgiving dinner with his charmer. She was married, to a large German, who somehow got it in his head that Blair carried a considerable sum of money on him. The results of the dinner were that Blair, who had swallowed considerable beer and sausages with Teutonic voracity, became deathly sick. According to fascinating female No. 2, who forthwith posted off to the nearest police station, the poor man was poisoned. She says the idea at first was for the German to surprise Blair with his wife, and Lucifer, him into paying roundly for his indiscretion. As, on the occasion of his visit, he delayed falling into that trap, a new plan suggested itself to the ingenious husband. This was for the wife to poison her unsuspecting guest, while he took up a strategic position under the bed, and to share the corpse, dress it in the meanest rags and deposit it in the cellar, so as to give the impression that some poor tramp had crawled in to die. The case occupied a week in the preliminary investigation, and the prisoners have been committed to trial. The accuser, who according to her own confession has been in the State Prison and the Penitentiary repeatedly, and will not swear that she has not been arrested over fifty times, has been locked up for safe keeping as a witness. So, too, has the alleged victim of the conspiracy for some days. A benevolent Brooklyn lady of wealth has at last come forward as security for his appearance when wanted; but, whether poisoned or not, Mr. Blair must feel that Thanksgiving dinners are, as a rule, likely to be more digestible at home than in the retired apartments of casual female travelers.

It has puzzled every one why Mr. Vanderbilt should have sacrificed such an immense block of N. Y. Central stock to a syndicate of bankers and former rivals, and he has been persistently interviewed on behalf of the great daily metropolitan journals. It is needless to say the results of the pumping have been dry enough. Truth may lie at the bottom of that deep well, but it is well covered in with dust enough to blind the keenest eyes. Rumors of the departure to Europe of the railroad king have been rife. These he pronounces entirely profounded. Perhaps the explanation of the whole matter is that he was bulldozed into the measure by formidable threats of cut-throat competition by a powerful combination of men, who, together, were well able to carry it out. The fact that he has acquired large interests in Western roads connecting with the one left him by the old Commodore lends color to this view. It may look odd enough for any one to give up eight per cent. interest upon which an investment as he held and to purchase stock of far less value, but Vanderbilt is a far-sighted man, and it is probable will make a great deal more money eventually by the operation than if he had held on to his own stock and found it now knock the bottom out of his western feeders into another channel.

Two new morning penny papers have just made their appearance. Starting a daily paper is quite an undertaking in these days, and even with large capital behind them disasters has overtaken more than one venture of the kind since the panic of 1873, notably in the case of the ambitious and really excellently conducted Republic. The Postal Card is the title of one of the new candidates for the favor of people who like cheap reading. The other, Truth, is conducted by the bright aggressive free lance C. A. Byrne, who graduated as a reporter on the New York Herald, and special sensational Saturday contributor for the Sunday Mercury, and subsequently and recently edited the Dramatic News. He is one of those men who is perpetually in hot water, but comes out of the trouble all the fresher for it, and his is more interesting reading. He knows just where to get his raw material and how to serve it up in the spiciest manner.

Buying a pig in a poke is generally considered unbusinesslike and rather rash and imprudent. It sometimes turns out well. Purchasers of sundries left unclaimed at our express companies' offices have occasionally an opportunity of trying their luck. At a sale recently held, where no one was allowed to examine the goods of "dead-head" in the complacent ignorance of anything beyond the outside appearance of the packages, some excellent bargains were made. A bid of $410 for a plain pine box covered on three sides with cheap worsted for the happy lover, and so it went on, all prices, and no blanks. Few who bought anything had reason to feel they had lost the very small sums they put up. Some unfortunates, however, locked pretty blue and sore well pitied when they opened neat little boxes for which they had paid per haps $5 and found the contents to be new shoes.

There seems to be some danger that we may have a revival of rampant Fenianism here. Several prominent Irish agitators are on the way, and no doubt will strive like their predecessors to raise no little stir in the shape of public meetings and processions, and as much purse cash as the Britishers and the males of their social status and species can conveniently or inconveniently dispense. The Irish peasant is a warm-hearted creature, with a short memory for injuries, and the disgraceful misuse of the money formerly so freely subscribed has by this time utterly forgotten. Some of the more influential and wealthy backers of the agitators in Canada and emissaries in the old country are not, on the other hand, very likely to be again victimized. I have seen two who were a few years back among the most active and generous partisans of the cause, who now declare they will set their faces against any present attempt on a like nature. Fenianism is played out with them.

Our Sandy Hook fishermen have had a good view of what they unanimously declare to be a real sea serpent, which was calmly coasting along the shore. It is described as at least three hundred feet long, with a head as large as a hogshead, brilliant eyes as large as soup plates, and a tail like that of a big eel. At last accounts a fleet of deserters had put out in vigorous pursuit of the unusual guest. They did not catch it.

One of our colossal forgers of respectable family, with enticing opportunities for stealing, which he promptly availed himself of, has just been pardoned out of State Prison. It is William C. Gilman, a nephew of Henry Ward Beecher, and brother-in-law to Rev. Houghton, the actors' chaplain in ordinary of the Little Church Around the Corner, a very pious and generous pillar of that church, who got "sent up" a year or so ago amid the tears of a weeping courtroom. The judge, district-attorney, jurors, everybody, deluged their pocket handkerchiefs with briny evidences of their sorrow for the necessity of punishing so very estimable and high-toned a person. His daughter died three weeks ago, and no heartbroken wife, falling in her agonized appeals for mercy to Gov. Robinson, died a few days ago. Then the obduracy of the Executive melted and the convict, who had a "soft thing" in a clerical capacity during the portion which he served of the term to which he had been sentenced, was released in order to attend his wife's funeral.

The Seventh Regiment Fair proved such a grand success that the gallant militiamen determined to keep it open a week longer. The treasury has been filled to an extent far beyond anything supposed to be at all probable. The exact figures or even an approximation to them, have been carefully withheld. There is strong rivalry between several of the companies. The members of each have strained every nerve to establish and maintain a prominence in transient popularity and to secure the largest contributions. In order to avoid giving limits to their competitors for the shekels brought along by the ostensibly fashionable throng of sightseers, the utmost secrecy has been observed. The total must have mounted up to something immense. Probably there never was a fair so thoroughly thronged by the best people, quite solvent and warmed into liberality, partly from the necessity, or at least tendency, of well-to-do people being in the fashion, and partly because the actual services of the regiment have been very generally thought to deserve such practical recognition. RADIX.

That Grant and an empire, a splendid prize to be won and a foreign war, are familiar topics of speculation in the south, is an undoubted fact; and further, it is true, that a considerable section of the southern mind regards them with complacency, if not with hope.—Louisville Journal.

FREDERICK THE GREAT AT THE BATTLE OF LEUTHEN.

BY O. F. WISNER.

If you find me slain in battle
Place your tassels on the corse,
That my friends may know me after,
Though I'm trampled on by horse;
Whisper not a word to any,
Tell them not that I am slain;
Till the battle's fought and won,
Then we'll sing a loud refrain.

Thus the Prussian King his order,
To the noble Zicthen gave;
Lest he 'mong the many fallen
Should be placed in unknown grave.
And the gallant Zicthen listened
To the order of the King,
As he rode beside the hero
'Mid the clash of sabres ring.

Now the hero gallops faster,
Faster 'mid the shot and shell,
And around him like the dew-leaves
Of the autumn, soldiers fell.
Fell they in the ranks of battle
Near their monarchs flashing eye;
Till the field ran scarlet
Blushing 'neath the golden sky.

Charging squadrons sweeping madly,
Meet with charging squadrons brave,
Gleaming sabres falling swiftly,
Clears a passage to the grave.
Austrians with the Prussians mingled,
Fight like demons in the strife;
Whilst the cannon thunders louder
On the columns full of life.

Though the sun is sinking lower,
Still the battle bleeds again;
Like the streamlets newly swollen
Deadlier seemed now the plain.
Lo! the shadows now are drawing
Sombre curtains all around,
And the Austrians beaten fairly
Backward rolls retreating sound.

Hark! the anthem of the Prussians
Rises high above the slain;
Wafted upward, onward over
All the crippled battle plain.
And the Prussian King rejoicing
For the victory gained at last,
Smiles when told of order given
How the mantle should be cast.

The Southern Plea for Grant.

"After Grant? The empire, by G——! I am ready for it."—Robert Toombs in interview.

The Democratic party of the south is not ready to indorse Grantism.—[Knoxville, Tenn., Tribune.

The south has nothing but indignity to expect at the hands of Gen. Grant.—[Charlotte, N. C., Observer.

Out of about 130 Democratic newspapers in Georgia, there is not one that would touch Grant with a 40-foot pole.—[Augusta, Ga., Chronicle.

Nothing will kill Grant's candidacy so certainly and quickly as the idea that it will be at all agreeable to the southern states.—[Macon Telegraph.

The people of the south are getting weary about Grant. It's Grant! Grant! Grant! everywhere! Blaine and Sherman have no chance.—[Ex-congressman Schumaker, Dem.

The people of Georgia and the south know too well the character of Grant and his surroundings to consent that he shall be President again.—[Atlanta, Ga., Chronicle.

Peace can no more be restored between the sections with Grant as the Republican candidate than it can be with Jeff Davis as the Democratic candidate.—[Memphis Appeal.

The people of Georgia and the south prefer a constitutional President, even though he may be a Republican, to a dictator, even though the dictator may be the goddike Grant.—[Atlanta, Ga., Chronicle.

Grant is the representative of the Radical party; to be ruled by that party, would be despised in the south. Grant as an emperor, who, with his strong hand, wresting the power from hypocritical, fanatical New England by force, would be tolerated.—[Lynchburg, Va., News.

The Mormon delegate in congress, Cannon, of Utah, speaking of the proposition made by the President to disfranchise all persons who practise polygamy, remarked that: "The Mormon leaders are mostly Democrats, and of course their disfranchisement would go far toward destroying their political power." He also said that: "The party in power" [the Republicans] "knowing that the political convictions of the people of Utah are against them, are anxious to take every legitimate means to defeat our plans for admission to the Union." Here is a direct statement, made by the Mormon delegate in congress, that "The Mormon leaders are mostly Democrats," also that the Mormon people are opposed to the Republicans, and, therefore, are Democrats, in their political opinions. This statement is the truth. The polygamists are Democrats; the same as the moonshiners, the ballotstuffers, and other criminal classes. Whoever is opposed to the laws of the country is naturally a Democrat.

St. Helena, the distant island which obtained a melancholy celebrity as the prison and, for many years, the burial place of the great Napoleon, is now seldom visited. Formerly it was a stopping place for the ships bound from India, but since the opening of the Suez canal it has wholly outside the track of vessels. Its popula tion has fallen off one-half in consequence, and a correspondent, who visited it recently, gives a dreary account of its condition and appearance. By one tradition is the residence of the great emperor.

The Chicago Times publishes the following description of the character of the "high toned" Confederate Democratic majority in congress, from the pen of one of their own correspondents. The Democratic party, the party of the south, the party of the Democratic citizens of the country:

For instance, it is as common as living as senators and members who don't pay their debts. That is to say, the small, dirty debts that no gentleman ever affects to refuse. A member of congress from Kentucky, not long ago, employed a poor colored woman for a year to do his washing. The washing was very limited, to be sure, and so was the pay, as the poor woman never received anything but three cents for her year's work. To collect such a small sum, and to tax upon many stress, would be an unworthy pursuit. Stories that poor people toil of extra work done for senators and members, for which they never received anything, are very numerous. It has long ago ceased to be a matter of responsibility, up town, for a man to say he is a member of congress, or a senator, so far as contracting for a bill is concerned. The fact that there are plenty of senators and members who owe bills which they never pay, is especially outside of attention from the fact that a man who is capable of that sort of thing is capable of most anything else. The man who sends his washerwoman to certainly not above being bought to vote in the interest of some job.

A FIGHT WITH A CAGED DOG.

A Siberian Blood-hound Saves a Savage Attack Upon Its Confined Keeper—A Desperate Struggle.

SOME time ago ex-Judge Tree, of Brooklyn, became the possessor of the Siberian blood-hound "Satan," known to sporting men throughout the country as a ferocious fighter. But the dog was so treacherous in his disposition that ex-Judge Tree turned him over to Fleiring in his office. Mr. E. Fleiring, who, having been an athletic performer in a number of circuses, had become accustomed to entering the cages of wild beasts under the instructions of a number of animal trainers. Mr. Fleiring agreed to take the dog to his father's premises in Arcadia, near Alabama avenue, East New York, providing the ex-Judge Tree would pay for the animal's keeping. Mr. Tree willingly consented to this, and a cage ten feet long, seven feet wide and ten feet high was constructed in Mr. Fleiring's garden, and "Satan" was placed in it. On Wednesday, two or three weeks ago, "Satan" began to howl, as was his custom when he wanted food or water. Fleiring went into the garden to feed the dog accompanied by half a dozen persons, curious to see the animal fed. After giving the dog meat, Fleiring procured some water, stepped with it into the cage, and then held the cup up to the animal. He usually went into the cage to feed the animal, and always, on such occasions, carried a heavy loaded rattan with him. On this occasion he had neglected to take the whip with him. Hearing set the pail of water on the floor for the dog, who seemed disinclined to drink, refused to be petted, and walked restlessly up and down the cage.

Hearing saw that "Satan" was in one of his worst humors, and turned to go out of the cage. He had no sooner turned his back than the animal sprang upon him. Hearing threw himself to one side, but the dog's jaws struck him on the shoulder, and the next instant he and the dog were locked together in a deadly embrace. Hearing sprang quickly to his feet, and the dog jumped at him and sunk its teeth into the man's right arm. Hearing, quick as lightning, pitched the dog over on his back and was preparing to jump on his paws, as the brute recovered himself and sprang at Hearing's throat. With one hand Hearing grasped the dog's leg, and with the other caught him by the upper eyelid, and at the same time got his hold until he had torn the animal's scalp to the back of the head. The dog fell back with Hearing on top. Both got their feet and Hearing sprang for the gate of the cage.

The dog dashed at him again, and Hearing clinched the brute, and tried to set his teeth into his shaggy neck. He failed, but caught the dog's ear with his teeth; and held on until he had cut it off, and then he hurled the brute to the floor and fell himself.

The dog rushed at Hearing again, just as he was getting up, and bit him in the left hand. Hearing thrust his hand into the brute's throat and tried to choke him. In the struggle both fell again, and the dog lacerated Hearing's left hand.

"Unbolt the gate, quick!" shouted Hearing to the men, who were standing fifty feet away, but no one dared come to the rescue.

Hearing then threw himself on the dog and set his teeth into his throat, and at the same time grasped the dog by the upper jaw with his right hand, pressing down the lower jaw with his left arm until the flesh at the sides of the dog's mouth was torn by the strain. Dog and man struggled about the cage for at least five minutes. At last they reached the door. Hearing still keeping his teeth fixed in the animal's neck, lifted him up and pitched him against the side of the cage. Then with his right hand he unbolted the door of the cage, and got outside, at the same time drawing the dog's head through and closing the gate on his neck. Then he pressed upon the gate with all his might. He held the dog in this way until he felt his strength failing, and then, letting go the dog's neck with his teeth, he opened the gate quickly, and, with a quick jerk, he hooked the dog inside and closed and locked the gate.

Both Hearing and the dog were covered with blood. Hearing's lacerated hand bled fast, and blood was running from the brute's throat. Dr. Allen was sent for, and he dressed Hearing's wounds. Four of the veins in his hand were found to have been torn, and they have begun to bleed afresh twice since they were dressed. Hearing had to be removed to Dr. Allen's house for constant medical treatment. He was rapidly improving at last accounts. He says he regrets that a member of the family poisoned the dog, for if it had recovered from the wound in its throat he intended to enter the cage, armed with a heavy whip, and beat the animal into submission.—N. Y. Sun.

Gentlemen—We churned one gallon of cream to-day at a temperature of 60 deg., using your Gilt Edge Butter Maker. Time of churning, 15 minutes; result, 64 pounds of butter. Color, good. As we have not previously weighed our butter, I cannot say exactly whether there is a better per cent. or not, but appearances indicate it, and the quality is at least two cents per pound better.

JOY TO INVALIDS

To those tired of taking medicine we desire to say that a system of remedial mechanical movement has been discovered that generates and transmits to the system electricity—the natural forces which in them transformed into vital energy, and physical power or strength, in fact was the energy on the system is rapidly built up, the system receiving positive supplies of strength from instrumental sources. No other method of treatment known to medical science can accomplish this result, as they are all dependent upon the physical power or strength generated within the system, which medicines only promote, but cannot create except in a very limited degree.

The treatment of nervous prostration, nervous debility, sexual impotency, &c., is a specialty with the Institute, and is curing Paralysis, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Tumors, and Chronic, Nervous, Blood and Skin Diseases.

Letters of Consultation are promptly returned for a very few applications, and the charges are moderate. No patient who consults us by letter need be afraid to leave this treatment applied. Home appliances are sent to patients who cannot visit the Institute, and through the medium they receive the same attention as though they visited the Institute in person. Lady attendants are in charge for persons not entirely desirous as a personal interview. Send for pamphlet containing full information as a Remedial Agent. AGRICULTURAL AND DOMESTIC.

A LIVERPOOLER in France has fed his stock for twenty years on parsnips, instead of carrots and oats, with remarkable success. They show great vivacity, clear skin and the absence of acne.

NO merchant can always fully do business unless he keeps his accounts clearly. A farmer ought to know how much each crop costs him, and thereby they keep and how their temper, when they become clumsy and [illegible].

A hundred other instances might be adduced to show the deprivation of paying attention to these "little things." The real economist, however, needs but a hint, while the unintentionally careless are slow to see their errors.—Scientific American.

A Short Essay on Washing.

Experienced house keepers very seldom give clear and positive directions to those who [illegible]. Their answers seems to be the result of some mechanical process, [illegible]. Experiment and uncertainty appear to be required in reaching positive knowledge in regard to housework, and that knowledge which must dwell with the discoverer.

Whose desires to escape all unnecessary labor in one important department of housework is recommended to read the following complete guide to the art of washing clothes:

To begin with, clothes should not be soaked over night, it gives them a grey look, and the white parts, being exposed for hours to the action of the air, are thereby rendered yellow. Keep the clothes in a warm place until washing. Rub the clothes in warm—not hot—water. Hot water sets the blood of spreading the dirt. Turn the garments inside out, and rub them all perfectly clean in the first water. If the water becomes much soiled, throw it out and take fresh. But if the water is allowed to become very much soiled, the clothes will be dingy. The clothes should not be put in the boiler in the morning with the second set in the afternoon, as in the first water. No amount of rinsing or boiling will ever make clothes white which have not been thoroughly rubbed out.

After the second rubbing put the clothes in cool water to boil, without rubbing soap on them. If a quantity of soap is in the water they are soapy enough. Too much soap makes clothes yellow and stiff. As soon as they begin to boil remove them to the "sudsing" water. If they boil long they will be yellow. Let cotton articles be well "sudsed" up and down in the sudsing water, rubbing them out thoroughly on the rubbing board. Do not get the suds out; wring dry and throw in the "blueing water," which is the last water. Let this be slightly blued. Excessive blueing is unhealthy, and gives clothes a dingy and stiff look.

After rinsing, starch. The old-fashioned idea that clothes require to be dried before being starched, is not sustained by intelligent observation. Dip the articles in boiling hot starch, plunging the hands constantly into cold water, to prevent their being scalded, and rubbing the starch in.

Next hang out, and be sure to stretch every inch possible to the sun and the wind. Garments hung shabby, or in bunches or lostoons, will not bleach.

Wash flannels in lukewarm water, and rinse in water of the same temperature. Avoid rubbing soap upon the flannels.

Stretch them, when thoroughly clean, snap them energetically, and hang on the line immediately—by the tips if the weather is best. Two waters are enough for flannels.

When sprinkling clothes, dip cuffs and chittle-bosoms in cold starch, made so thin as to look like water with a little milk in it. Clothes starched thus need no ironing, but will come out perfectly smooth, dead white and glossy. Starch

Political and General.

The Catholics of Grand Rapids have donated $600 for Ireland.

Phillip Caffrey and Andrew D. Ingalls of Cross Village, have been arrested for selling liquor to an Indian.

Professor Bell announces that before many weeks a person in this country can converse with a person in England by telephone.

By a decision of the Supreme Court recently rendered, the school taxes of the city of Alpena, amounting to $25,000, are declared void.

About twenty men are kept employed upon the grade for the extension of the G. R. & I. railroad between Petoskey and Little Traverse.

The Grand Rapids papers announce the death, in that city of M. V. Aldrich. Mr. Aldrich was one of the most prominent citizens of Grand Rapids.

If Grant is made President, it will be because the people want him. He has not at his command an office that even a citizen of Keokuk can get hold of.—Hawkeye.

The present House of Representatives is full, containing 293 members, divided politically as follows: Democrats 145, Republicans 133, Greenbackers and Fusion 12.

Mrs. Cameron, late Mrs. Capt. E. B. Ward, has bought 100,000,000 feet of standing pine of the Flint and Pere Marquette railroad company, to be cut at her mills in Ludington.

Great land-reform meetings continue to be of almost daily and nightly occurrence in Ireland, and the agitation is apparently on the increase. The British Government evidently has a big job on hand.

Business on the G. R. & I. is growing every day. Several new and heavy locomotives have been put on the northern division recently, and the company has ordered two hundred new freight cars to be built at once.

New York does not yet despair of having a World's Fair. A mass-meeting to devise ways and means is to be held towards the last of this month at the Academy of music, and General Grant has promised to preside.

It is so in politics, religion, and everywhere else in life. The man whom you boost up the tree not only forgets to toss you down, some of the fruit, but is as likely as not to pelt you with the chawings.—Jersey City Journal.

An amendment to the Constitution is to be submitted to the people of this State at the spring election, increasing the salary of the Governor from $1,000 to $3,000, leaving the salaries of the other State officers as at present.

Senator Baldwin has been given the late Senator Chandler's place on the committee of commerce—an important position, and a handsome compliment to a new Senator. Senator Verry takes the place on the naval committee.

Bright, the Democratic Sergeant-at-arms of the Senate, did not drape the chair of the late Senator Chandler in mourning, as has always been the custom in that body, and many indignant remarks are made upon his conduct.

Ex-Gov. Bagley was in Battle Creek last Monday, and on the evening of that day was given an informal reception at the residence of Hon. V. P. Collier, formerly State Treasurer. The elite of the city were out in force to shake hands with the popular ex-Governor.

The recreant steamer Andrew Johnson, which has been laying up at Milwaukee this season, condemned, will again be afloat next season, as the contract for her re-construction has been let to a Manitowoc firm. It will be equivalent to building a new steamer, as her outside plank and ceiling are to be removed, and every frame that is effected by rot, which it is said will be liable to include everything to her keel.

During the month of June next 20,000 persons will be engaged in the work of taking the United States census for 1880. It will be the most complete statistical report ever made in this country. The law provides for taking the name, sex, color, birthplace, occupation, post office to each and write, of each person. Statistics of mines, fisheries and fishing population, railroads, fire and life insurance, express and telegraph companies. It will also contain full statistics of agriculture and every branch of medical industries.

Gilbert Winans, a life convict at the Jackson State Prison, escaped from that institution last Friday night. He was convicted in 1862, and, having never shown any inclination to escape, was given more liberty than is accorded most convicts, which he finally improved by "skipping out."

Last Tuesday the Senate confirmed the appointment of the Hon. George W. McCrary, of Iowa, the present Secretary of War, to the vacant Federal Judgeship in the Eighth Circuit, vice Judge Dillon. It is generally understood that ex-Governor Ramsey, of Minnesota, will be appointed Secretary of War.

Gen. Burbidge thinks that the Republicans in the House will have a pretty easy time of it at the next session. He remarked recently: "We can say to them: 'Gentlemen we are here primarily as spectators and critics; that is your funeral, and we are here merely to see the show. Unless it becomes necessary for us to participate, we shall not have much to say.'"

It is a remarkable fact that the President and the Secretary of State are unable to find a fit and proper man who is willing to accept the appointment of Minister to England. The reason is that the salary of the office is not sufficient to enable the incumbent to keep up the establishment in a manner that would be creditable to his Government without drawing heavily upon his private purse.

BOYNE SENTINEL:

During my last visit to this place I noticed some things that, are, perhaps of general interest.

The people are rejoicing in the prospect of a new bridge across Boyne River on main street. The work is well advanced.

In my endeavors to extend my acquaintance among the people I was the guest of Mr. Meloch, who is buying wood on the north. He informed me that during the last season he [illegible] seven hundred cords of bark, one hundred cords of wood, and has already purchased two hundred cords of wood for the trade of next season.

Mr Meloch talks of coming to Charlevoix next season for his goods, a portion of enjoying better advantages in his trade and of giving his boys a better opportunity of attending schools.

I accepted Miss Cooper's invitation to visit her school and was pleased to note the advancement, especially in the essential —order.

"Nigger Brown" was a well known character in Leelanau and Grand Traverse counties, and while he would drink too much whisky and sometimes got rather noisy on the streets, yet he made life a sort of a happy go easy affair. He lived alone in the world and is now dead. This tells his story.—Herald.

The Benzette Saxton, in this village, has taken another start under the management of D. S. Way. Last summer Bethune left town, and has not been seen here since, leaving the saloon under the the management of whomsoever his wife should employ. Joseph Clark, of Marion, one of his henchmen, gave notice of withdrawal, but still the saloon goes on. The matter should be settled at once whether the bond of Geo. Bethune permits D. S. Way to sell liquor in Charlevoix, or not.

NOTES OF TRAVEL.

A Cold Ride—Bad Roads—Boyne Falls—Gaylord, etc.

DEAR SENTINEL:

On Monday last, we started for Gaylord, to attend the Congregational District Conference. Mr. Daniel Holmes Pierce, of Hayes Township, was to accompany us, and we therefore stayed at his house over night, and started on our way early Tuesday morning, expecting to drive through to Gaylord that day. But, as Burns says: "The best laid plans of mice and men gang aft agley."

When we arrived at Boyne Falls, we were politely informed that we could not get through to Gaylord with our horse and cutter, as there was no road opened. We therefore put up at the hotel until the next morning, when we took the early train for Petoskey, and then stayed it across to Gaylord.

We found the road on the north side of Pine Lake quite poor, but it will improve as the snow increases. The country along the shore is naturally good—better than we had any right to find it—but what keeps it back, is, that the people spend their time and energies in getting out wood, bark, railroad ties etc., instead of attending to farming.

We made no halt at Boyne, but saw that all was at work at his wood pile, proving that the statements of that Kalamazoo lumberman, that he (Hall) required more rest than any other man in the community, is a true slander.

And though it may seem a digression, we would like to inquire just here, what business it is to any body in Kalamazoo how much beef stock anyone in this country eats, or how much applejack trade jaw projects, or who engages in the study of law or love?

Among the first men that we met at Boyne Falls, was Mr. Geo. Kyes who used to reside in Charlevoix. We knew his father, in the interior of the State. He died at the advanced age of one hundred years, lacking twenty days.

We found uncle Joseph Powers as busy and hopeful as ever. Though he has reached his three score and ten years, yet he is not as clumsy as many men at forty. He is preparing to cut out a large quantity of timber the coming season, and is also going to put up five hundred more of his celebrated, patent stump boats, which excel anything of the kind we ever saw.

We met one of the firm of Messrs Lyon & Sons, of Detroit, who are operating on Loeling River, Pine Lake and Intermediate Lakes. They are purchasing any pine coming into their waters, whether as stumpage, square timber, or logs. Mr. Lyon will receive communications at Boyne Falls, or through Mr. James Thompson, of South Arm.

We saw at the hotel, some very fine oil paintings and panelling executed by Mr. Henry Eaton, who resides at the Falls. He is a workman that needeth not to be ashamed.

We also met Sheriff Aldrich of Emmet county, who had been looking after some duties as Dept. U.S. Marshall. We should judge him to be an excellent officer.

Dr. J. J. Hood, late of Petoskey, has purchased the stock of drugs owned by A. D. Carpenter, and has greatly added to the same, and is placing them in his fine new building, located just south of Mr. Carpenter's store. In the Dr. and his accomplished lady, Boyne Falls receives a valuable addition to her inhabitants.

At the Doctor's we met Miss Aggie M. Vogel, whose scholarly father resides near the head of Pine Lake. Miss Vogel is teaching near Horne Falls.

We were also introduced to Miss Anna Wyman, of Kalamazoo, who has been a person of no small note in the [illegible] of being better," or rather, we should say, bonus of perfect cure.

Mr. Wm. Mears seems to be doing a good business both in the hotel and mercantile line. He sets a good table and does well by his guests.

At one place on our route we saw a finger board with this inscription. "Two miles to Hell" and were surprised to find ourselves so near that celebrated locality.

Gaylord is a pleasant village of about three hundred inhabitants.

As most of your readers know, it is the county seat, and the present terminus of the Mackinaw Division of the Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw R. R.

While there we attended the dedication of the new Congregational Church edifice, the first church building in the place.

Among others we met C. W. Fuller, the enterprising editor of the Otsego County Herald, who is also postmaster at Otsego Lake.

The land between Elmira and Gaylord is mostly in railroad and college land, and is of a good quality.

There are three settlements between the two villages.

We omitted to say, that in addition to his other business, Mr. W. A. Nelson, of Boyne Falls, is getting out 5000 railroad ties this winter.

CLERICUS.

Internal Commerce.

WASHINGTON, December 8.

Joseph Kinman, Jr., Chief of the Bureau of Statistics, has just sent to the printer a report on the internal commerce of the United States, at the request of which he has been engaged for more than a year. This report embodies the results of an extensive investigation of commercial and transportation affairs in various parts of the country. The following is a synopsis of the report:

The growth of the trade on railroads is evidenced by the fact that the total freight movement on three of the most important trunk lines connecting the West with the seaboard increased from 8,000,000 tons in 1865 to 24,000,000 tons in 1873. The average cost of transportation on ten of the principal lines of the country fell from 2·50 cents per ton per mile in 1865 to 0·96 cents in 1873. The development in the navigation of the various systems of Arkansas now cross the Mississippi on railroads and bridges between St. Louis and St. Paul, and are transported direct without transfer to the country all through cities.

During the year 1873 the eastward shipments from 361 leading railroad stations, exclusive of shipments from that city by the Mississippi River. The cities of St. Louis and Chicago are boss acre forwards directly identified in almost all their leading industries, and they control a very sharply at rivalry with respect to the trade of Kentucky, Missouri, Arkansas, Northern Louisiana and a large portion of the trade of Texas.

The four principal East-and-West trunk lines leading from the Atlantic seaboard, with their Western connections to Chicago, St. Louis, Louisville and Cincinnati, now constitute the most important avenues of communication in the country, and the trade which they carry over their various lines influence the course of our entire internal commerce, as well as the course of our foreign trade, with respect to ports of entry and exit. The principal agricultural products are exported. The great bulk of the movement of leaf tobacco, cotton, timber, is the course of the trade of Atlantic cities, and of the Ohio River and south of the State of Missouri. The cities of St. Louis, Louisville and Cincinnati now control a most two-thirds of the trade of those States in several manufacturing industries, and have become their chief commercial entrepot. Chicago has these cities completely actively rivals Boston, New Orleans and Galveston in the aggregate St. Louis, Louisville and Cincinnati greatly surpass Mobile, New Orleans and Galveston in population, in the magnitude of their commerce, and in other elements of commercial power.

In the competition for the trade of the States referred to the three inland cities possess an important advantage in their rapidly-developing manufactures, the annual product value of products of which during the year 1873 is estimated at $1,000,000, or nearly as much as the total value of imports into the United States from foreign countries. With respect to such manufactures these cities naturally possess a much larger degree of control over the Southern trade than with respect to their general commerce.

The cities of St. Louis, Louisville and Cincinnati now have direct engines of domestic merchandise principally from the Atlantic seaports of Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore, and from the manufactories in the New England States and in the Middle and Western States. Imported goods sold at these large cities of the West are chiefly received from or through the Atlantic seaports, where they are purchased by the trade of the Atlantic seaboard. These facts indicate an important element in the trade of the Southern States alluded to.

In addition to the northern connection of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad to Cincinnati, Louisville and St. Louis, the cities of Baltimore and New Orleans have become active competitors both for the purchase of Western produce, and for supplying to the cities of St. Louis, Louisville and Cincinnati imported goods and products of manufacture of the Atlantic seaboard States. In like manner, the cities of Philadelphia, New York and Boston compete with Chicago for Detroit for the supply of St. Louis, Louisville and Cincinnati, and also at many points throughout the Northern States.

The construction of the competing lines between all the important points of the country has so nearly equalized for the trade for the cities of Philadelphia, New York and Boston compared with New Orleans for the trade not only of the Southern States, but of the interior of many points throughout the Southern States.

The construction of the competing lines between all the important points of the country has so nearly equalized for the trade for several years war of rates upon the competing the several routes as to place each other with respect to competitive traffic. During these contests rates fell below the actual cost of transportation, and at last the cooling or temporary cessation of the conflicts proves that these the traffic was restored to. Time has been wisely adopted, and is now constitutes one of the most important factors of the American railway system.

In what manner and to what extent the pooling arrangements of railroads have affected adversely is one of the questions involved in the railroad problem of the present. Its pertinence to the administration of such pooling, in obedience to the popular demands, lead to the correction of many abuses complained. The influences exerted over railroad rates by lines engaged in any particular pooling affair is not absolute, but is more or less restricted by the direct or indirect competition of lines not included in such agreement, and also by the competition of trade routes.

The water-lines formed by the lakes, the Erie Canal and Hudson River, by the lakes, the Canadian canals and St. Lawrence River, and by the Mississippi River and its navigable tributaries, exercise a strong regulating influence upon rates over the lines which are pooling, and secured as a result of any pooling or apparent economy of traffic in the corresponding lines, but are over rail rates generally.

The influence of the canals has been most powerful for by direct shipments, the railroads of those are generally tried to the commercial interests of the country with respect to a large part of our internal commerce, and especially that which is carried against the current of the Mississippi River and its navigable tributaries.

The annual tendency of constantly increasing the direct trade has been toward a reduction for transportation charges, and has exerted a very important influence upon the agricultural, manufacturing and mining industries of the country. In certain States agricultural products have risen in value several fold, but the general result has been a large development of the industries and resources of the country.

It is impossible to state accurately the total value of the internal commerce of the country. It is carried by the vast of the movement of the commerce, it

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1879

For President in 1880,

ULYSSES S. GRANT.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

New York, Dec. 12, 1879.

Holiday shopping has the order of the day now. The women have begun already to lay in their stocks of Xmas presents, and articles of adornment in general, of dress, in particular. The uptown shopping districts of New York and the corresponding ladies' block on Fulton street, in Brooklyn, are thronged with beauty and fashion at any time, quite an every hour. Such stores as Stewart's and Macy's and five hundred others of like mould prosecuting are fairly jammed and the streets in the vicinity are filled three deep on either curb with carriages owned by the wealthiest of the wealthy. Union square, Fourteenth street and Broadway are full of attractions; every store seems to have put its best foot forward, and art, fashion and utility are each and all laid in be-ribboning variety to tempt the yawning purses of the gazers. There are evidences of prosperity abroad on every hand. Eighth avenue looks as gay as Sixth did a year or so ago, and Sixth avenue is a finer and busier street any day in the week than Broadway was in its most famous days of old when the bulk of all the retail business of the city was done on the great thoroughfare. Third avenue and the Bowery, that peculiarly cosmopolitan street are scarcely less rich and outspring full of human humanity. I cannot begin to speak of what is to be seen on the counters, and in the glittering windows of the stores. As the gold of the world has been pouring in the millions in every incoming steamer for months, the rich products of the oldest civilization have followed in its tracks.

European houses have been busy for months canting goods for our holiday display. With the means of their labor, and choice of our home manufactures, the caterers for public taste have certainly achieved a wonderful display. New York never was so attractive.

Mr. Robert Hatch, the Wall street millionaire, has just been doing a good turn to people whose employees take "commissions" from tradesmen who supply them with the various necessaries and comfort of life. He had a carriage which, like a ladies' watch, seemed to be always wanting something done to it. The thing began to get monotonous and, on investigation, finding that his coachman always seemed flush of money and redder about the nose than usual, whenever the carriage was on the sick list, Mr. Hatch refused to pay the next bill. The case came into court, and the plaintiff acknowledging that he had made trifling presents of money to the coachman, terminated that it was a dismissible practice. On some legal technicality the cause was decided against Mr. Hatch. He has appealed it and has very general sympathy in his crusade on this petty form of dishonesty.

Indian fakirs, and the well-known Simon Stylites, those oriental fanatics who are in the habit of standing for a few years in one position for religious purposes, have been rivaled or a genius who probably went mad by too much study of pedestrian go-as-you-please contests. Mesher Michael Carey established an intelligent policeman by standing for some hours on a tombstone in a marble yard and refusing to come down or move on when requested. He said he had bet $3,000 he would stand just there for seven days, without eating or sleeping. A tolerably big audience in his interest existently thought it wasn't good for the man's health, so gently tapped him with his club, and induced him to change his intentions.

The rights of women and the wrongs of suffering men have come up in a novel case. A lady entered a smoking car the other day on a horse railroad and fanning a gentleman near her had willfully puffed some smoke in her face, rose in wrath, wrenched away the offending Havana, pitched it out of the window and pitched into him with volubility and nerve. Weather she did right or the other thing has been the subject of some spicy correspondence. The victim of feminine fanfaronnade has consoled himself with a wife. It was a stylish wedding. Let us trust she will be more merciful than the fair foe who went for him so promiscuously. The great pre question has also come up, and some of the elderly thinkers, especially [illegible] are much [illegible] interested and placed themselves on record as practically indorsing the great American idea.

A brave and otherwise remarkable boy, John Mullen by name, has just shown how in some cases the human family can rival the feline race in vitality. The young fellow was sent for some sawdust in a Paterson, N. J., factory and was gathering it from under a machine saw which was not in motion, when suddenly the man running it, not knowing the boy was there, set it going. The poor boys head was cut clear through to the nostrils like a piece of cake. He was conscious when taken out and spoke rationally frequently afterwards. Recognizing that the jaws was very much open, such a danger existed the young hero, who was still alive at last accounts. The most eminent surgeons declare the case to be the most remarkable on record.

The new building Cite of Churches seems to be in a very bad way, to judge from the statements of the rulers of the Brooklyn Regia, a valuable and devoted friend to our great suburb whose he made his money. It appears the taxes and assessments in arrears amount to $10,018,226-21, and the property owners prefer to let their possessions go rather than pay up. The publication of the fact, one, of course, stirred up a fuss in newspaper war.

I told you recently about an alleged sea serpent said to have been seen by a multitude of fishermen near sandy Hook. By a curious coincidence, a big canoe in the next day bodily changed by a critter with a whale. Singularly enough a dead whale has just been stranded on Shinnecock Beach at Long Island. The Indians there, a small remnant of a once powerful tribe, have had what may be termed a "pow-wow" on the occasion. The marine monster was eighty feet long, and the proceeds of the sale of the oil will keep them in clover for the winter.

A National Agricultural Society has just been formed here. About a hundred delegates from forty-twenty States organized, adopted a constitution and by-laws and agreed to go down to posterity as founders of one of the most important, eventually, of American institutions. The aims of the association are similar to those of the Royal Agricultural Society in Great Britain.

How a tailor thought he was going to be murdered has set a whole court room laughing, the complainant joining heartily in the hilarity. A young doctor and a companion of the notorious name of Smith visited the knights of the shears, and playfully proposed to murder him. Smith grabbed the shears and the threat of the unhappy owner, while the doctor produced a case of surgical instruments for a scientific dissection of the remains. The tailor broke away and ran for his life. His tormentors were arrested, but their story thoroughly changed the complexion of affairs, and the affair ended in the happiest way to the absconding proprietor of the nearest cultivator of the jumper tree.

A petition praying for the repeal of the legal tender law, for presentation to Congress, has been signed by many hundred of the foremost bankers, manufacturers and merchants of this city. Their signatures in small type crowd four columns of a morning paper. It is a formidable and influential document, and as the Administration is in sympathy with its objects, something may come of it.

Household friends as Scribner's Magazine and St. Nicholas have become their present Christmas number will be welcomed as surpassing in beauty and interest even the very best of those which have gone before. The recent new departures in wood engraving, in which Scribner's took an early start, have been availed of with bewitching effect. The very poorest print in the varied collection if such a term can be used where all is so good, is a work of art. Truly, in typography and illustration we have far advanced beyond the best work in Europe.

RAMBLER.

The Troy Press assures its Democratic friends that if the party in New York yields to John Kelley, it will lose more votes than Kelley can bring to its support.

Ben Hill is quite put out because his pure, noble upon his blatant utterances as dangerous to its success, and is dead set against the Sneak policy of some of the leaders.

Gen. Fitz John Porter asks for $39,859 back pay and a life pension of $5,625 per annum as major general on the retired list. A belief that he is guilty of all that Ben Butler charged upon him, would induce the rebel brigadiers in congress to vote him all he claims, quicker than cry "Kelley cat."

Politics and Impolitic.

Gumbay Blair mumbles out his opinion that Tilden is as necessary to the country as Lincoln was.

The Democratic idea of good behaving seems to lie to do on the sly what the party has howled done openly. [illegible] change.

The rebel officials of the Virginia legislature have all been replaced, by the reconstructed and Republicans now in power, by Federal men.

Congressman Blackburn of Kentucky says the southern movement for Grant is "the sublimary insane inspiration of a new Jacksonism."

The Atlanta Constitution says Tilden will name the Democratic candidate and Hendricks the Republican (and successful) candidate. The latter assertion is ours.

It is believed that the late election in Virginia has hopelessly obliterated the color line, and that the white or conservative party is hopelessly divided.

The Louisville Journal calls on the Democracy to "put all our fools of degree to the front" in which case there wouldn't be anything for the front.

Senator Bayard says no one has cut so much for the success of his party as he does for the good that would come to it from the defeat-ing of the greenback.

The Richmond dispatch remarks that the Democrats of Maine know that the legislature of New York is Republican, and that if they went to do what it is charged they intend to do that legislature would give them a large dose of their own physic by proceeding at once to choose 35 Republican electors.

The southern papers cry out that the northern claims operation is nothing but a humbug, yet a New York paper thinks that as the southern delegation in congress voted solidly for a northern claim on the second day of a new session it must have been very surprising and confusing to the southern papers.

The New York Tribune finds that while Hendricks has been making himself generally ridiculous in Washington, encouraging to get ahead of Tilden by clinging to Governor's contract, Tilden has been actually doing as successfully in Indiana that he has the Democratic press of the state practically a unit in favor of himself and against Hendricks.

We are now pay as pensions in 1879, $15 pensions on account of the war of 1812 with Great Britain. This is a larger sum than was collected in number at any one time and place on either side during the war of those persons were 11,611 are men, and 21,193 are widows. There is one feature of our pension laws for widows which is manifestly outrageous. The pensions are not limited to those women who were the wives of soldiers at the time of the war. Under the law, a veteran of ninety years may, expressly for the purpose of leaving a widow who shall be supported at the public expense, marry a girl of fifteen, who will thus become his widow, entitled to receive a pension during the rest of her life, if she remains a widow, though she shall never done or suffered anything at all for this country, and be the daughter of an Englishman who fought the United States in the war of 1812, or of any foreign parents who never came to this country till since our latest war was ended.

There is good cause for the growl in Parliament at the extravagance of the expenditure for the royal household and the alarming of the disbursement. Every prince and princess of the blood royal has a handsome allowance from the public exchequer. Cousins, sisters, and aunts are also dosed in the general hive. But aside from this the social allowance to the most pretentious of sovereigns is something to make the most loyal of taxpayers shudder. For her majesty's privy purse there is an allowance of £60,000 annually; for household salaries, £131,260; for tradesmen's bills, £172,500; for royal bounty and special services, £9,000; for alms and charities, £4,368; for miscellaneous purposes, £8,040—a total of $1,925,000. The most robust of the dreamers was the good prince consort. His capacity for economy was unsurpassable. Though gathered to his fathers, 'tis, however, until a fine brood with the fiscal peculiarities of their father was raised up, the expenditure go on at an enormous rate. The civil list is parceled among a lot of titled people, who leave all the duties of their place to the performance of underlings. The lord steward has $16,000 a year and does nothing for it. The treasurer has $4,500 and is equally idle. The comptroller of the household, at $4,500 a year, leaves to the master of household, at $5,000 a year, the performance of his duties, which the master in turn devolves upon a small army of underlings. The lord chamberlain has $10,000 a year for walking backward in front of her majesty upon the few occasions when she condescends to appear in public. He resigns his duties are multifarious, but all save the pedestrian feat are deputed to another toy, well-oiled, like himself. For signing a few checks the keeper of her majesty's privy purse has a gratuity of $10,000 a year. Rich duchesses and countesses pick up crumbs for merely menial services in the department of the robes. There is a mere barronet, a master of the tennis court, gentleman-at-arms, surgeons, ordinary and extraordinary, dentists and dentist surgeons, apothecaries chemists, druggists, oculists, aurists, printers, gentleman postmasters, and an end of people, many of whom enjoy a variety of sinecures under government. The list is of immoderate length, and, save to the beneficiaries, dreary as dreary can be. It is many wonder that at a time of widespread depression in the kingdom the grumbling at the waste is deep if not loud? A correspondent of The Philadelphia Times says: "Would any private gentleman tolerate in his establishment a number of well-born 'functionaries' who should do nothing but pocket his money, leaving him to get other people to do the work? The whole thing is absurdly ambiguous and yet such is found to be the normal state of affairs in the royal household. Until public opinion is aroused on the matter there is little hope of any reform being accomplished. The aristocratic phalanx is so close the various interests of its members are so interwoven, that, each being dependent on his fellows, the whole body stand firmly together as one man."—Chicago Times

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

XLVIth Congress.

AMONG the bills introduced in the Senate on the 8th were the following: To authorize certain improvements in the channel of the Missouri River; providing for the removal of the Indians from Minnesota to the country and the allocation of the colored race in the several States and Territories. A resolution was adopted, directing the Secretary of the Interior to give information to the Senate as to the number, and where located, of all mining claims which have been surveyed and platted on the Ute Indian reservation in Colorado, and what claims, if any, have been made to extend such claims, &c. Resolutions were offered by Mr. Vanderbilt (Tennessee), ordered printed and laid on the table, expressing sentiments and sympathy at the proposition of the Brooklyn and Secretary of the Treasury to the immediate issue and unlimited redemption of legal-tender notes. Mr. Windom, with views for the destruction of the most unworthy currencies now in use in the hands of the people, and declaring that the time has arrived for the country requiring the immediate retirement of such currency, and that it is a part of a wise financial policy to maintain the greenback currency and its legal-tender quality in a coinage and paper currency. A resolution was received from the House requesting the return of Representative Loy, and the accompanying resolution was referred to the Committee on Claims. It carries an appropriation of $2,000, and was reported, ordered printed and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

THE Senate was not in session on the 10th, having adjourned over Sunday to the 13th. Bills were introduced in the House by Mr. Gibson, for the appointment of an International Commission to determine the best plan and route for the establishment of a communication for trade and commerce between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans; by Mr. Hiscock, to provide that hereafter all officers of the Government shall be elected for three years; by Mr. Hiscock, to amend the laws relating to internal revenue; to restore National Bank circulation; to authorize United States Treasury notes therefor; to repeal the tax on deposits; declaring that, after the 1st of January, nothing but gold and silver shall be a legal tender for debts thereafter contracted, unless otherwise expressly stipulated; for the protection of trade-marks; to provide for the admission of Dakota, Idaho, and Indian Territory; to authorize the purchase of foreign silver by the Secretary of the Treasury; for use in foreign trade. Joint resolutions were introduced and referred expressing sympathy for the efforts now being made in particular localities to ameliorate the condition of their beloved country," and requesting the President to communicate to the Senate the Government our hope that some just arrangement may be early made by which the Indian peasants may become the owners of the soil they cultivate. A concurrent resolution fixing adjournment from the 19th of December to the 5th of January was adopted.

IN the Senate on the 10th considerable was consumed of Mr. Davis (W. Va.) resolution calling on the Secretary of the Treasury for a statement of the amount paid out of the Treasury since the 4th of March last, and the accounting of the late war, and an amendment adopted extending the time back to March 4, 1861. Mr. Morrill moved to further amend by adding for a statement of all war claims which have been presented to and rejected by or may be now pending in the Treasury Department, which amendment was rejected, and the resolution was then adopted by a party vote, the Republicans voting no. The House concurred in resolution to adjourn from December 19th to January 6 was adopted —Bill to pay Mr. Morrill offered a resolution, which was laid over under the rules, except in the special exceptions, to which he had moved to add to Mr. Davis' resolution an inquiry as to war claims paid by the Treasury Department. A joint resolution was introduced and referred in the House proposing an amendment to the Constitution declaring that no person shall be elected in the United States, or in any place subject to their jurisdiction, a third time to the office of President. Bills and resolutions from committees were considered and amended in Committee of the Whole, reported to the House and passed. A bill was introduced and referred providing a government for the District of Columbia.

A JOINT resolution was adopted in the Senate on the 11th authorizing the Secretary of the Interior, through a committee of five persons to be appointed by the President, to negotiate with the Indians for their removal from Colorado, but expressly stipulating that the Indians shall not be settled in the Indian Territory. A bill was passed appropriating $30,000 for the erection of two military posts on or near the Rio Grande frontier as may be deemed necessary by the Secretary of War for the adequate protection of the frontier. A bill was passed to the House authorizing allowances for loss, damage or compensation, which may be awarded from distillery seizures, and repealing all provisions regulating that matter. Bills were introduced and referred—calling on the Secretary of the Treasury to report to the Senate how many bonds have been called for redemption, providing for the appointment of a commissioner of pleas in the District of Columbia; to amend the Revised Statutes relating to the Postmaster-General's office. Bills were reported, ordered printed and referred.

Domestic.

ON the 9th Secretary Schurz sent a telegram to General Hatch, at Fort Pitch, directing him to receive the surrender of the Indians designated, with the understanding that they will be guaranteed a fair trial by military commission outside of Colorado and New Mexico. Instructions were also given to take possession of the prisoners with a military guard, and convey them, by the first place, to Fort Leavenworth.

THERE occurred in Dakota on the 9th one of the most violent snow storms in the memory of the oldest inhabitant. Snow fell to a great depth, and drifted so as to render traveling impossible.

FIVE Chinamen, drunk with opium smoking, were recently burned to death at Lovelock, Nev.

ALOIS PINOS dispatch of the 11th says that on the preceding day Owave had brought in one of the Indians demanded by the Commissioners, and had promised to surrender the others as soon as they were captured. It was stated that the Commission had decided to recommend that the White River Agency be abolished, and that the Uncompahgre agency be distributed between Los Pinos and the Southern Agency, that the loss of property connected with the outbreak be paid for out of the Ute fund now in Washington, and that the portion of the reservation formerly assigned to the White River Utes be ceded to the Government.

RED ROCK, an oil-town in Pennsylvania, ten miles from Titusville was destroyed by fire on the 9th. The fire started from the accidental ignition of a quantity of petroleum, and the explosion of several tanks of oil soon caused the work of destruction. Three hundred families were rendered homeless and are entirely destitute.

DURING the evening of the 12th Hon. H. B. Grinnell, of Iowa, delivered an address before the National Agricultural Society in New York, in which he stated that its loss a $2,000,000 deficiency, and but by what is known as legal evidence, and more than that says to the lessees which cuts short the wheat crop of the West. Iowa is in vain for one word of science and means to discover a remedy for these losses. People complain with reason that the local appropriations of $20,000, which is not more than the value of a clear sheet for each of our inhabitants, is disgracefully and unjustly apportioned.

SECRETARY SCHURZ received a dispatch from General Hatch on the 12th, stating that the Utes, in demanding trial at Fort Leavenworth, insisted that they wished to be dealt with by the Government at any point outside of Colorado. One of the savages declared that the murderers might as well be hanged to trees at the agency as to be tried at Denver.

Personal and Political.

ALFRED M. LAY, Congressman from the Second Missouri District, died at his hotel in Washington, on the morning of the 8th, of a paralysis.

SEVERAL large land agitation meetings were held in the west of Ireland on the 16th.

ON the morning of the 13th the British forces in Pahul, under General Roberts, captured the heights of Sakahbaree. The Ameer and General MacPherson attempted to drive the Afghans from their position, but failed. During the three days' fighting the British had forty-three killed and seventy-six wounded.

THE Fresno Chamber of Deputies voted on the 12th to appropriate 100,000 francs to promote the service for a railroad across the Dessert of Sahara.

A CAPE TOWN dispatch, received on the 13th, says the Orange Free State and Basutoland still remained the stronghold of the rebellious chieftain Molosai, who was linked with many of his followers.

A PARTY of engineers left New York on the 13th for Mexico to locate and superintend the construction of a railroad across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec. The promoters of this enterprise have formed a company, and it is said they have by considerable influence which repairs has been secured, granted those places are of any commercial importance, and assert that they wished to be dealt with by the Government at any point outside of Colorado. One of the savages declared that the murderers might as well be hanged to trees at the agency as to be tried at Denver.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

ON the 8th at Detroit Mrs. Z. Chandler filed a petition in the Probate Court for administration of the estate of her late husband, the dead lawmaker. The petitioner says that the only heirs to the estate are Mrs. Chandler and Mrs. Eugene Hale, and asks for the appointment of Mrs. Chandler, Mr. Hale and Allen Stockton as administrators. A hearing will be had upon the petition December 24.

THE county roads in Muskegon are every where reported in a horrible condition, and consequently not much grain or produce comes to market.

THE statement of sales for November, 1879, to the Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw Railroad Company is as follows: Farmers' sales, 2,100 113 acres for $37,324.76—average price per acre, $15.19.

AT Holland, the other morning, the fourmill of Heath Bros. was destroyed by fire. The loss on mill and stock on hand was between $8,000 and $4,000. Insured for $3,000.

LEAH CONVERSE, an old Pittsburgher, who has been in the Insane Asylum at Ionia for the past eight years, was found hanging by the neck in a pigpen at the Poor farm on the morning of the 8th. Deceased was demented and two years old. He was born in France, came to Quebec when five years old, and for many years voyaged on the Hudson Bay Company's service.

AT Detroit, the other afternoon, while two literary girls at the Normal House were going to their rooms to change clothes, they had a go-all-natural scuffle, which ended in their falling in different directions. Lizzie Fuller's head struck in all fast and hard, and when she got out, as it passed a piano leg, beam, was caught between the beam and the cleat, and there she was, and there she died. The death was instantaneous, and the boy in charge of the elevator stopped it and in time to prevent cutting her head clear from her body.

A Woman's Life-Work.

MISS NANCY N. CLOUGH died in Enfield, N. H., on the 22d of November, aged eighty years and three months. She was the last of the line of this woman, says a writer in the Boston Journal, seems more like romance than reality. It may well be called romance in real life. She was the pilest of a family of ten children, five of whom are still living. While she was yet a child her father went to Enfield became financially encumbered, and was likely to be sold under the hammer; his health, too, was failing, and the entire family, from the breadwinner down and the entire of that family appeared well-nigh hopeless. Nancy, foreseeing the disastrous consequences threatening the future, resolved to save the dear home, and went to work with heroic energy to carry the resolution into effect. She entered her father's employ, next younger than herself, in the laudable enterprise, who cordially seconded her efforts and gave his efficient aid.

Learning of the factories that had just started in Lowell, Mass., she left home, and went to that city to find employment for herself. She entered one of the factories as an humble operative, but wrought with such energy and skill that in a few months' time she was in the ordinary operatives, receiving more than double pay. Every leisure moment outside of the mills was also faithfully employed to the same end. As her younger sisters and brothers came to a suitable age she summoned their ready help, while she was the ruling, directing genius and moving power in the undertaking.

The result was that, after some years of persistent efforts, the mortgage was lifted from the farm, and the old home was free from every claim that others had upon it. Then she decided that the house must be rebuilt and refurnished, and the grounds beautified, and before all was done the brave girl went back to the home of her childhood, with three sisters and one brother, to pass the remainder of their days.

SATIN is said to owe its origin to Ocetavo Mai, who, having flattered crowned heads with words, and, catching sight of her too obedient son before he can reach the table, administers a sound cuff on his head. The corner, ready but now to cheer him on with suppressed titter, sends out a jeering laugh, and the defeated hero returns to the fireside, one hand pressed to his ear, while the other is busily engaged in rubbing the part affected.

From the Record.

Probate Judge J. S. Shoutler has opened a real estate office at Cross Village, the firm being J. S. Shoutler & Son.

McCormick & Constable shipped 11,000 pounds of whitefish and trout, 1,200 siscowets, last week, from their fish house at this place.

An effort is being made to organize an Odd Fellow's lodge at Little Traverse, and a committee of three has been appointed to report upon the advantages of organizing such a lodge.

A new postoffice has been established at Barrick, the first station south of Petoskey, on the D. & M. R. R., to be known as Cheriot. M. E. Barrick is postmaster.

Remember that Carpenter & Barbeloney are selling the same grade of tea for 30c per pound that they were heretofore.

The National Republican committee met last week and selected Senator Don Cameron Chairman, and decided to hold the next convention at Chicago on the third day of June.

President Hayes is reported as saying in a recent conversation: "The Greenback is a debt. Pay it." For a condensed picture on ethics and political economy it is not a bad model.

Rumors of the proposed nomination of the Czar of Russia again prevail. The present Emperor is regarded as half insane on account of constant apprehensions as to the safety of his life.

A Washington special says: Gardner Hendricks, of Indiana, believes that General Grant will be the Republican candidate for President; and what is more, he feels sure that Grant desires the nomination.

Ex-State Senator M. S. Crosby, of Grand Rapids, is mentioned as a suitable candidate for lieutenant Governor on the next Republican State ticket. He is not only suitable, but a first class man for that place.

Offers have been given for the extension of the Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw railroad to the straits of Mackinac. It is reported that as soon as definite plans are decided upon the work of clearing off timber will probably commence. The distance from Gaylord, the present termination, to Cheboygan village, is about 50 miles.

What will the G. R. & I. Do?—The Detroit Post of the 10th, says: "The order has been given for the extension of the Jackson, Lansing, and Saginaw road to Sheboygan, and work will commence as early in the spring as the weather will permit." This, then, is the effort of the J., L. & S. R. R. to get to the Straits, as communication with the Marquette and Mackinac Railroad which is expected to be finished as rapidly as possible, probably the whole of it in 1881. It must from this section of the State this extension compels the question "What will the Grand Rapids and Indiana Company do?" Will it extend its road to the Straits as soon as possible?

The Democratic plot of stealing a State has been carried into successful execution in Maine, according to the program developed directly it became known that the Republicans had carried that state by a clear majority over all, and had gained control of the Legislature by a majority of 28 in the House and 5 in the Senate. At last the crime has been resolved upon, the details arranged, and the plunder made ready for delivery. In place of the ten Republicans elected to the House, the Democratic State Board of Canvassers has decided to award certificates to but 58, and that 61 Democrats actually elected will be found to have grown by the same manipulation to 78. The change in the Senate has been in equal proportion, the board having taken care to secure a Democratic majority in that body also. By this audacious act of political burglary the Democrats obtain control of the two agencies necessary to make doubly sure of the Electoral vote of Maine in 1880, first, a majority of the Legislature which by their can pass a law providing for the choosing of Presidential Electors by that body; and, what is of equal importance, the Board of Canvassers which is to handle the Presidential vote is thus secured for the Democracy. They have made a clean sweep, stopping at nothing that stood in their way, and Maine is by this act carried boldly into the Democratic fold in spite of herself.

The Leavenworth Times puts the issues of nearly all the states of Kansas on Presidential questions, as gleaned from replies to a circular sent to each newspaper. Of the Republicans, over half express a decided preference for a ticket composed U. S. Grant for President and James G. Blaine for Vice President. The Democrats prefer either Seymour or Bayard for President, and Hendricks or McDonald for Vice President. A number, while opposed to Grant's nomination, object to probables, and say they will support him.

CHRISTMAS EVENTS.—Charlevoix filled the full measure of loyalty to the memories of a Saviour born, and to the merry traditions of the good Santa Claus. Epicurus and Terpsicore did their full share in filling up the day's and night's enjoyment, and all went "merry as a marriage bell."

THE CHRISTMAS BALL.

Christmas Eve was celebrated at the M. E. church by the good people of Charlevoix and the little ones in glorious good style. A full rigged ship was raised on the floor and her hull was loaded, and her rigging hung full of gifts for both big and little, from the bologna which Fred, our genial butcher, bespewed upon "Wiggins" our hardware man, to the magnificent silver ice pitcher received by Mrs. Fox. Four hundred gifts were bestowed, and the Sunday school authorities saw that no one was forgotten among the little ones. Major Green made a happy speech to the Sunday school, and all hearts were merry.

THE MASQUERADE.

On Christmas night the maskers reveled in the dizzy waltz and the lively quadrille. All sorts of guises and disguises made up the total of a scene gorgeous and yet fantastic. Human nature did not omit the freaks of youthful imagination, and the wild beasts of the forest were brought in. When the floor was well filled, a swarthy Indian, armed and painted, entered leading a monstrous bear, perfect in form and motion. All made way for him, especially the ladies. So perfect was the affair, that many believed it to be real for some time. The fears were not fully dispelled until, in the dance, his paw revealed human, instead of beastly, ferocity. It is understood that the graceful form of Dan Wood was beneath the bear skin, and that Capt. Henry Aldrich led bruin. It is generally conceded that the last masquerade was the most successful of all.

A SURPRISE.

A large number of our people waited upon James Inwood and his daughter at their residence, and the evening was spent in happy social enjoyment.

BANKS.

EDITOR SENTINEL:

On Saturday last we paid a short visit to Banks. Col. O. F. Wisner accompanied us, and we were pleasantly entertained at the hospitable home of H. Knight, Esq. Banks is a fine township, and is so near Charlevoix that it seems like a part of our own county. Mr. Knight has the finest farm in the town, he has 150 acres under cultivation, all of which he has cleared himself. Twenty-five acres are into orchard, and he has some young trees. His farm produces the past season were as follows: 800 bushels wheat, 500 bushels oats, 250 bushels peas, 25 tons hay, 1700 lbs pork and 4000 lbs butter. He has 6 horses, 27 neat cattle and 100 sheep.

Mrs. Knight cultivates flowers and has some of the finest house plants in Northern Michigan. She also has some beautiful canary birds, one of which is ten years old which we used to say is a great age for a bird to attain to in a country of cats.

Mr. Knight uses Leonard plaster freely on his farm, which accounts in part for his success in farming. If any reply that they are too poor to purchase them, we answer, then you are too poor to go without them. Better buy the money and buy them. Any objections to the use of clover and plaster proceed from ignorance. Mr. Knight takes half a dozen good news papers and reads them.

The Colonel thought the singing at the meeting in Banks, Sunday forenoon, was the finest he had heard for many a day. The society there is quite select and new comers are settling in rapidly.

Mr. Charles Marshall, late of Painsville, Ohio, has just settled on the Orr place. He is a brother of Edwin Marshall, and comes from good stock. CLERICUS.

South Arm Items.

The Christmas tree was the principal thing here, and was really beautiful. Your correspondent and his family were well remembered, and we would hereby say "Thanks."

S. G. Inman sailed rather an unfortunate voyage recently. He attempted to cross the enemy sea of South Arm after insurance had run out and he had formed a treacherous crossing. The craft he rigged was a queer looking one, rigged "fore and aft." That is, a man before and himself aft. His cargo consisted of a general stock for the supply of the wants of the people here. Whether he called schooner, scow or sloop, I know not, but "land lubbers" would have called it a pair of one horse bobs, minus the one horse. He was making fair progress, when, alas! there came a blast, and something decidedly like a split," and down went the stern of the ship, and it required the united efforts of the crew to save her from being a total wreck. When they got her righted up they found the cargo minus a bag of prunes and a barrel of molasses.

The firm of Empey and Hubbard have dissolved. Mr. Hubbard having sold out and left the town.

A considerable business is being done in banking logs.

Mr. Forbes Murray informs me that last spring he planted one pound of potatoes from which he harvested one hundred and twenty pounds. ARMA.

The Antrim County Herald says.—Mr. E. H. Noble, of Elk Rapids, has completed arrangements for the sale of manufactured hardwood, consisting of maple and hemlock lumber, lath, shingles, etc. Messrs. D. & N. will rebuild their saw mill and will probably turn out about 4,000,000 feet the first year. This is an enterprise of great importance to Antrim county, as it will furnish a good market for our valuable timber, also give employment to a large number of men.

MR. EDWARD STEVENSON, of Reed City, was confirmed by the United States Senate last week as Register of the United States Land Office at that place, and on Wednesday evening he was visited by a grand surprise of the citizens, and presented with a beautiful ebony gold headed cane, accompanied by an appreciative speech by Hon. W. H. Palmer. Mr. Stevenson has filled the office since his first appointed with unexceptional accuracy and faithfulness, and was renominated by President Hayes because of the well merited confidence the administration had reposed in him.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

THE Saginaw & Mount Pleasant Narrow Gauge Railroad was completed and the first passenger train went over it on the 19th. The road is fourteen and a half miles long, and cost $120,000. It runs from Coleman to Mount Pleasant, and is operated by the Flint & Pere Marquette Railroad.

MRS. LAURANCE SAUNDERS committed suicide at Port Huron on the 19th by taking strychnine. Before she died she said her husband had run away with another woman and left her destitute.

BOWERS & WILKES'S burial-case works at Grand Rapids were damaged by fire to the amount of $10,000 on the night of the 16th. Insurance $7,000. Fifty men were temporarily thrown out of employment.

THE preliminary examination of Ezra M. Stevens before Justice Sinclair at Grand Rapids was completed on the 16th, after repeated adjournments for several months past. He was arraigned for the murder of Alonzo Dickison, whose body was found in Scrub Lake, Oakfield, Kent County, July 31 last. The prosecuting attorney, assisted by ex-Congressman Ellsworth, asserts that they proved malicious intent and the existence of aconite in the stomach sufficient to kill, but the experts would not agree whether his death was caused by poison or drowning, and Stevens was discharged.

THE tenth annual report of the State Salt Inspector, showing the operation of State inspection, has been published. There are seven inspection districts, having a total manufacturing capacity of 2,415,000 barrels. During the year six new steam blocks were put in operation and two destroyed by fire. The total amount of salt inspected in barrels was:

	Barrels.	Barrels.
Fine.....	1,907,50 Solar.....	19,000
Packers'	12,241 Second quality.	29,025
Total		2,068,016

This is equal to 70,360,000 bushels, an increase over last year's product of 4,000,770 bushels, or 392,355 barrels. The revenue of the salt officers during the year was $5,958.23, and the expenses $5,536.18. The shipments by lake and rail will approximate 1,850,000. The manufacture of salt commenced in 1850, and four thousand barrels were made that year. In 1868 the product had increased to 850,000 barrels. In 1874 the product reached 1,098,000 barrels, and has steadily increased ever since.

WATER Keeper Edwards was taking a gang of convicts, to be used at the new canal outside the walls, the other morning, two prisoners broke and ran. THE heavy snow-storms of the past few days have given the lumber business a boom totally unexpected this early in the season. Men are being sent to the woods in great numbers from Muskegon, and a prominent lumber man estimates that every mill in that locality will get in a full stock. The amount of stock held over is smaller than for many years past, owing to the recent rise in prices. According to figures furnished by dealers the logs at mills will fall short of 25,000,000 feet. The reports just received foot up 500,000,000 feet, as shown by contracts made up to the 16th.

AS SOON as detailed plans are decided upon the work of clearing off the timber for the extension of the Mackinaw division of the Central, to the Straits, will probably commence. Contracts will be let for the present termination, to Cheboygan village 15 or 20 miles.

Ouray's Horse Race.

FIVE years ago, when the Utes and Navajoes were not warring with each other or employed in investigating the drumming with which the white man's scalp was attached, they devoted themselves to horse-racing, betting blankets, ponies and their squaws even upon the results of the contests. Now, although there is no horse flesh in the world that can leave a Ute pony behind when climbing rough and ragged mountain trails or lobbing out for long journeys as concerned, they are not fast runners on level ground. So, however mortifying the confession was, after a week of daily races the Utes were obliged to acknowledge that their horses were inferior to those of the Navajoes; but by no time they were convinced of this fact, the whole tribe were nearly bankrupt. The Navajoes gathered up their spoils and departed for their lodges, while the Utes went to Ouray with their tale of woe. Sapenaro, Shaylso and Cojoe were all heavy losers, but at the council which Ouray called could suggest no plan to retrieve their losses, except to follow the victorious Navajoes and by force deprive them of their booty. To this proposition Ouray would not assent, saying that such a blood stain would stain the name of their tribe, and dismissed the council, telling the Utes to challenge the Navajoes to another series of races two months from that time. September, 1874, was to be would attend to the rest. Through H. F. Bond, the agent, Ouray having raised $1,500 by the sale of some of his stock, sent to St. Louis and purchased a Membrino racer, a bay, and had him brought to his home. At the expiration of the two months the Navajoes came down, bringing with them their best racer, one who had won eight races in the former contests, and called Wachita by the Navajoes. Ouray caused it to be given out that he had brought a pony from Utah to contest the races, and the Navajoes were on the tip-toe of expectation as he was brought forth. When the blankets (with which he was covered from head to foot) were removed, and painted all over to present the appearance of a bald shout of derision rent the air from the throats of the Navajoes, and they began to bet blankets (three blankets against one and the like) against his winning. The Utes said nothing, but, instructed by Ouray, took every bet that was offered, even if they risked their last blanket. The course used by them was about three miles long, a level mesa. Wachita was ridden by his owner and the bay by the son of Sapavanaro. The word was given, and the horses started amid an anticipating shout of victory from the Navajoes, which quavered away into a groan as they saw their favorite beaten by a neck as they crossed the line. The race was made them think the detent of Wachita was due to the bad riding of his owner. In the twinkling of an eye he was pulled off by a dozen hands, and Mish-o-kan, a subchief of the Navajoes, put on the back of Wachita. This time the betting was heavier than ever, and in due time, he won, to his amazement and horror of his father-in-law and his bride, confirmed to death. This was much more than the British Consul had bargained for. Notwithstanding his wrath, he did not think that a runaway match deserved capital punishment, and he swore by his Consular seat and the established church that the sentence should not be carried out. The Government, however, remained firm as to its decision, whereupon Knox threatened it with the vengeance of his Nation, declaring that he would order up the British gunboats, lying near the mouth of the Meinam River, and cause the bombardment of Bangkok unless the sentence was revoked. The menace was, as may be supposed, idle, intended merely to intimidate the King and his Cabinet. But they would not be intimidated, and soon after Knox was recalled by his Government. This is the way the story is told by the English and Americans in Siam, but it is not at all likely that Pra Pee-chen has been beheaded simply for his elopement, for he must have been found guilty of more monstrous offenses to justify such extreme measures. Still, as Siam is an absolute monarchy, the Government can do what it likes without accountability to its subjects. The Queen-mother, however, is most extraordinary, and, but for its tragic termination, would read like the libretto of an opera bouffe. If a man can be so infatuated as to marry a pretty girl in Siam, matrimony, especially under romantic aspects, will scarcely be regarded there with encouraging favor. N. Y. Times.

An Automatic Theater.

A GERMAN cabinet-maker named Hermon Wagner, residing in Groton, above Staunton street, South Troy, has nearly completed the construction of a marvelous piece of mechanism which is styled an automatic theater, and represents with wonderful accuracy and boldness of detail the appearance and motions of living and of inanimate objects. This enabled Wagner to produce a perfect wild, fourteen feet high, and has a depth of thirty feet. It is composed of three platforms rising gradually one above another. A drop-curtain separates inner platforms from the outer one, and another hangs before the highest and innermost stage. The mimic representation is begun by the appearance upon the outer platform of two figures of women, which are two feet and eight inches in height. One plays a prelude upon a harp; when it is finished the other rings a bell, and the curtain rises, disclosing the second platform and the quaint scene upon it. At the left is a German castle built upon a miniature mountain; a fall of water tumbling from the rocks turns the wheel of an old-fashioned water-mill, whose windows light up and are shut at intervals by a miller, who looks out and then returns to his work. Near by is a woman feeding poultry; in front of the castle three Tyrolese musicians play a violin, flute and bass-viol, while a drinking group of ladies and gentlemen empty their glasses. In the center of the scene is a sixteen-powered opera-glass, and in the middle of a park with a playing fountain and figures half a foot high walking about, and on the other by a fresco-painted balcony with people sitting upon its benches. At the right of the counterfeit presentment is a Roman Catholic church, with roadpaths it, and upon those more than two hundred pedestrian figures, nine inches in height, representing people of all classes down to serfs. A Catholic procession appears upon the road, passes through a rocky tunnel and, as it slowly enters the cathedral amid the ringing of the bells, the scene closes. The dimensions of the cathedral in this picture-drama representation are each four feet and the other building are of corresponding size. With another ringing of the bell the inner curtain rises and a marine view is presented. It is the Black Sea at Sebastopol; the moon rises upon the still water, while row-boats, sailing craft, whose every roof and mast furl their vessels' sails, and steamers under full head of steam, come and go. On a high rock on the right is a colossal naval vessels coming into sight rise upon it, and the fire is returned, closing the scene, which comprises twenty-four large ships, eight of which are gunships and fifteen small boats. The largest craft is two feet and five inches long, and carries twenty-four belching cannon. The curtain rises again upon the same scene, but the sky gradually becomes covered with clouds and a storm with thunder and lightning breaks upon the sea, which tosses and boats so much as eight inches of water will allow. The vessels are tossed and broken and the vessel suffers shipwreck; the crew are hurled into the sea, and while some struggle for life others, having gained the rocky shore, bents put out to the rescue of others. Lightning strikes another vessel, and with it the destruction by fire ends the scene and the drama. The construction of the automaton was begun at the beginning of the year, and it will require six weeks more to fully complete it. Mr. Wagner, its inventor, and his son-in-law, Henry Whallies, have devoted their entire time to it, working early and late, and its cost will be upward of $2,000. The skill displayed in every detail of the structure has awoke the admiration of the few who have been privileged to witness its operation. More than three hundred figures are included in the dramatis personæ, and the natural objects, the moon and trees especially, display remarkably artistic work. The motive power is furnished by a system of weights and levers, and machinery does all the work, even throwing changing lights upon the changing situations of the scenes. The drop-curtains were painted by Henry Schuldt, of this city, one picturing ancient Rome and the other bearing a landscape view. The parts of the machine so far as completed were recently put together and subjected to a test with most satisfactory result. Since its maker came to this country from Germany, nine years ago, his constant thought has been devoted to this creation, of which he has made counterparts on a smaller scale. Although Mr. Wagner's latest work has been done quietly and in his own house, and although no notice has been published, it has come to the knowledge of those throughout Bangkok unless the sentence was revoked. The menace was, as may be supposed, idle, intended merely to intimidate the King and his Cabinet. But they would not be intimidated, and soon after Knox was recalled by his Government. This is the way the story is told by the English and Americans in Siam, but it is not at all likely that Pra Pee-chen has been beheaded simply for his elopement, for he must have been found guilty of more monstrous offenses to justify such extreme measures. Still, as Siam is an absolute monarchy, the Government can do what it likes without accountability to its subjects. The Queen-mother, however, is most extraordinary, and, but for its tragic termination, would read like the libretto of an opera bouffe. Beheaded for Marrying an English Consul's Daughter.

The official beheading of Pra Peechu, a prominent dignitary of Siam, as announced yesterday in a dispatch from Singapore, is a very singular proceeding, and the causes leading to it are so remarkable as to be worthy of mention. The circumstances, as narrated in private letters from Bangkok, are substantially these: Thomas G. Knox, until recently British Political Agent and Consul-General, stationed at the Capital, had resided there for many years in an official capacity. Circumstances, soon after going to Indo-China, a native woman, who bore him one child, then daughters. They were educated in England. One of them is represented as particularly bright and attractive, and after returning to her own country she was greatly admired and had many suitors. Some months ago the young woman, who had probably reached the age of twenty, or thereabouts, astonished or enraged her father by eloping with Pra Peechu, and coming back fast married according to Thai law and Buddhist form. Consul Knox, who had intended her for the British matrimonial market, was so incensed at her husband that he formally complained to the native Government of Peechu's outrageous misdemeanor, which, in his wrath, he said to have pronounced a violation of international law, a heinous political crime, a deadly affront to John Bull, as represented in his proper person, and a direct assault on the British Constitution. Hyperbolical and absurd as such assumptions were, it is not unfrequently the method adopted by British officers abroad when dealing with people whom they are pleased to consider but half civilized. The Siamese Government seemed to regard Peechu's offense as serious as the British Consul had done. It ordered the new husband's immediate arrest and trial on the gravest charges, high treason, no believe, being one of them; and, in due time, he was, to his amazement and horror of his father-in-law and his bride, condemned to death. This was much more than the British Consul had bargained for. Notwithstanding his wrath, he did not think that a runaway match deserved capital punishment, and he swore by his Consular seat and the established church that the sentence should not be carried out. The Government, however, remained firm as to its decision, whereupon Knox threatened it with the vengeance of his Nation, declaring that he would order up the British gunboats, lying near the mouth of the Meinam River, and cause the bombardment of Bangkok unless the sentence was revoked. The menace was, as may be supposed, idle, intended merely to intimidate the King and his Cabinet. But they would not be intimidated, and soon after Knox was recalled by his Government. This is the way the story is told by the English and Americans in Siam, but it is not at all likely that Pra Peechu has been beheaded simply for his elopement, for he must have been found guilty of more monstrous offenses to justify such extreme measures. Still, as Siam is an absolute monarchy, the Government can do what it likes without accountability to its subjects. The Queen-mother, however, is most extraordinary, and, but for its tragic termination, would read like the libretto of an opera bouffe. Ice for Domestic Purposes.

Considering how easily and cheaply an ice-house may be constructed, it is almost marvelous that every well-to-do farmer does not have one for his own uses. In order to make fine butter during very hot weather a supply of ice is of the greatest importance. The case which many farmers realize in butter during a single season would pay for the construction of an ice-house that would last for many years. With a good supply of ice it is comparatively easy to have a supply of fresh meat during the time it is of the greatest value to them, and the hard labor to perform. Without it there is great difficulty in keeping meat longer than one day. Cooked food may also be preserved by means of ice, so that frequent baking and roasting during the summer become unnecessary. With an ice-house frozen cream and custard may be common and inexpensive luxuries. Ice milk, tea and water are very grateful drinks to the harvest field, and there is economy in supplying them to laborers. In cases of sickness ice is more frequently in farmhouses during the summer, than is generally necessary and always desirable. It it is obtained from a neighboring pond, considerable trouble and little expense are incurred. If only one farmer in a neighborhood has an ice-house he can generally dispose of enough of the contents to his neighbors to pay the expense of filling it.

A building ten feet square, and the same height under the eaves is amply large for storing all the ice required for an ordinary family. This will inclose a space containing eight feet, and allow a space of a foot on each side for sawdust or other material that may be selected for preserving the ice. At present no one, who has had experience in the matter, constructs an ice-house with double walls. It is found better to have the sawdust in immediate contact with the ice. When one cake of ice is removed the sawdust falls on that which is below and prevents it from wasting. One foot of sawdust on the outside is better than a larger quantity. If a very large amount is employed it is liable to heat, cause dampness, and do more damage to the building by inducing rot. The floor of the ice-house may be constructed of cobble-stones or rails. Those materials will sustain the weight of the ice and allow the water that is formed to run through them and escape. The opening in the building for taking out ice may be closed by loose pieces of boards held in position by cleats. A door three or four feet square, and hung on hinges, is very convenient when putting in ice and sawdust. The roof should be tight, and there are advantages in having the eaves project quite a distance over the sides. The material for the walls may be of the cheapest quality. Ornamentation is of no advantage in an ice-house.

Cakes of ice two feet square are of the size the most convenient for handling. They may generally be obtained from parties engaged in cutting ice for commercial purposes. It is cheaper to go several miles for ice cut by means of improved implements than to cut it with ordinary tools, even if there is a supply near when it is wanted. Save dust to the thickness of a foot should be placed on the floor, and on this the cakes of ice should be set so as to be both up. The sides of the blocks should be trimmed so they will fit close to each other. As each layer of blocks of ice is put in position sawdust should be placed between them and the wall. When the pile is completed, a foot of sawdust should be placed on top. More ice is wasted from lack of ventilation than from all other causes combined. Unless there is an opportunity for the free escape of air, that between the ice and the roof of the building becomes heated by the rays of the sun striking the latter. Imperfectly-ventilated air causes the ice to melt very rapidly. It is best to have a tap-shaped ventilator through the roof of the building. The top being covered so that rain will not fall through it. It is also well to have an opening a foot square in each gable for the admission and exit of air. These should have slides that may be closed when occasion requires.—Chicago Times.

ATTEMPTS to introduce anthracite coal from this country into France have not proved successful, owing in part to the prejudices of the people, which are in favor of bituminous coal, and in part to the high duty of $1.04 per ton required on anthracite, which renders it more expensive than either English or French coal.

A Tramp's Victory.

A CITIZEN of Howard street was picking his teeth at his gate the other noon after a hearty dinner, when a tramp came around the corner and halted before him.

"No use!" said the citizen—"I've no food for tramps."

"I didn't ask you for any, did I?" answered the man.

"No, you don't look as if you wanted to."

"Well, I can't help my looks, but I'm as beggar. I pay for all I get. You look to me like a gentleman."

"Yes."

"You have a smart, intelligent look about you."

"Well, I hope so."

"I'd pick you out anywhere from the common herd, I would," continued the tramp, as he gently rubbed his back on the fence.

"Well, that's pretty good," said the citizen, as he stroked his whiskers, "but what is all this talk about?"

"I'll tell you. I'm nothing but an old tramp. I don't know buckwheat from broom corn, milk you know everything. Give me a chaw and I'll give you one. I see you have two cords of wood at the side-gate, and I'll make you this offer. If you'll make a speech ten minutes long I'll saw that wood for nothing. If you hook down you shall give me a square dinner and I'll move on."

"By George! but I'll do that," chuckled the citizen.

"Very well, I'll stand to my bargain."

The citizen threw away his tooth-pick, pulled out his watch, cleared his throat and began:

"FELLOW-CITIZENS—We are called together here to-day by a common impulse. We have met—we have met—we have—we have—"

"You can't do it once more—I don't want to be hard on you," observed the tramp, as the citizen stuck.

"The financial question this time."

Thus encouraged, the citizen let off with:

"FELLOW-CITIZENS—You have patiently listened to the long-winded remarks of Sam Cary. He has told you that a piece of paper is as good as a gold dollar. He has told you that—he has had the impudence to assert that—that is, he has told you—told you—"

"I'll give you one more chance," said the tramp, as the locks-down seemed complete.

"But I won't take it," replied the citizen. You go around to the back door and I'll tell the girl to set you out the best dinner you've had in a year, and don't you be in a hurry about leaving the table, either!"—Detroit Free Press.

THE depression and misfortune of the British agriculturists, says the London Times, "has generally proved advantageous to farmers and land-owners in the United States. The demand in Europe for supplies of grain rejoices those persons across the Atlantic whose granaries are filled to overflowing."

COLONEL WILKOSS, of the "York Farm" in Maryland, raised this year an aggregate crop of 70,000 bushels of peaches, which were sold for about $40,000.

AGRICULTURAL AND DOMESTIC.

—Johnny Cake.—One quart buttermilk, one teacupful flour, two-thirds teacupful meal, one teaspoonful soda, one tablespoonful saleratus, one egg, beaten; leave it so thin that it will almost run; bake in a pan. If it is not right it will be because it is made too thick.

—One of the infallible rules of knowing a careless housekeeper, says an exchange, is observing where she keeps the matches. If they are scattered over every shelf in the house, be sure she is careless, but if she has a matchbox in nearly every room, there must be a different decision.

—Minced Turkey.—Take the remains of cold turkey and cut into very small pieces; weigh perhaps half a pound. Take half the amount in cold potatoes and cut also in pieces the same as the turkey. Put on the fire in a saucepan with an ounce of butter and one small spoonful of flour. Stir with a wooden spoon until it bubbles, when pour on one gill of boiling water or cream; add the turkey and potatoes, a little salt, pepper and nutmeg. Serve very hot for breakfast.

—Sour milk is one of the best foods for poultry, especially for young chickens, that can be given them, and we fear its value is not appreciated by those generally who keep poultry in the country, as we are satisfied much raw milk goes to waste that might be fed to fowls as well as not. Young chicks thrive wonderfully upon a diet of sour milk, and it may be given them in place of water to great advantage.—N. Y. Herald.

—The secret of keeping butter fies in working the butter-milk well out of it. Many a housekeeper has learned from keeping it is safe to affirm that the butterfills was not all worked out at the time of packing down. It is not necessary to ever salt butter in order to keep it sweet. Well-made butter, firmly packed in stone jars, covered with a piece of muslin on which salt is sprinkled, and the jar then made airtight, will be just as sweet at the end of six months as at the time of making.—N. Y. Herald.

—A very excellent pickle for meat of all kinds may be prepared by the use of the following ingredients: Two gallons of water, three pounds of salt, one pound of sugar, one pound of saltpeter, and one ounce of potash. In this rule the pickle may be increased to any amount desired. If all the above substances are pure there is no necessity for boiling them. As they are liable to contain impurities, however, it is better to boil them and skim off the substances that rise to the surface of the liquid. After the boiling and skimming, the pickle should remain in some vessel till it becomes cool and all the heavy impurities settle to the bottom. Meat to be preserved in pickle should be packed close in the barrel or cask, and should be kept in place by a perforated board or slats nailed together and laid down by a flat stone or other weight. The pickle should be in sufficient quantity to cover the meat. If at any time small bits of meat float up they should be removed, as they are liable to become rancid by contact with the air, and contract a bad taste to the injury of the meat remained in it. If the pickle becomes bloody at the end of eight or ten days it should be poured off and reheated. After it becomes clear by boiling and skimming, it should be allowed to cool, when it may again be poured over the meat.—Chicago Times.

Supply of Eggs During Winter.

All attempts to preserve eggs in the state they are when dropped by fresh hens have resulted in failure. The only way to have a supply of fresh eggs during the winter is to produce them. Pullets will generally commence to lay when they are about eight months old. With warm quarters and suitable food chickens hatched in April will commonly commence to lay in December. Broahmas, of almost any age will lay during the winter if they are well cared for. Eggs are most likely to be produced by pullets that have just reached maturity. Warm and well-ventilated quarters are essential to the production of eggs during the winter. Fowls that are allowed out in the open air during pleasant weather are more likely to lay than those that are kept in close confinement all the time. Egg production during the winter does not pay as much on the cost of food given fowls as on the kind of shelter allowed them. Corn is about the poorest food that can be given to poultry in the winter, and it will not pay to feed it except in small quantities.—Boston Journal of Chemistry.

—Wheat and oats are much superior to corn for fowls. Potatoes, boiled or steamed and mixed with bran, shorts or meal, are also an excellent food. Cabbages, cooked potatoes, beets and carrots and scraps of meat are all excellent. Chopped meat and vegetables mixed with meal and fat and cooked into lumps is excellent food. Gravel is one of the best varieties of food for stimulating egg production. Fowls derive much benefit from having the range of fields and wastlot.—Chicago Times.

An Old Man Rejuvenated.

Peter Bowerman, of Batavia, N. Y., certified Sept. 18, 1879, as follows: "For forty years I have suffered with kidney and liver disorders, being obliged to void urine as often as once in 30 minutes, and have also been a great sufferer from indigestion and dyspepsia. I am now using your Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, and can truly say, at 70 years of age, that it makes me feel like a new man."

VEGETINE is now acknowledged by our best physicians to be our only cure and safe remedy for all diseases arising from impure blood, such as scrofula and scrofulous humors.

VEGETINE

Liver Complaint.

"His disease may be said to proceed almost invariably from the stomach being out of order in the first place. By the stomach being out of order the blood is not made pure, and when the blood becomes badly poisoned through the stomach it is the duty of the liver to remove the impurities from it. The stomach and liver are closely connected to each other, and when the stomach is out of order the liver is also affected. The liver, by becoming diseased, will render the blood watery, and destroy its nutritious qualities. The blood, in this condition, will then carry into every part of the body the seeds of disease, and with the utmost, as nature is taxed. The symptoms of liver complaint are one another: a coldness pain or tenderness in the right side, including sometimes the shoulder, though with exposure alone, sometimes a slight cough, frequently by mistake for consumption. Sometimes the disease is mistaken for dyspepsia, and sometimes the disease by those who are afflicted with it. The bowels are generally costive, sometimes relaxed, and often both costive and relaxed in the same person. Sometimes the patient suffers from all the symptoms enumerated, at the same time. VEGETINE stands alone in this, and will either a speedy cure. See testimonials.

Rochester: Policeman "Gained Eight Pounds in Three Weeks."

MR. H. R. STEVENS, Boston, Mass.:

DEAR SIR—Having used but three bottles of your VEGETINE, I feel it my duty to say that I have gained eight pounds in weight, and am in better health than I have enjoyed for years. As a policeman is a somewhat exposed position, and I am subject to all changes of weather, I consider VEGETINE a valuable medicine for me, and shall not be long time. My health who had received great benefit from the use of VEGETINE, and I believe it to be the most valuable preparation in the market. SOUTH BOSTON, MASS., Oct. 11, 1876.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

DEAR SIR—Having had three bottles of your VEGETINE in my family, I take pleasure in saying that it has done me more good than any medicine I ever took. I was troubled with a complaint in a small degree for a long time, and was induced to try VEGETINE. After taking the first bottle I found relief, and by the time I had taken two bottles I was entirely cured. I have also given it to my children, and it has proved a most excellent medicine for them. I shall always recommend it to every one as a first-class medicine. VEGETINE has done more for me than the doctors could do.

Yours truly,
MRS. ALBERT ROGERS.

For President in 1880, ULYSSES S. GRANT.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

New York, Dec. 24 1879.

According to Dunleavy it must be quite exciting to be a policeman in this city, and indeed almost as unpleasant as it has been for our gallant Custom House officials. A week or two ago a gentleman, in passing his residence, was met by a policeman, who stopped him and asked him if he lived there. He replied that he did, whereupon the officer informed him that he was under arrest for having a gas meter in front of his house. The gentleman was astonished at the charge, but was informed that it was a violation of the ordinances of the city to have a gas meter in front of a house, and that he must go to the station house. He was accordingly taken there, and after a short delay was released on bail. The next day he appeared before the police justice, and was fined $10 for the offence. He paid the fine, and then asked the justice what he was to do with the meter. The justice replied that he could do as he pleased with it, but that it must be removed from the front of the house. The gentleman then had the meter removed to the rear of his house, and the police were satisfied. Another gentleman was arrested for having a bay window in front of his house, which projected over the sidewalk. He was fined $10 and ordered to remove the window. He did so, and the police were satisfied. Another gentleman was arrested for having a flight of steps in front of his house. He was fined $10 and ordered to remove the steps. He did so, and the police were satisfied. Another gentleman was arrested for having a door in front of his house. He was fined $10 and ordered to remove the door. He did so, and the police were satisfied. Another gentleman was arrested for having a window in front of his house. He was fined $10 and ordered to remove the window. He did so, and the police were satisfied. Another gentleman was arrested for having a chimney in front of his house. He was fined $10 and ordered to remove the chimney. He did so, and the police were satisfied. Another gentleman was arrested for having a roof in front of his house. He was fined $10 and ordered to remove the roof. He did so, and the police were satisfied. Another gentleman was arrested for having a wall in front of his house. He was fined $10 and ordered to remove the wall. He did so, and the police were satisfied. Another gentleman was arrested for having a fence in front of his house. He was fined $10 and ordered to remove the fence. He did so, and the police were satisfied. Another gentleman was arrested for having a gate in front of his house. He was fined $10 and ordered to remove the gate. He did so, and the police were satisfied. Another gentleman was arrested for having a path in front of his house. He was fined $10 and ordered to remove the path. He did so, and the police were satisfied. Another gentleman was arrested for having a garden in front of his house. He was fined $10 and ordered to remove the garden. He did so, and the police were satisfied. Another gentleman was arrested for having a tree in front of his house. He was fined $10 and ordered to remove the tree. He did so, and the police were satisfied. Another gentleman was arrested for having a bush in front of his house. He was fined $10 and ordered to remove the bush. He did so, and the police were satisfied. Another gentleman was arrested for having a flower in front of his house. He was fined $10 and ordered to remove the flower. He did so, and the police were satisfied. Another gentleman was arrested for having a vine in front of his house. He was fined $10 and ordered to remove the vine. He did so, and the police were satisfied. Another gentleman was arrested for having a shrub in front of his house. He was fined $10 and ordered to remove the shrub. He did so, and the police were satisfied. Another gentleman was arrested for having a hedge in front of his house. He was fined $10 and ordered to remove the hedge

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

XLVIIth Congress.

In the Senate on the 15th Mr. Voorhees presented a petition of 7,040 ex-soldiers and sailors, praying to be paid in greenbacks the difference between the value of greenbacks, in which they were paid for services to the Government, and the value of gold at the time of payment. Mr. Butler introduced an amendment to the Senate joint resolution introduced by Mr. Bayard, withdrawing the legal-tender quality of greenbacks, providing that the same shall take effect January 1, 1883. A bill was introduced by Mr. Vest for the organization of the territory of Oklahoma out of the present Indian Territory.—Among the bills introduced in the House were: For the encouragement of American shipbuilding and manufactures; to abolish unofficial legislation, providing that no bill except the General Appropriation Bill shall contain more than one subject, which shall be clearly expressed in its title, and that no general law bill shall embrace legislation not directly relating to the subject-matter of the appropriation; to encourage the education of the colored race; to regulate the manner of counting the votes for President and Vice-President of the United States.

THE House bill authorizing allowance for loss, by leakage or casualty, of spirits stored in bonded warehouses, on account for exportation was passed in the Senate on the 16th, as was also a bill to allow applications and affidavits required for the obtainment of the patents for mineral lands to be made by agents of the claimants. Several bills were introduced.—In the House a resolution was adopted in the House for the appointment of a Select Committee of eleven whose duty it shall be to investigate and report whether the location of a suitable route for an intercoastal ship canal, by which all petitions, memorials and reports relative to such canal shall be referred, and which shall have authority to consort at any time, and the last in the hands of the Committee on Commerce relative to which canal was referred to the Select Committee. Several bills were reported from committees and passed. Mr. Moore presented petitions asking for the passage of the Joint resolution to have the Senate Committee providing for the abolition and repeal of legal-tender paper now given United States Treasury notes.

A BILL was introduced in the Senate on the 17th to repeal certain permanent appropriations. Mr. Morgan introduced a joint resolution, which was referred, declaring that all public lands which have been granted by Congress to aid in the construction of certain named railroad and telegraph lines, and which have not been earned under said grants by the completion of the roads in accordance therewith and subjected thereto, are hereby declared forfeited to the United States, and the privilege to so acquire title to the same is hereby revoked, and such lands are restored to the public domain, and shall hereafter be disposed of as provided for existing public laws. Mr. Morgan also offered a resolution, and made a speech in support, declaring that the continuance of the existing volume of United States Treasury notes, with their present quality preserved, and the maintenance of their equivalency in value with coin, are demanded by the present necessities of trade, domestic and foreign, and that the full restoration of silver coinage to its equality with gold is necessary to relieve the people of the United States a sufficient and permanent supply of money to maintain our National prosperity. A bill was passed to facilitate the discovery of compositors' frauds was by American citizens in foreign countries.—Mr. Ballou introduced a bill to the House providing for the repeal of so much of the law making United States legal tender for the payment of debts, and authorizing that gold and silver coin only shall be hereafter a legal tender in payment of debts. A joint resolution was reported from the Committee on Manufactures, debated and referred to the Judiciary Committee, proposing a Constitutional amendment giving Congress the power to pass laws for regulating the right of citizens to adopt and use trade-marks. The treasury and Digestion Appropriation bill was reported, ordered printed and recommitted. The Military Academy Appropriation bill and a bill exempting postal employees from serving on juries were passed.

A RESOLUTION was adopted in the Senate on the 18th commanding the Sergeant-at-Arms to bring to the bar of the Senate, for contempt, Smith and the other witnesses subpœnaed by the sub-committee to investigate the charges against Senator Ingalls, and who had refused to testify. The Pension Appropriation bill was passed. On motion of Mr. Voorhees the resolution offered by him on the 7th for the appointment of a committee to investigate the causes of the emigration of the blacks from the Southern to the Northern States, was taken up and debated, and finally modified by Mr. Voorhees so as to provide for the appointment of a committee of five, whose duty it shall be to investigate the causes which have led to the aforesaid emigration, and to report the same to the Senate, and said committee shall have the power to send for persons and papers, and the resolution was then adopted—32 to 12. Among the bills introduced in the House was one for the regulation of interstate freight and passenger traffic; one to prevent the introduction of foreign contagious diseases into the United States; one to encourage immigration, authorizing the Commissioner of Agriculture to collect and publish all the facts which may be of value to immigrants; Senate bill authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to negotiate with the Ute Indians for the relinquishment of their reservation in Colorado, and their removal and settlement elsewhere, with amendments providing the consent of the Indians to the cession of any part of their reservation, and providing that no agreement shall be valid unless agreed to by three-quarters of the adult male Indians who have not forfeited their treaty rights, and unless confirmed by Congress. A lengthy debate was had on the latter bill in Committee of the Whole.

Domestic.

REGARDING the condition of the cotton and corn crops, the report of the Department of Agriculture says that the returns from correspondents for the month of November substantially confirm the report of the month previous. The weather had been favorable in all sections of the cotton belt. The corn crop, during November, deteriorated through the imperfect ripening in our Southern corn-growing region, the States north of the Ohio River and Missouri, some States falling out of their usual rank. This will reduce the average yield per acre of the whole country to 29.1 bushels, which is exceeded by only one former year—29.4 in 1875. This reduces the aggregate production about 65,000,000 bushels from the November figures, but still leaves the crop larger than in any previous year by over 250,000,000 bushels. The States and Territories west of the Mississippi River return over 100,000,000 bushels more than in 1879.

On the 16th the arguments in the case of the Lottery Agents vs. the Postmaster General were concluded in Washington, and the Court took the papers, reserving decision.

THE body of a young man who had died of consumption in New York was cremated in the Le Moyne crematory at Washington, Pa., on the 16th.

ON the 16th a young man from Pleasant Ridge, Ohio, entered a Cincinnati dry-goods store, purchased a pair of boots, and, while the clerk was wrapping up the package, drew a revolver and shot him dead. He then coolly walked out of the store and escaped.

A SAW-MILL boiler exploded at Holden, Ind., on the 16th, and five men were instantly killed, their bodies being frightfully mutilated.

ON the 16th General Adams, of the Ute Commission, telegraphed Secretary Schurz that he thought the surrender of the twelve guilty Utes as good as accomplished, although as yet only one had been brought in.

THE printers in Denver, Col., recently struck for an advance of five cents per 1,000, and their demand was acceded to. The price now paid is forty-five cents.

THE session of the International Dairy Fair, held in New York on the 16th, was distinguished by the award of the prizes. The first prizes for creamery butter were given to citizens of Iowa and Wisconsin, and for dairy butter, to citizens of the Northern States. Canada took the same for best cheese.

THE vote of the Produce Exchange to conform to the central system was badly denounced at a meeting of the New York grain-dealers on the 16th, and a resolution to adopt the system was defeated by an overwhelming vote.

Personal and Political.

ACCORDING to special dispatches from Augusta, Me., of the 15th, the Governor and Council has cut down the Republican majorities in both branches of the Legislature. In the House the Republican membership had been reduced from ninety to fifty-eight, and the Republican majority of nine in the Senate changed to a Democratic majority of seven. It is claimed by the Democrats that these changes were mostly effected by the counting in Aroostook Patriots at Custominspole has caused an appeal for clearly. Republicans claim that the irregularities chosen were the result of the stealing out of blanks, by the Secretary of State, known to be irregular.

THE conservative debt-payers of the Virginia Legislature met in caucus on the evening of the 15th, and nominated Mr. Withers, the present incumbent, for United States Senator.

DURING the recent storm which prevailed in Nebraska and Dakota, General Crook, who was out hunting with geese, nearly lost his life. His hands and feet were badly frozen.

EX-PRESIDENT GRANT reached Philadelphia on the 16th, where he expected to remain several days. His reception was very enthusiastic. The procession is said to have contained thirty thousand men.

BOTH houses of the Virginia Legislature elected General William Mahone, the chief candidate of the Readjusters, United States Senator on the 16th, by a vote of 79 against 58 for Mr. Withers, the present incumbent. The vote in the Senate was Mahone, 23; Withers, 13. In the House, Mahone, 56; Withers, 40; Wickham, 2.

A FEE BILL, reducing the fees and salaries of all Wyoming officers was passed at the late session of the Legislature. Since adjournment the original bill has been stolen, as is alleged, by some of the parties interested.

A DETAILED report of the work on the Washington Monument, submitted to the House on the 16th, shows an expenditure of $99,239 since the work was undertaken by the present Commissioners, leaving unexpended and available for carrying on the project $100,760. To continue the work until 6th 31, 1883, would require $500,000 additional, and to complete the shaft to the proposed height of 500 feet would require $677,261.

THE National Republican Committee met in Washington on the 15th and decided that the Convention in 1880 should be held in Chicago on the 3d day of June, the vote standing: Chicago, 34; Saratoga, 14, and Cincinnati and Indianapolis each 2. Senator J. Donald Cameron, of Pennsylvania, was elected Chairman over Mr. Averill, of Minnesota, the vote being: Cameron, 32; Averill, 16; Hiatt, 1; Reuben Cameron, Averill and Rest declining to vote. Eulogies were pronounced upon the late Senator Chandler, and appropriate resolutions of respect were adopted. The changes in the Committee were the resignations of William H. Kemble, of Pennsylvania, and the substitution of J. D. Cameron; the resignation of E. R. Noyes of Ohio, and the substitution of William C. Cooper, and the resignations of A. B. Cornell, of New York, and the appointment of Thomas C. Platt to his stead. William L. Heath, of Michigan, was admitted to all the vacancy caused by the death of Zachariah Chandler.

THE Governor and Council of Maine issued certificates on the 15th to such persons as appeared to them to have been elected members of the next Legislature. In the Senate the Democrats were given twenty and the Republicans eleven, and in the House the Republican membership had been reduced from ninety to fifty-eight, and the Republican majority of nine in the Senate changed to a Democratic majority of seven. It is claimed by the Democrats that these changes were mostly effected by the counting in Aroostook Patriots at Custominspole has caused an appeal for clearly. Republicans claim that the irregularities chosen were the result of the stealing out of blanks, by the Secretary of State, known to be irregular.

THE conservative debt-payers of the Virginia Legislature met in caucus on the evening of the 15th, and nominated Mr. Withers, the present incumbent, for United States Senator.

DURING the last two months 800 persons have been killed by railroads in the State of Ohio, Mexico. The Governor has offered a reward of $100 for every bullock scalp brought to him.

DISPATCHES from India, received on the 17th, say that the British forces near Cabul were virtually besieged. All communications with India had been cut off. The situation was considered a grave one. A local rail had been made upon the house Government's Afghan embassy.

O'NEIL, the evicted tenant who assaulted Lord Ferrard at Limerick the other day, has been tried and convicted of the offense, and sentenced to five years' penal servitude.

ON the 18th Lord Napier was summoned from Gibraltar to confer with the British War Office concerning the condition of affairs in Afghanistan. The opinion prevailed that not only was General Roberts in danger of desertion with the whole force, but that a general mutiny might be expected in India.

ON the night of the 17th in the Ottawa Valley, Ontario, the thermometer ranged from fifteen to thirty-four degrees below zero.

Labor News.

A MADRID dispatch of the 19th says a conspiracy against the life of the King had been discovered and numerous arrests of suspected persons made.

THE King of Italy has issued a Royal decree ordering the evasion of quarantine on vessels coming from northern ports of the United States.

THE British Government has granted a pension of £500 annually to the widow and £100 to the mother of Sir Louis Cavagnari, murdered at Cabul.

Some English Habits.

Most Englishmen of the lower middle class and the lower class in cities have a way of walking which is a distinguishing habit of common life. I had observed it in Englishmen of this sort in the streets of New York, which I could tell them by it as far as I could see them. They lay themselves out in their walking, as if they were doing a day's work. They walk not only with their feet and legs, but with their hips and their shoulders and their arms, not swinging the latter, but arching them out more or less from their sides, and putting them forward stiffly as they step. Whilst they look conscious of their walking, and seem well pleased that they are doing the correct thing. This gait and carriage of body is most remarkable in the sailor. In fact one sees about the streets of London and of garrison towns like Canterbury, and in the village crossings who has come to be known by the generic name of Jack Arry. You will meet two soldiers tightened up to the extreme of endurance in their waists and shoulders, with their little caps so far down the sides of their heads that you cannot see why they don't tumble down in the way, and these two fellows, one of whom is pretty sure to carry a rattan with a heavy crook, will up the room of three men by the set-out of their four arms from their four sides, and still walk as if their locomotion, instead of being a hindrance, were the best kind of work and steam. The number of their imitators cannot be told; but on Epsom grandstand, on any day, you will find some swagger. He walks quite easily and unconsciously, and generally with a jaunty strike of the arm. The most corresponding condition of life in Boston, New York or Philadelphia will walk. But in those places you will not see in persons of inferior condition that strange mode of locomotion which I have endeavored to describe.

Gentlemen in England have a very general fashion of wearing rings in what seemed to me a very half-fill way. A signet ring, engraved with a coat of arms, or a family monogram, seems fit and becoming upon the hand of a man who can afford to keep it either in daily wear or in safe keeping at his bankers. Nor are we unaccustomed to see examples of annular gorgeousness in the way of diamonds and rubies upon hands which are not so cared for. But this is not the ring-wearing of gentlemen in England. There small rings set with stones are in fashion. Diamonds set in heavy hoops, rubies as eyes in the heads of golden snakes which coil three or more times round the finger, turquoises and rubies, diamonds and sapphires, in alternation, are seen upon the fingers of men who are doing day's work in the shop, and upon the fingers of the young lawyer with a large practice, and upon the fingers of the middle-aged physician. Besides all this, the undoubtedly fashionable intelligence, providing that no bill except the General Appropriation Bill shall contain more than one subject, which shall be clearly expressed in its title, and that no general law bill shall embrace legislation not directly relating to the subject-matter of the appropriation; to encourage the education of the colored race; to regulate the manner of counting the votes for President and Vice-President of the United States.

THE House bill authorizing allowance for loss, by leakage or casualty, of spirits stored in bonded warehouses, on account for exportation was passed in the Senate on the 16th, as was also a bill to allow applications and affidavits required for the obtainment of the patents for mineral lands to be made by agents of the claimants. Several bills were introduced.—In the House a resolution was adopted in the House for the appointment of a Select Committee of eleven whose duty it shall be to investigate and report whether the location of a suitable route for an intercoastal ship canal, by which all petitions, memorials and reports relative to such canal shall be referred, and which shall have authority to consort at any time, and the last in the hands of the Committee on Commerce relative to which canal was referred to the Select Committee. Several bills were reported from committees and passed. Mr. Moore presented petitions asking for the passage of the Joint resolution to have the Senate Committee providing for the abolition and repeal of legal-tender paper now given United States Treasury notes.

A BILL was introduced in the Senate on the 17th to repeal certain permanent appropriations. Mr. Morgan introduced a joint resolution, which was referred, declaring that all public lands which have been granted by Congress to aid in the construction of certain named railroad and telegraph lines, and which have not been earned under said grants by the completion of the roads in accordance therewith and subjected thereto, are hereby declared forfeited to the United States, and the privilege to so acquire title to the same is hereby revoked, and such lands are restored to the public domain, and shall hereafter be disposed of as provided for existing public laws. Mr. Morgan also offered a resolution, and made a speech in support, declaring that the continuance of the existing volume of United States Treasury notes, with their present quality preserved, and the maintenance of their equivalency in value with coin, are demanded by the present necessities of trade, domestic and foreign, and that the full restoration of silver coinage to its equality with gold is necessary to relieve the people of the United States a sufficient and permanent supply of money to maintain our National prosperity. A bill was passed to facilitate the discovery of compositors' frauds was by American citizens in foreign countries.—Mr. Ballou introduced a bill to the House providing for the repeal of so much of the law making United States legal tender for the payment of debts, and authorizing that gold and silver coin only shall be hereafter a legal tender in payment of debts. A joint resolution was reported from the Committee on Manufactures, debated and referred to the Judiciary Committee, proposing a Constitutional amendment giving Congress the power to pass laws for regulating the right of citizens to adopt and use trade-marks. The treasury and Digestion Appropriation bill was reported, ordered printed and recommitted. The Military Academy Appropriation bill and a bill exempting postal employees from serving on juries were passed.

A RESOLUTION was adopted in the Senate on the 18th commanding the Sergeant-at-Arms to bring to the bar of the Senate, for contempt, Smith and the other witnesses subpœnaed by the sub-committee to investigate the charges against Senator Ingalls, and who had refused to testify. The Pension Appropriation bill was passed. On motion of Mr. Voorhees the resolution offered by him on the 7th for the appointment of a committee to investigate the causes of the emigration of the blacks from the Southern to the Northern States, was taken up and debated, and finally modified by Mr. Voorhees so as to provide for the appointment of a committee of five, whose duty it shall be to investigate the causes which have led to the aforesaid emigration, and to report the same to the Senate, and said committee shall have the power to send for persons and papers, and the resolution was then adopted—32 to 12. Among the bills introduced in the House was one for the regulation of interstate freight and passenger traffic; one to prevent the introduction of foreign contagious diseases into the United States; one to encourage immigration, authorizing the Commissioner of Agriculture to collect and publish all the facts which may be of value to immigrants; Senate bill authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to negotiate with the Ute Indians for the relinquishment of their reservation in Colorado, and their removal and settlement elsewhere, with amendments providing the consent of the Indians to the cession of any part of their reservation, and providing that no agreement shall be valid unless agreed to by three-quarters of the adult male Indians who have not forfeited their treaty rights, and unless confirmed by Congress. A lengthy debate was had on the latter bill in Committee of the Whole.

Domestic.

REGARDING the condition of the cotton and corn crops, the report of the Department of Agriculture says that the returns from correspondents for the month of November substantially confirm the report of the month previous. The weather had been favorable in all sections of the cotton belt. The corn crop, during November, deteriorated through the imperfect ripening in our Southern corn-growing region, the States north of the Ohio River and Missouri, some States falling out of their usual rank. This will reduce the average yield per acre of the whole country to 29.1 bushels, which is exceeded by only one former year—29.4 in 1875. This reduces the aggregate production about 65,000,000 bushels from the November figures, but still leaves the crop larger than in any previous year by over 250,000,000 bushels. The States and Territories west of the Mississippi River return over 100,000,000 bushels more than in 1879.

On the 16th the arguments in the case of the Lottery Agents vs. the Postmaster General were concluded in Washington, and the Court took the papers, reserving decision.

THE body of a young man who had died of consumption in New York was cremated in the Le Moyne crematory at Washington, Pa., on the 16th.

ON the 16th a young man from Pleasant Ridge, Ohio, entered a Cincinnati dry-goods store, purchased a pair of boots, and, while the clerk was wrapping up the package, drew a revolver and shot him dead. He then coolly walked out of the store and escaped.

A SAW-MILL boiler exploded at Holden, Ind., on the 16th, and five men were instantly killed, their bodies being frightfully mutilated.

ON the 16th General Adams, of the Ute Commission, telegraphed Secretary Schurz that he thought the surrender of the twelve guilty Utes as good as accomplished, although as yet only one had been brought in.

THE printers in Denver, Col., recently struck for an advance of five cents per 1,000, and their demand was acceded to. The price now paid is forty-five cents.

THE session of the International Dairy Fair, held in New York on the 16th, was distinguished by the award of the prizes. The first prizes for creamery butter were given to citizens of Iowa and Wisconsin, and for dairy butter, to citizens of the Northern States. Canada took the same for best cheese.

THE vote of the Produce Exchange to conform to the central system was badly denounced at a meeting of the New York grain-dealers on the 16th, and a resolution to adopt the system was defeated by an overwhelming vote.

Personal and Political.

ACCORDING to special dispatches from Augusta, Me., of the 15th, the Governor and Council has cut down the Republican majorities in both branches of the Legislature. In the House the Republican membership had been reduced from ninety to fifty-eight, and the Republican majority of nine in the Senate changed to a Democratic majority of seven. It is claimed by the Democrats that these changes were mostly effected by the counting in Aroostook Patriots at Custominspole has caused an appeal for clearly. Republicans claim that the irregularities chosen were the result of the stealing out of blanks, by the Secretary of State, known to be irregular.

THE conservative debt-payers of the Virginia Legislature met in caucus on the evening of the 15th, and nominated Mr. Withers, the present incumbent, for United States Senator.

DURING the last two months 800 persons have been killed by railroads in the State of Chihuahua, Mexico. The Governor has offered a reward of $100 for every bullock scalp brought to him.

Election Expenses in England.

What is the actual state of things encountered by the mayors of small cities in a contested election, and what is expected of them? Meetings must be held, agents employed, bills printed, placards posted, and votes conveyed to the poll, and for all these things candidates must pay. The selection of the ballot has increased the number of collectors, collectors, clerks, etc., required, and consequently the candidate, who must pay for them, finds his burden by no means reduced. A sharp rivalry between the candidates raises the cost of these items far beyond what would be required if provided for from a common fund. In some boroughs these expenses are in great part defrayed by party organizations, but in general they form two sections a charge for any but wealthy men to keep. The expense of a municipal contesting a county generally amount to several thousand pounds, and the law against bribery and corruption is, or so to speak, lifted off their feet by a wide-flowing stream of bounty. The following examples of expenditure at elections, quoted from the report to the House of Commons of election expenses in 1874, indicate the urgency of the need for reform:

Candidates.	Most Given
North Durham	£20,000
Southern Leicester	10,000
South Durham	20,000
Middlesex	18,000
North Wiltshire	15,000
West Riding (S. Division)	30,000

Some of these are extreme instances of their class, but the average expense of each candidate for a county in a contested election exceeds £2,000, and even the return of a member without opposition may generally cost him several hundred pounds. The elections of the counties of England alone, excluding Wales, entailed a need upon candidates of more than £300,000 in 1874. In large boroughs the charges may be estimated at something between one and two thousand pounds, and in the smaller boroughs at three or four hundred pounds per candidate; but these figures do not give a correct idea of the total outlay which a contested election involves. Besides all this, the unhappy representative of a small borough must often pay a heavy yearly rent in aid of local charities and institutions, to prevent the electors from starving. This put on the barest night, after it is done up in paper or pins, will make it stay in crimp the hottest day, and is perfectly harmless.—Exchange.

THE SENTINEL.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor and Proprietor.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

HOW THE YEAR WENT.

Night by the midnight, cold and black
On sleeping earth and sea;
The moon moved on her pallid track,
And the stars crept out to see.

As lowered with age and long and loud,
The solemn hours went by,
Across Earth's little atmosphere
Toward the shimmering sky.

A sound of revel smote and rang
In joyous, merry din.
"The New Year comes," [illegible] voices sang;
"Arise and let him in."

Softly the Old Year paused, as well
Becks from his interest heard:
"The world cares not that I must die,
And smiles to see me part.

"When I was young it welcomed me
With gifts and song and praise.
Have I not served it faithfully
These many months and days?

"Why should men joy to see me go—
I, the old, trusty friend,
Departing, grieved and sad and slow,
With none to mourn my end?"

But as the Old Year spoke, a sound
Of voices low and sweet
Struck on his ear, and, greeting round,
He stayed his lagging feet.

Two fairies leaned them side by side,
On either hand a throne;
And with a strong, and calm, and quiet
These days spoke to the Year:

"I, Goodby, a comely friend am I,
Who work—our lives to sing—
Other and happy years may bring;
But you
Are still our dearest one.

Then smiled the Old Year, as he went,
His weary eyes dim with tears,
And, forgiven now and quite content,
He left the throne to Years.

And when he met the New-born Year,
All rosy, balmy and gay,
He clasped him to his father's cheer
And spoke him on his way:

"Heaven go with thee, fair one, and keep;
And [illegible] thy question by,
That at thy end some one may weep
As they have wept for me."

JACK.

It was the last day in the Old Year, and yet it did not seem much like winter, though the maple trees were bare and the fields all sere. The oaks were covered thickly with leaves. True, when the wind blew, it rustled through them, for, by force of habit, it had to the living mists of months back; but when you looked at the soft, muddy roads, or the dead grass, you could see that it was just a past Christmas.

John Hudson, keeper of the lighthouse on Fishing Point, was brushing his weather-beaten coat preparatory to a call on his neighbors. "Sage-green"), and giving parting directions to John Hudson, Junior—described in the family circle as "Now mind, and don't set the house on fire while I am gone. I must fix that chimney to-day, for it's been a bad one for years, bringing up the rear. Jack knew how to set to work. He watched his father bring a bucket of mud and a trowel; he was allowed to help him; so, in a very short time, a friendly glow of light poured through the windows of the little tower, and laid bare the deep crevices between the bricks with blunt distinctness, while they shone calmly to bide beneath the stormy waves.

"I suppose we might as well get supper ready now, against father comes," and Jack laid the cloth neatly and cut the bread with a will. Like a true sea-faring boy of his age, he was being hungry was Jack's normal condition, relieved at occasional intervals by being satisfied. Supper was waiting—father's tea was boiling and Jack's home-made pie of stewed apples and dried was browning in the oven, when the door opened, and Jack's father stood on the threshold.

"Now," said Jack, after an exciting chase, in which boy and dog had both yelled and barked in most powerful tones, "now, Stub, we'll wash the breakfast dishes—won't we?"

Stub gave a knowing assent, and sat gravely on a chair (which he first knocked the cat off), while Jack washed and dried the few dishes as deftly as a girl. He had lived here as long as he could remember. His earliest recollection was looking at the bright reflector upstairs, and seeing in it a sweet, loving face, with tender blue eyes, near his own. His next memory of the face was in a soothe, pale and still, while his father held his hand, and the minister from the village talked in a low, sad tone. But this was years ago, when Jack was (as he would inform you) "only a little fellow." Now, from his dignified age of ten years, he was himself almost a man, and felt it.

His father was formerly a sailor, but in consequence of losing some of his fingers in the awful regions of the south, in had had to accept the position of lighthouse keeper—loving the sea too well to bank for a moment of any work further inland. Jack, as far as he used to tell Jack in the winter days, when they would be cut off by snow drifts from the rest of the world. Such thrilling adventures delighted the boy's ears in the long, solitary evenings. Stub and Jack were alone on the island, with the exception of the lighthouse, when a tremendous winds carried away Noah's crew, and two men got drowned; of the mutiny that once broke out on the Fair Betsy, and the sneaking Italian who got put in irons for starting it.

Jack would go to bed with a "creepy" kind of feeling after these stories, but the morning light always drove away the shadows, and he would vow to himself never to be such ridiculous noodles frighten him again. "Stub, let's play Robinson Crusoe in the yard, now the dishes are all washed; Jane (to the cat), you can come, too, if you want," said Jack, opening the door. Stub accepted the invitation for himself and Jane by making a dart at her as she was blinking near the stove, and rushing for out door with scant ceremony.

"This shed here shall be the cave, and I'll wear father's fur cap and be Robinson Crusoe. You can be Friday, Stub. You are black, and you don't know much; and Jane shall sit up here on the wood-pile and be the parrot. Now, Friday, you just stay there while I go to get some sticks for the wood-box," and Jack, making his work into play, worked with a will, while the waves romped and tossed about on the shore like merry children, and a little gray cloud, no bigger than a man's hand, rose slowly in the north and made another dash of color in the brilliant sky.

"Why, I declare, if it ain't going to snow! I wish father would hurry up, how quickly the clouds have come and they look heavy, too, as if they were just bursting with the piles of snow-flakes hid away in them. Me! want I be jolly coasting though! It hasn't been half a winter yet—no snow, except a little that melted right away, and none of the ponds frozen over. I guess I had better see if my sled's all right!" and away Jack ran on this business—this delightful piece of self-delusion about the condition of the "Artful Dodger;" for had he not examined it full a dozen times that morning, and longed impatiently for a chance to use it? "My! there's a snow-flake, as sure's fate, right under my nose, and another—swarms of 'em!" exclaimed happy Jack to his small but sufficient audience of Stub and Jane. They were very stolid, and looked and gumboiled with as good an appearance of happy inn

The officers of the G. R. & I have about concluded to erect a new and handsome permanent office at Grand Rapids. The Grand Rapids Eagle says they will be located on the square just north of the Union depot, and that there is a strong probability of the work being done next year. Indeed, President Hughart has caused plans and estimates for such a building to be made by Robinson & Brandeby, architects. These plans are for a building 66x110 feet in size, besides piazzas, with a high basement, three full stories and an attic. The building will be of brick with stone trimmings and slate roof, and the main front will be on Ionia street.

A war in the Ute tribe of Indians in Colorado is apparently inevitable. The Government Commission, in session at Los Pinos, agreed with Ouray, the head chief of the tribe, that if those of the White River Agency who were unmurderers is responsible for all concerned in the massacre of Major Thornburn and Agent Meeker, should be delivered up for trial, the Government would be satisfied. Ouray, in accordance with this agreement, visited the White River Utes to bring in the guilty ones; but they refuse to come, and an attempt to capture them, which the Government will undoubtedly undertake will probably lead to a bloody war.

Senator Ingalls, of Kansas, has the following to say regarding the Presidential contest of 1880:

I believe the next Presidential contest will be the most violent, complicated and dangerous that has ever occurred in our history. The Democratic party possesses of both houses of Congress, and nearly equally of assuming at the electoral vote. They have refused to discuss any measure to change or modify the existing method of settling disputed questions that may arise, and it is certain that there will never be another electoral enumeration, the present complication resulting in Maine illustrates, in my opinion, the temper and design of the Democracy. By the merest fluke they propose to put a Democrat in the White House in place. Unless the Republican majority in the electoral college is so large, so complete, and so unmistakably as to permit of no controversy, there will be serious trouble between November, 1880, and March 4th, 1881.

The Inter-Ocean states that a prominent Republican in Mississippi, for some time a member of Congress, in a private letter to a friend in Chicago, indulges in the following lively writing:

"When Grant is posted, his head is always level, and if he is nominated we will buckle on our armor and go into the fight in old fashioned style; but we won't strike a lick for any Miss Nancys, nor for any man of the feeble kind, either. We want a man with blood in him as well as brains—some one who is neither too saintly nor too cowardly to strike back. The most human thing any of the apostles ever did was when Peter hammed away with his eleven unfaithful of the fellow's ears and thought he was removed, because it was not in accordance with the "plan of salvation," I mean for Peter to cut that ear up under, and for him as he kept the keys, I'll warrant he'd never go back on a man about to make a square fight.

"The Republicans of Mississippi are in better trim than they have been for some years. Singular as it may seem, Grant can roll out a larger white vote than any other white man, and of course our colored vote would rejoice at his nomination."

The people of Maine are thoroughly aroused. Popular indignation against the outrage of the Democratic Governor and his co-conspirators in overriding the people's will, is intense. Monster meetings are being held, and a peremptory refusal to submit to the "counting out" process is expressed everywhere. Popular suffrage is in danger, for if the will of the people, as fully expressed though the ballot box, can be subverted by a contemptible Governor and his council in Maine, it can be accomplished in other States. We are pleased to know that many of the more intelligent and respectable Democrats refuse to sanction the Maine infamy. Indeed we doubt if any considerable element of the Democratic party, upon a direct submission of the question would endorse this outrage upon the great and sacred principle of popular suffrage. A late Washington dispatch says that the situation in Maine has been very carefully considered, and substantially the following programme agreed upon as advisable: To exhaust every possible legal means by appeals to the courts for injunctions or other writs to prevent the fusion members of the Legislature who have been counted in from taking their seats; claiming in turn, that the Republican members actually elected, being a majority of both houses, should bivouac at the Capitol with sufficient force to enter the two chambers, take their seats, and keep them, and organize the Legislature which the people elected. Then if the Fusionists chose to meet elsewhere and organize the claims of the dual Government may be sent to Washington, and the administration can decide between them, as it hitherto has done in similar cases in the Southern States.

The Democrats Not Sure of Florida.

Senator Call, of Florida recently said to a New York Tribune reporter, that the suggestion that the Legislature of his State should appoint the Presidential Electors next year had been discussed, but it never met with approval in any reasonable quarter. He was asked if there was any reason to fear that the Democrats would not be able to carry Florida by a vote of the people. He replied that under ordinary circumstances, and with any fair degree of success, the vote of Florida would be cast for the Democratic nominee, but it seems sufficient that the Northern solidly Republican, and that there is no prospect of securing the nominees of the Democratic Convention, there is ample room to doubt whether Florida will fall into line.

Another Democratic Senator, who is well informed on southern affairs, said the Southern people are sick and tired of losing the reform legs of the Democratic party. They are only Democratic because that party promised to give them control of their own affairs. They do not love the party for its own sake, and, if it becomes apparent that the election of the Democratic candidate is not possible, more than one Southern State is likely to fall out of the Democratic line. Even if the chances are doubtful, and the Democratic Convention does not nominate a good candidate, it is not improbable that some Southern State will go over to the enemy. "We remember Grant favorably, continued the Senator, "and recall a number of kind acts toward us under his administration. It would not be hard for us to support him, or fail into the ranks any other Republican, and make the best of it. We do not fear the Republican party, and do not believe there is any danger to the South in all this talk of the re-ruling Confederates.

Very fine spring weather.

Byron Shee is still on hand selling goods astonishingly low. Byron is always as pretty as he is fat.

The Charlevoix Lumber Co. is now hauling very fine logs, and the fine weather they are out most of the time.

The lectures of the Charlevoix Historical Society the 19th Monday in January, will be delivered by Prof. H. P. Warner.

Dunn, John W. Hayes or Boyne, who was recently stricken with paralysis, died New Year's morning. He leaves a wife and two children.

Some, the infamous, is back in his old haunts at Little Traverse, trying to prove that his reputation for truth and veracity was good. Big job.

The season for hunting deer expired on the 15th. Now the beautiful creatures can have a rest. It is estimated that over 1,000 were killed in Alpena county alone.

Miss Ewanus, of Manistee, Wis., who was some time ago employed by our [illegible] Department of our school, owing to the serious illness of her mother will resume her position.

School commenced yesterday, and a third or Intermediate Department was opened with Miss Carrie Smith as teacher. The Check city school has ample accommodations for all the scholars in the District, and the Board hope every scholar will be present.

Hon. E. D. Rood, who has been running as mail agent on the G. R. & I. for a long time, has resigned his position, and will hereafter give his entire attention to the editing of the Big Rapids Pioneer Magnet, of which paper he is one of the proprietors.

The Antrim County Herald says that Messrs. Wadsworth and Thurston, of Central Lake, intend to place a steam yacht 31 feet in length, on Central and Intermediate lakes. This will be a great convenience to the people, and we hope profitable to the proprietors.

Norwood Notes.

The Christmas tree was an open box of candy and nuts, for the children and people. The tree was prettily trimmed and the attendance was large, and everything harmonious.

The cider has come, and the air is full of rumors of tipping Good Templars.

Mr. Wm. Cowman returned from the lumber woods on Wednesday.

On New Year's eve, about thirty five of the Charlevoix Lodge of Good Templars visited the Norwood Lodge, and were royally tipped by way of conference. A pleasant social time is reported.

A county party for the young people was held at the residence of F. J. Meech on Thursday evening. All appeared present, and excepting the editor of the Sentinel.

Miss Helen E. Meech has returned from her holidays visit in Detroit, to resume her studies at school.

We understand the postoffice is to be moved down to Mr. Bennett's store.

Rev. S. G. Blanchard has been absent attending of the past week, attending the Antrim County Teachers' Association, held at Central Lake, where he had been invited to deliver the opening address to the Teachers.

O. D. Wood slaughtered five splendid porkers on Friday, ranging as high as 460 pounds each.

The Week of Prayer will be observed here with services in the school house each evening.

We met a man one day. He was carrying a valise. He was good looking. They said he was from Mancelona. He seemed to be in a hurry. They said he was leaving money to mortgage. Antrim County Herald please copy.

Fresh rail butter at Carpenter & Bartholomew's.

Norwood.—We last week made a hasty trip to this village, and while there enjoyed the genial hospitality of our friend Meech. Mr. Meech is engaged in purchasing railroad ties, and is absent from home much of the time.

We were told that the Good Templars of that village enjoyed the recent visit of our lodge, and we know that the Order here enjoyed it just as well.

We called at the store of O. D. Wood, and found Mr. Bennett engaged in waiting upon customers with the same smile that always awaits the business community. They have a fine general assortment of goods, and least of a lively trade.

Boots and shoes a good stock at Carpenter & Bartholomew's.

Hamilton in all its branches promptly attended to. All work warranted to give satisfaction. By G. W. Crouter, Druggist and Dentist.

The most terrible railroad accident ever recorded occurred in Scotland Dec. 28th. A portion of the immense bridge across the Tay or Dee was blown down during a great gale on the evening of that day, while the train from Edinburgh to Dundee was crossing it, and the train precipitated in the water, ninety feet below. Not a vestige of the train remains. The water is very deep and the train fell at the bottom of the ice with its freight of human beings. No one was left to tell the tale of horror. The train contained over 100 persons, and as all were locked in compartments, as is the custom on English trains, there would be no means of quick escape. A few mail bags washed ashore, four miles away. The bridge was about two miles in length, and one-third of it fell with the train.

We have the Agency of the Waltham and Elgin Watches and will furnish them at the lowest prices. Dr. G. W. Crouter, Druggist and dentist.

OUR TROUT STREAMS.

What a Sportsman Thinks of Streams and Fish Ladders.

A trout stream is a never failing source of revenue to the people of any region where it is located, if that stream is properly cared for and protected. In the recent report of the Fish Commissioner of the State of Maine it is stated that water privileges once sensitive wealth and now are, than the best cultivated lands; and a well stocked trout stream or a salmon river ranks next in value to a silver mine, from the fact that both are in run in perpetuity the comparative wealth of each.

The Pine Lake region has been famous for its trout streams, and a strict conservance of its waters by the inhabitants of the county would perpetuate its wealth.

There is a possibility of these fine streams being stripped of their fine denizens, and becoming barren as last year.

Mr. Hancock the famous writer in Forest and Stream on a recent issue of his paper, in an article on "Planting of the Past" mentions the fact that in our Eastern Rivers, with its rapid ebb and swift rise and many causes, it was possible, but a few years since to take from 200 to 300 per day in a rod. Already expert fishermen complain that it is a 500 inch matter to fill a creel even in a day fishing and even then we many are small trout.

This is an admirable fact for Jordan is being severely fished out.

The building of the dam across the Jordan will be the last measure to kill the trout stream, unless a fish way is put in that will enable the trout to go up to their spawning grounds, and it remains for the officers of the county to insist upon the very best fish way being put in that is made.

It is useless for us to neglect this matter until it is too late. If by our own apathy and indifference we allow a substitute to be put in and let some one call it a fishladder, and the trout in the coming spring cannot get above the dam, then as sure as tomorrow's sun will shine, so surely may we bid good bye to salmo fontinalis up the Jordan.

Can we as citizens of Charlevoix rest satisfied with any measure short of a perfect dam to this stream. We must admit that the fishing grounds have made this entire region far famed. Fishermen come here and spend their money liberally, and coming again another summer, bring their families with them, so our summer resorts are being built up, and Charlevoix will become more and more favored.

Another summer we may expect to see gentlemen here to visit our beautiful Pine Lake. Some of our summer visits have among the pleasure of this region without any cost, and if we can induce visitors to come and treat them fairly we can surely rely on the beautiful surroundings of Charlevoix, and its fine health giving breezes to attract them every summer.

Let us see to it then that our famous fishing stream is maintained, and a good fish way put in.

Charlevoix county cannot afford to neglect this principal attraction of our surroundings, and have to repent that the river has passed from our Jordan.

N. B. Fact. The dams are being put in for the new dam, is it the time to lay the timber for a new fish-way.

To its credit be it spoken, the Louisville Courier-Journal denounces the Democratic usurpation in Maine in strong language. It and the Chicago Times deserve the thanks of all honest patriots for their prompt and unconditional denunciation of the greatest political crime of the age.

BURNED TO DEATH.

Terrible Fate of Three Young Ladies in a Cook-shop Basket—Narrow Escape of the Parents—The Mother Seriously Injured.

This morning the hamlet of St. Joan-Port Joli, Province of Quebec, was visited by a terrible calamity. A gentleman named Louis Ouilette realized with his wife and family of three in the upper part of the building used as the Court House and Registry Office. Very little is known as to the details of the affair but the residents in the vicinity were aroused by the cracking of breaking glass and the roaring of flames coming from the Court House building.

The alarm was hardly given when Ouilette appeared at the second-story window, half suffocated by the flames, and endeavored to escape. His wife and three children, the oldest a beautiful young lady of eighteen years, another of ten, and a third of fifteen, were also in the building. There was no means of escape save by the stairs leading to the front door of the Court House, and the flames had all but shut them off from this avenue of escape. Mr. Vocelle, Mr. Charles Fournier and a few others of the villagers were early on the spot, but as there were no fire-escape appliances, they were unable to do anything but look on and rend their hair-making. Ouilette, rather than jump twenty feet, made a rush for the central staircase, which he gained successfully, at the same time calling upon his frightened children to follow him. Mrs. Ouilette refused to trust herself to the stairs, and jumped from the window, receiving serious if not fatal injuries. After an exciting flight of a few seconds, which was regarded ages by the desperate man, Ouilette succeeded in reaching the yard in front of the Court House, and was but burned about the face, but not seriously.

His children came to the window again, and those below endeavored to persuade them to jump, but they again tried to get to the main entrance, whence they fell a bear beaten back. They were nearer again, and, in overcoming in the attempt, were burned to death. The upper part of the house was owned by Clarice Fournier, bailiff, who escaped. The municipal authorities owned the lower part. St. John-Port Joli is a station on the line of the Grand Trunk Railway, in the county of L'Islet. It has a population of about five hundred. It is seventy miles southeast of Quebec, and is inhabited chiefly by French Canadians. Montreal (Can.) Dispatch to N. Y. Herald.

Edison's Last Triumph.

NEW YORK, December 31.

The Herald devotes a page to Edison's triumph in Electric Illumination," giving a full and accurate account of his work from its inception to its completion, with illustrative diagrams. The Herald says:

"The new light, incredible as it may appear, is produced from a little piece of paper—carbonized paper—no more substantial than that which the merry breath would blow away. Through this little strip of paper is passed an electric current, and the result is a bright, beautiful, mellow light. But the paper instantly burns, even under the trifling heat of a tallow candle,' exclaims the skeptic, 'and how, then, can it withstand the fierce heat of an electric current?' Very true; but Edison makes the little piece of paper more infusible than platinum—more durable than granite—and this involves no complicated process. The paper is merely baked in a close oven until all its elements have passed away except its carbon framework. The latter is then placed in a glass globe connected with wires leading to the electricity-producing machine and the air exhausted from the globe. Then the apparatus is ready to give out a light that produces no deleterious gases, no smoke, no offensive odors—a light without flame, without danger, requiring no matches to ignite, giving out but little heat, vitiating no air, and free from all flickering—a light that is a little globe of sunshine. And this light, the inventor claims, can be produced cheaper than that from the cheapest coal. The inventor finds that the electricity can be regulated with entire reliability at the central station, just as the measured gas is now regulated. The entire cost of constructing the lamp is not more than twenty-five cents."

Why She Dried Her Tears.

As the train over the Detroit Lansing & Northern Road reached Plymouth, the other day, going west, a couple on the depot platform were seen to embrace, kiss, hug again and separate, and the woman got aboard the train with her handkerchief to her eyes. She seated herself in front of a man with an open face and any amount of sympathy around the corners of his eyes, and he presently leaned forward and said:

"It is, indeed, hard to part from those we love."

"Yes-yes-'tis," she sobbed.

"I suppose that man was your husband?"

"Yes-yes."

"You are to leave his happy home for a visit to some friends, I presume?"

"Yes, I'm going to Lansing to see ma."

"Just so," continued the benevolent man, "and yet how hard it is to tear yourself from the side of your dear partner! You no doubt believe him the dearest man on earth?"

"Yes-yes."

"I see him press something into your hand as he left, and he seemed to say, 'Here, my darling, is a gift from your husband.' How lover-like—how like a good husband."

The woman had one hand tightly shut. She now opened it, brushed her tears away, and all at once called out:

"The miserable, contemptible old thing—I'll stay all winter and not write him a single word! I just wish I could see him for about a minute!"

"Madam, why this agitation?" asked the man.

"That's why!" she snapped, as she lifted a quarter against the front door. "That's what he passed into my hand at parting, and that's the pin-money he expected to last me three weeks and pay fare home on a dog! If I ever get back I'll broomstick him out of his boots!"

"How lover-like—how wife-like!" sighed the old man, as he fell back, while the woman opened the window and poked her head out and made up faces at the last house in Plymouth.—Detroit Free Press.

Capital Punishment.

NEW YORK, December 31.

A reporter for a morning paper visited the Tombs to-day, and discussed, with men imprisoned on the charge of murder, the forms of capital punishment. One regarded hanging as "too ignominious and uncertain," and added: "I do not think a death of agony is a deterrent to crime, and good moral effects of executions are mere deceptions." Another preferred drowning in water or whisky. A third quoted the couplet.

So rogue e'er felt, etc.

and said: "Stand me against the wall and send a bullet through my heart." A fourth would prefer chloroform, remarking that "the contemplation of death by hanging was enough to drive a criminal insane." One Italian, who was unable to speak English, indicated a preference to be stabbed to death, while another Italian pointed rather to his head, which was interpreted to mean drowning. A man under a life-sentence answered the usual question thus: "If I had a choice my way of death, I should prefer suffocating by gas. It is the only merciful and respectable means of execution. Hanging is a disgrace, which is covered by the name of justice." An accomplice of crime with a preceding prisoner, who declared himself no murderer, not only favored hanging every murderer, but exclaimed: "I am in favor of quartering the fiends." Ballo, under sentence of death for killing his wife, was found on his knees in prayer, but his prayers were not powerful enough to save him from the cruel questioner, to enable him to preserve a calmness or spirit as he answered the heartless question, "Do you believe murderers ought to be put to death?" "Me no want to die; me want to live; me only twenty-four years old—too young. Me pray all the time. Me believe in Jesus Christ—He makes me nice; keeps me in jail long time; suffer me good. He want be good. Oh, save me! save me!" The Warden was moved to tears by the broken appeals, and the chronicler withdrew to chat with that interesting criminal, Chastine Cox, who announced his belief in hanging all men over fifty years of age, but young fellows, like himself and the reporter, would be likely to repent and reform, the two out being hardened old rascals, but beings with feelings and hopes. The soldier's death, however, was announced as Cox's individual preference. Two printers refused to converse, one saying he was afraid of exciting himself and injuring his reason.

Not Her Motto.

A Woodward avenue policeman was, the other day, halted near the City Hall by a two-hundred-pound woman with a parcel in her hand, and she requested to be directed to the store where they sold mottoes. He asked what particular store she wanted, and she explained:

"Well, I can't tell. My old man came to town yesterday, and I wanted him to buy the motto of 'God Bless our Home.' He got in somewhere where they told him that stylish folks no longer hung up that motto, and the old idiot went and brought home this one."

She unrolled the parcel and held up a card on which was tastily painted,

"don't ask for ex-lit—Our terms are cash."

"You needn't grin," she said, as he laughed at the card again. "I'm heavy on foot, and the walking is bad, but I'm going to walk this town till I find the man who got this thing off on Samuel for 'God Bless our Home.'"—Detroit Free Press.

A Countryman's Wild Leap From a Moving Elevator.

Two men from Illinois, farmers apparently, sturdily built and ordinarily intelligent, entered the Tribune office yesterday afternoon, about three o'clock, and, before they left, one of them had created a sensation of a decidedly startling nature, and afforded one of the most striking illustrations on record of extreme stupidity and simplicity. The men said that they wished to look through the building, and were told that they would be taken anywhere even to the top in the elevator, the location of which was pointed out to them. One of the men entered the elevator, but the other, for some reason, stayed outside. The boy in charge of the elevator closed the door and pulled the rope, starting the thing upward. As the elevator began rising the man inside leaned to his feet, glared about him in terror and yelled to his companion, "My God, where am I going?" He hesitated but an instant. The elevator was moving slowly and the transom over the door at the bottom was still visible. In a desperate endeavor to escape the terrified man threw himself at it head first, at the same moment that the boy, with rare presence of mind, jumped to the rope and reversed the movement. The action was just in time; the ascending elevator caught the passenger's head between its floor and the casing of the transom and plucked it slightly before the movement was reversed and the head released. Then the man jerked back and, as the descending elevator showed the glass window in the door beneath, he again plunged forward, head first, and went through like a cannon-ball striking at length on the floor of the hall leading to the street and a mass of broken sash and shattered glass. Then, quick as lightning, the terror-stricken being bounded to his feet and out of the hall and up Chestnut street like the wind, following his only less terrified companion who had dashed out into the street at the first veil from the elevator.

The alarmed countrymen were followed, and at last the man who had leaped through the window was induced to come back and be convinced that the danger he had fled from was imaginary. He looked at the boy in ominous

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Domestic.

THE case of the Lottery Agents against the Postmaster-General was dismissed on the 22d, at the instance of the counsel for the plaintiffs. It was stated that the lottery men would await the result of the application for an injunction against all Post Office Departments pending future letters before pushing any other cases.

OWING to the scarcity of greenbacks in the Treasury new 3 and 5 dollar notes can not be furnished from the Washington office for bankers' drafts.

AT the recent International Dairy fair in New York a cheese double the number of premiums of any other State; and John Stewart, of Iowa, had a greater number than any other exhibitor.

A DISPATCH was received at Washington on the evening of the 23d, from Los Pinos, 30th, stating that Ouray had returned from the White River Utes. He had given the little until the 25th to bring in the prisoners. The man his ultimatum, and if it was not complied with by that time he would call for Government troops and assist them to a war against Chief Douglas and his tribe. Another dispatch from Los Pinos, dated the 31st, says Ouray had informed the Commission that the Indians had accepted his ultimatum. Gen. Hatch was among the party with the prisoners, but was compelled to await the arrival of Sawyers, who was on his way from Grand River, on account of the state of the roads. Washington. Chief Jack had decided to quit the reservation and join Stirling Hall. He informed Gray that he was going to Utah with a car-load plenty of ammunition, and he proposed to fight.

A DECISION of importance to all purchasers of public lands by "private entry," has been rendered by the Secretary of the Interior to the effect that whenever, prior to patenting, it is discovered that the land previously entered and entered as agricultural is in really mineral in its character, the entry must be canceled and the land reserved for entry under the laws especially applicable to mineral lands. The issue was presented by the case of Smith Scroggin vs. Carter A. Bonnet et al., involving the title to a tract of 9.80 acres of land in the Camden (Ark.) district, which was purchased from the Government at the private entry in 1878, but subsequently found to contain argentiferous lead ore.

A LARGE corset and suspender factory in New York City was destroyed by fire on the 23d. Twenty women were in the building, and escaped with their lives. Four of them jumped from the seventh story upon the roofs of adjoining buildings, a distance of three stories, and were seriously injured. Two firemen were severely injured. The entire loss is about $300,000.

THE butchers employed at the various packing-houses in Chicago struck a few days ago, ostensibly because in some of the establishments men were employed who did not belong to the Butchers and Packers Union. On the 24th none of the packing-houses were buying stock, and only ranking to work on the lodge on hand. The results of the strike up to that date were the idleness of from 5,000 to 10,000 men, a sharp decline in the price of live hogs, and an appreciation in the price of the manufactured product.

WHAT purported to be a cargo of oranges was received at New York a few days ago, and on unloading the same it was discovered that the boxes were filled with sand, small portions of the fruit being used at knockdown prices to deceive the eyes of the inspectors. Baring Bros., of London, advanced money on the stuff, and will be the principal losers.

D. A. SIKES, an old man, committed suicide on the 26th by jumping from the new suspension bridge at Niagara Falls.

GAS stocks were pitched sold at New York on the 26th for the first time since the announcement of Edison's new discoveries. The prices obtained were much lower than those prevailing before the late renewal of speculative interest in the electric light.

ON the 24th Bosse, the book-keeper of the Iron & Marine Insurance Company's Bank at Milwaukee, who lately defaulted, pleaded guilty to embezzlement and was sentenced to two years' imprisonment in the House of Correction.

AN opera bridge on the Ohio & Mississippi Railway was thrown from the track near Borden, Ill., on the 26th, by a broken rail. In the chair-car the stove upset and, the wood-work taking fire, the coach was soon in flames. Passengers were all rescued except Colonel Bond, of Auburn, Ill., who was fatally burned. The porter of the sleeper was killed and about twenty-five passengers were slightly injured.

DISPATCHES received on the 26th say that Ouray prevented himself at Los Pinos on the 24th with the chiefs selected to accompany him to Washington, but, as he had brought in only a part of the members of Thornburg's and Meeker's command, Gates refused to start until the demands of the Commission had been complied with. Ouray demanded more time, and in general, getting him five days, promised to meet his coming at Uline's ranch, thirty miles away.

IT is said that the conferences with New York bankers and others have convinced Secretary Sherman that a vast amount of 6's and 6's, which will accrue during the next year or two, cannot be funded at less than four per cent.

THE gas men of New York City were requested a meeting on the 26th that they were interested in the reports of the successful operation of the electric light. They had investigated the subject thoroughly, some months ago, and were of the opinion that there is "nothing in it."

GEORGE LUNN, who was personating SARA CROSS at a Thespian festival in the Methodist Church at Pataskala, Ohio, was seriously, and probably fatally, burned by his costume taking fire.

Personal and Political.

FRANK BARTON, of the Burlington Hawk Eye, has been appointed by the President Postmaster at Burlington, Iowa.

A COLUMBIA (S. C.) dispatch of the 24th says that Governor Simpson having been elected Chief Justice at the late election, Senator T. B. Jeter would be Governor until the next election.

THE bill authorizing allowances for loss by leakage or casualty of spirits withdrawn from distillery warehouses for exportation has been approved by the President.

THE excitement throughout Maine over the situation of political affairs in that State was sustained on the 24th. Up to that date several local caucus meetings of those opposed to the course of the Governor and Council had been held, and strong denunciatory resolutions had been in several cases adopted. A meeting of the Republican State Committee and prominent Republicans from various parts of the State, held in Senator Blaine's residence at Augusta on the 23d, resulted in the appointment of a committee to advise and cooperate with the Republican members of the Legislature. Senator Blaine has made a speech against the action of the State authorities, in which he said "a great popular uprising will avert these evils (described by him) and restore honest government in Maine and the people are strongly moving." The Fusionists held a public meeting at Augusta on the evening of the 25th, at which speeches were made indorsing the action of the Governor as being thoroughly in accordance with the law and the Constitution of the State. Resolutions expressive of these views were adopted. Governor Garcelon made a speech saying that himself and colleagues he sustained in the action they had taken. At an indignation meeting in Portland on the same evening ex-Governor Washburn presided. The assemblage criticised severely the action of the Governor and Council, and appealed to "honest Democrats to denounce their proceedings."

DISPATCHES from Bangor, Me., on the 26th say that city was the scene of great excitement growing out of an attempt being made by citizens to remove the arms and ammunition from the State Arsenal to the railroad depot. The Mayor of the city, a number of ex-Mayors and other prominent citizens signed a communication to the Governor stating that, on seeing the movement of the arms and ammunition along the principals streets of the city, "there was an immediate uprising of the citizens, so filling the streets as to prevent the passing of the teams. The Mayor, who had been sent for, having no knowledge of the authority under which the arms were being moved, first demanded who assumed the responsibility of the movement. He was answered by a Mr. French, representing himself to be a clerk in the Adjutant General's office, that he was acting under verbal instructions from Governor Harvelon to remove the arms and ammunition to the railroad in Augusta. Mr. French, seeing the difficulties in the way, and being informed by the Mayor that he might be unable to restrain the people with the force at his command, decided to return the arms to the arsenal, and the citizens quietly dispersed." At a meeting of prominent citizens, held in the evening, the situation was fully discussed, and it was unanimously determined to use every effort to prevent any disturbance and allay public excitement.

PRESIDENT HAYES was in Philadelphia on the 26th, and dined in the evening at the residence of Mr. John Welch, meeting General Grant, who was also a guest there.

RECORDER HACKETT, of New York City, died on the 26th.

THE Socialists met in National Convention at Pittsburgh, Pa., on the 26th, forty delegates being present. A. R. Parsons, of Chicago, was elected temporary President. In his address the President said the party ground twelve years ago was out of debt and had money in the treasury, and was generally flourishing, financially and otherwise.

THE opinion prevailed at Augusta, Me., on the 26th that Governor Garcelon would agree to offer the pending political troubles to the courts, in accordance with a suggestion to that effect from ex-Governor Morrill. He had been petitioned to do so by a large number of citizens of both parties.

MR. MOODY, the evangelist, stated in a recent interview at St. Louis, in regard to the alleged conversion of Dan Rice and the circumstances that he would speak at Moody's meetings, that there was no foundation for these reports. So far as he knew, Dan had never been converted. He had had but one conversation with Rice, and in that he gave no evidence of conversion whatsoever. Rice had not been announced to speak at the meetings, nor would he be. Mr. Moody added: "In such cases it is not for us to put new men forward at once, but our call is, southern immediately to preach, either or lecture. It is well to try them awhile, and when their life and acts show the genuineness of the change, it is time enough to put them forward on the platform."

Foreign.

A DISPATCH from St. Petersburg on the 23d says the revolt in Afghanistan was wholly due to the enmity of the British ameer Cabul fell into their hands. It charges General Roberts with the grossest inhumanity to the city, with the prisoners taken at that time.

AT an election held on the 22d a Liberal member of Parliament was elected from Sheffield, Eng., to succeed the late Mr. Roebuck. There was great excitement and some rioting.

PROFESSOR NORDENSKJOLD, the Arctic explorer, in a letter to the Russian Geographical Society, advocates the establishment of a regular navigation line to the mouth of the River Yenisei, in Siberia. He even believes that the mouth of the River Lena may be regularly reached from Russia and America, and, with a view to this end, he proposes the establishment of life-boat and hospital stations on Siberian shores.

THE steamer Borussia, which sailed from Liverpool November 20, for New Orleans, foundered in mid-ocean on the 24 of December, of the crew and passengers on board (195 of the former and fifty-four of the latter) the only persons known to be saved are the Chief Engineer, the doctor, the boatswain and six seamen, who were picked up in an open boat on the 5th and reached Queenstown, Ireland, on the 23d.

OF the political offenders recently convicted at Odessa, Russia, three have been hanged, and four others condemned to imprisonment for terms ranging from ten to fifteen years. At Kieff on the 23d the authorities surprised and surrounded a body of Nihilists while in secret session, and secured ninety-eight persons.

IT was announced from Madrid on the 24th that one branch of the Spanish Cortes had passed the bill for the abolition of slavery in Cuba, by a vote of 134 ayes to 14 noes.

THE question of secession from the British Empire and annexation to the United States is quite being agitated in Canada.

A TELEGRAM from Alexandria, Egypt, on the 24th says disatches had been received from General Hardinge, containing such preposterous propositions that the only conclusion on the part of the Khedive and his advisers was that he had suddenly become deranged.

ANOTHER defeat of the allied forces of Peru and Bolivia by the Chilians was announced on the 26th.

SECESSIONIST, the South African voyage who has resisted the British since the fall of Cetswayo, has been captured and sent as a prisoner to Pretoria.

IN a recent colliery explosion near Bolton, Eng., eleven men were badly, and some of them fatally, injured.

THE British Ambassador at Constantinople has demanded the release of the Musselman under sentence of death in that city for having translated the Bible into the Turkish language.

AN outward-bound bark, having on board two sons of Wm. Lloyd Garrison, of Boston, was spoken by a steam tug which arrived at Liverpool on the 24th.

Three Children Burned to Death.

AT Mount Holly, N. J., near this city, to-day, the dwelling of Matthew Gleason, a laboring-man living on the tenant-farm of James W. Allen, near Eayestown, was totally destroyed by fire, his three little children perishing in the flames. Gleason, who with his wife slept in an upper story, was awakened by a crackling noise and a strong smell of smoke. He hurried down stairs to find the shed in the rear of the kitchen in a blaze. On opening the door the flames rushed in with such fierceness that he was compelled to retreat for his life. He awakened his wife, and the two jumped from a window, hardly reaching the ground before the building was a sheet of fire. Three children—two boys aged ten and two years, respectively, and a little girl aged seven—appeared at the upper window, making frantic efforts to escape, and shrieking piteously for help. Their agonized screams were distinctly heard by the heart-broken mother, and, unable to bear the strain, she fainted. The distracted father tried, by means of a pole, to reach the window, but without avail, and the children perished in his sight. The locality is sparsely settled, the small house being a quarter of a mile distant, and, before aid could arrive, all that remained were a few charred bones and a heap of smoking embers. The Gleasons were taken care of by sympathizing neighbors. After the fire they went to where to recover the bodies of the children. When found they were burned to a crisp. Of one boy only the skull and spine, the two others being without head, arms, or legs. The bones were carefully gathered, and will be interred to-morrow in one coffin. Philadelphia (Dec. 22) Special to Chicago Tribune.

Time Lost.

MUST of us fritter away a great deal of time. We are wasteful of the minutes when we are wasteful of nothing else. Nothing is easier than to fritter away time in matters of no use to ourselves or any one else. The habit is readily formed. It grows upon us unawares. Keep a strict account of every hour of your time for a single week, setting down the exact manner in which every hour is spent, and whether, when you come to review the record, you do not find it full of minutes and hours wasted. In this simple way one can readily understand the secret of his want of time. He will discover that he has given hours to idle talk, to indolence and to inconsiderable trifles, which have yielded him neither profit nor pleasure. What is the remedy? Arrange your work in the order of its comparative importance. Attend first to the things which are demanded to be done, and let the unessentials take their chance afterward. The difference in the amount of work accomplished will be astonishing. Duty before pleasure. Those who practice this precept have plenty of time for pleasure, and enjoy far greater satisfaction than those who disregard it. For there is great satisfaction to be obtained in the simple performance of one's duty.—Detroit Weekly.

AN Irish clergyman's daughter, aged twelve, said to her father that a certain consequential parson was "a haste." Sharp parental reproof being promptly administered, miss retorted that papa had used that very expression himself in last Sunday's service. "Certainly not," said the reverend papa, with much emphasis. "Oh, but you did," persisted miss. "I heard you say that the Lord exalteth himself shall be a haste."

A MAN at Georgetown while going into the cellar recently to split kindling wood fell and broke his neck. If his wife had been attending to her business he might have been at the club. It is plain that she is responsible for his death, but, being a woman, it is almost certain that no jury will ever punish her for it.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

A SAD tragedy happened at the foot of Butler street, Port Huron, on the morning of the 20th, between one and two o'clock, in which James D. Mulligan, who keeps a liquor store on the dock, shot and instantly killed Charles M. Howard, aged twenty-four, belonging to one of the first families of the city. He was out with a young man named Charles Fox, of Flint, and, becoming hungry, they started in search of some place where they could get a lunch. They tried to get into a restaurant on Huron avenue, but failed to gain admittance. They went down Butler street, and, seeing a light upstairs over Mulligan's store, Howard ascended the stairs while Fox lay on the outside of the building. He was knocked on the door and Mulligan, who was sitting up with a sick wife and children told him if he did not go away he would blow his brains out. He descended the stairs to where Fox was standing, and said: "It's no use, I can't get in there." There was a light in the Albion Block across the street, and they started to go over. When they were about half way across the street, Fox says he heard a shake or door open, and an instant later the discharge of a revolver. At the same time Howard, who had backed across with Fox, shouted, "My God, Charlie is shot!" and dropped to the ground a corpse. Mulligan says he supposed they were burglars, and as he threw the door open he saw a man, as he supposed to be the. The ball entered the back of Howard's head and passed out of his mouth, severing the jugular vein in its course. Mulligan was arrested for murder and lodged in jail to await examination. He has a good reputation with the police force of this city, and sympathy is felt for the Howard family.

THE 2d Michigan Sportsmen's Association determined to locate their State camp-meeting ground near Battle Creek on an estate of eighty acres, and to erect there a house, install a cook, and a hotel—all to cost about $50,000.

THE Legislature last winter changed the law in regard to the taxation of telegraph lines, and placed the assessing power in the hands of a special board, consisting of the State-Treasurer, Auditor-General and Commissioner of the State Land Office. The assessment just published for 1879 on the property of companies doing business in the State shows $2,150 more than any previous year, an increase of nearly one-half of one per cent of the tax. The Western Union contributes $2,050.

THE dangerous character of benzine was fully illustrated in the case of Wm. Lyon, a young man living south of Detroit, who late on the night of the 20th began cleaning a coat-collar with the excitable fluid, which ex-ploded, and by coming in contact with flame, but from the extreme heat of the air in the room. Taylor's clothes were set on fire, and his injuries were such that he died two hours ago after.

THE diphtheria which recently brought sorrow and death to the house of one of the prominent officers of the State Board of Health, at Lansing, was conveyed by contagion, it is said, in the neighborhood having the disease and failing to report to the authorities, contrary to the advice of the Board or the State laws.

GEORGE KORNER was killed in the woods near Manistee the other day by a tree falling on him. Korner's home was in Bache, Wis.

SEVENTEEN years ago, Jennie Burdick, then of San Francisco, Cal., but previously of East Saginaw, eloped with a Russian naval officer then with his ship at Yokos. They afterward went to Japan and subsequently went to St. Petersburg, where De Kaulenbach, the officer with whom the girl had served, was drowned by his family and afterward turned out of the navy, probably for marrying with an alien. Discovering that he was penniless and without employment, the girl got command of a merchant ship, and afterward, while on a voyage to America, skirmished and died while the ship was lying at Havre de Grace, France. His faithful wife, who had never left him, buried him on French soil, and then appealed to the parents of his sad and unhappy life. They posted to France, and recognizing the loyal woman who had loved their sailor lad as a person worthy of their love and esteem, gave her home with them, where, as a widow, she is given the love that was denied her as a bride.

MECHANICAL AND SCIENTIFIC.

DR. Henry A. Mott, Jr., of New York, contributes to the Scientific American an article showing by microscopical investigations that whooping cough is caused by a fungoid growth upon the larynx and pharynx, and that the disease can be killed by sulphate of quinine, which should be taken in the form of powder and snuffed, dissolved in the mouth. Dr. Mott experimented upon his own children with this drug with the most satisfactory results, they discontinuing the whoop entirely by the end of the fifth or sixth day.

LORD ELPHINSTONE and Charles Watts Vincent were the joint authors of a paper on magnetic currents in dynamo-electric machines, read lately before the Royal Society, London. They find that the continuance of the magnetism of electro-magnets does not depend upon the mulut nance of the electric current, but that it may be retained for an indefinite time if the iron is made to possibitite a close magnetic circuit. Thus, a magnet weighing 40 pounds, a fortnight after the current ceased, was lifted by its armature and gave sparks at the ends of its bolts when the armature was forcibly separated from the magnetic circuit. They promise a description soon of a dynamo-electric machine of great power, which has been constructed on these principles and is now undergoing experiments.

—Some time since the Academie des Sciences offered a prize of 2,500 francs for a method of substantially and permanently silvering mirrors, and which should save the workmen the danger of poisoning from the effect of mercurial vapors. The prize has been awarded to M. Lesoile, whose process is substantially as follows: The glass is first silvered by means of tartaric acid and ammoniacal nitrate of silver, and then exposed to the action of a weak solution of ammoniacal sulphate of copper and potassium. When the mercurial solution has spread uniformly over the surface it is covered with a thin layer of wax, which promptly reduces the quicksilver and permits it to form a white and brilliant silver amalgam. After drying strongly to the glass, and which is affirmed to be free from the yellowish tint of others' silvered glass, and not easily affected by sulphurous emanations.

—The adoption of electricity as a mode of capital punishment has given a fresh impetus to scientific advocates in Germany as well as in France, as witness the following imposing description of a machine proposed by Professor Puppe: "In a dark room, draped with black, and which is lighted only by a single torch, the chamber of execution adjoins the room in the German goddess will carry a powerful battery in her hands, and this battery will be connected with the executioner's chair. Seated in front of the chair shall stand the judge's tribunal, and only the judge, jury, and other officials shall be present with the criminal during the ceremony of the execution. This will consist of the judge reading the story of the crime committed by the prisoner, who will be rigidly manacled to the aforesaid armchair, and when this is done the judge will bend his red of office, and tone it into one of the scale-pans of justice, at the same time extinguishing the solitary torch. The descent of the gun will complete the electric circuit, and shock the wretch into the next world."

AS TO FUTURE MOVEMENTS

of the Indians in Montana General Miles thinks their hostile operations will be circumscribed. Many settlers are coming into the Territory and locating along the Missouri and valley of the Yellowstone. These settlers are pouring in both from the East and West, and are developing an increased industry in the cattle business.

"By George! here's a prize, and a jolly one, too, after the alternate mass of slush and sorrow just listen to it, will you, and bear in mind it's my booty, as I made the find."

He then reads as follows:

MILWAUKEE, Wis., March 15.

MR. EDWARD CLARKE ESQ.—I believe you're a real honorable Ned, and that you're not as all, nor a whitewer, nor anything else sarcast in that genius. After carefully studying your little romance, I have made up my mind that you are one of two evils: either a deliciously wretched of a imsit, who wishes to laugh at and expose the follies of woman-kind, or else, and that's a great deal worse, a scoundrelous big female who would make poor gentle patients with the discovered weakness of her own sex. If you are the latter, I despise you, for I can't get any fun out of it, and if you are the former, I despise you for the former. I'll expose your cowardlies if you'll only publish yourself amusing. What you may discover, what I am you may find out for yourself. Shall now take up the love letter you sent to Josie Mason, and which I am a decided brunette and letter looking. I'm a decided brunette and letter looking, when the writer assumes to be a small, an old, and a young man, all in one person. I'm a man of many years, and am the last old saint, last fogey, and am the last old saint, moral, last pill and mixture as any person on this globe

"INTENSE SECTARIANISM."

Is it Real?

Mr. Editor:

The world has been informed, by several of our old persons, that, at the recent quarterly meeting held in the place, the new Methodist Episcopal Bishop, Rev. Mr. Ninde, had exerted his talents to "intensely sectarianize".

At once we heard of it, the question arose in our mind, is it true?

Then came personal definitions that Webster knew not of nor dreamed, many of which, if published in the dictionary, would be found to generally differ. Now we agreed not how to find that it meant, or how to ascertain its definition. Then came personalities, but at last always supposed it was to be of the school, and now see a little surprised to learn that, in this age of enlightened Christianity, a high official of a body of respectable denomination would commend his people to be "intensely sectarian."

Again, we ask the question, "is it true?" If it be so, for one branch of Protestantism, then it must be for every branch of the Protestantism as a whole, then why are the Calvinists, Democrats and every other denomination?

Why not "intense sectarianism" that will lead the people to glorify the Savior, some Stephen and help on Paul? And shall we conclude the exemplary denominational head of the Bapostle, during the reign of the Bloody Queen Mary, when she was pleased to burn to Anglican's sublime zeal less to settle controversy, simply because they were Protestants? Plus we remember with a sympathetic? The Roman Catholics have always believed in "intense sectarianism," and to this day are able, they are forced to it, than the Bible from our common schools, and would push through any one opposed to their ordered system, the pride of Absalom, and pervert the nation, nurse to the support of their own, a foreign power.

There is not, we aver, an official among all the Romish hierarchy, in these United States or in any other country, but what in spirit and word strives to inculcate in the hearts of the devotees of the Pope, the spirit of "intense sectarianism." And is it not our duty to set them as well as each other an example of liberality and charity that if possible we may win them and each other, by love?

CLERICUS.

Charlevoix, Jan. 6 1880.

Carpenter & Bartholomew have a good stock of leather on hand.

The celebrated high mass at the Cathedral in New York Christmas Day. Cardinal McCloskey wore vestments that cost thousands. Meanwhile Ireland is suffering for food.

Recorder Barnett, who died in New York last week, took the new departure for up in the market that cleaner people were more worthy of cultivation than the business, and when any of the prisoners offended he gave them the extent of the law. His last election was entirely due to the unparalleled rigor with which he dealt with offenders.

The Chicago Times thinks the Maine carnality the height of political folly. It says: "Whatever may be the immediate result in Maine, the effect of Governor Garcelon's coup will be disastrous to his party all over the country. It will be the finishing stroke to that mortgaged organization, the blow lettering the eyes which will stretch stiff in death the Bourbon and mossback Hides, which are already wrestling with approaching dissolution."

The way the Democrats have been manipulating in Maine is illustrated by the case of Androscoggin county. The supervisors there chosen were Republicans, but were counted out in the democratic state frauds, on the alleged ground that the return had been signed by one select man, instead of three, according to law. The three select men have since sworn that they each signed the return, three of the signers are a well known democrat.

Washington dispatches during the last week speak of Mr. Keogh, the recently elected secretary of the national republican committee, as having been busily engaged in mapping out the plan for the campaigning next summer. It is understood that he has devised a theme campaign, also and no coaching, covering a plan of operation in every election district in the United States. Mr. Keogh will remain at Washington several months, and preliminary arrangements at Washington express confidence that the full republican vote will be brought out, in which case there is hope of carrying two or three southern states.

Mr. Dixon's Lecture.

Mr. Editor:

Sir: I had the pleasure of hearing the lecture of the Hon. Mr. Dixon last evening (the first of the lecture course) before the Historical Society of Charlevoix. The house was well filled, and the audience paid the strictest attention. The subject of the lecture was History, and the speaker carried his silent listeners back over the rugged path to the time when Cæsar led his conquering legions to the shores of England, and still further back where the Jim mewitten spoke look out from the Pyramids of Egypt, and down to Greece and Rome and Runymede where King John signed the Magna Charta of English Liberty, and I may like to be heavy [illegible] arrows. It is needless for me to say that the lecture was into his address stock of classic lore, reminded one of a beautiful [illegible]. People with "getting facts and science" lucidly perished yet subtle mind. I hope I may be permitted to say that it was with the opening of the Historical Society of Charlevoix, its future may be easily predicted, and when the visitor comes from his northern home to pass a few weeks in and around our beautiful village, he may see a library of such a character that shall remind him of the past. Let no one complain that it is necessary to be a member of every literary society, and become [illegible].

Yours, W.

PRESIDENT CHERRIE, of the Pine Lake Iron Company, writes that he will visit Charlevoix immediately on his return from the East, where he now is.

MASONIC.—There will be a special communication of Charlevoix Lodge, F. & A. M., on Saturday evening Jan. 17th. A general attendance of the members is desired.

The next lecture before the Charlevoix Liberal Club will be delivered by Wm. Black; on the first Monday in February, on "Nature of Belief, and formation of Opinion."

STEPHENS, the Chief Engineer, of the G. R. & I. R. R., says unqualifiedly, that the next railroad that strikes either bay, will terminate at Charlevoix. We could have told him that.

STOCKMAN'S new building has been commenced. S. M. See has taken the contract of making the front, door and window frames, counters, shelving, etc, and will at once proceed with the work. The work throughout is to be first-class.

The matter of the construction of State Roads from Banks to Royne Falls, and Boyne to Springvale, has been referred by the State Board of Control to Commissioner Haviland for his examination. Mr. Haviland has supposed himself favorably to the construction of the roads, and there is little doubt that the grant will be made.

THE FURNACE COMPANY.

They Mean Business, and will Commence Their Work when Navigation Opens.

Of late, rumors have been rife, of the collapse of the Pine Lake Iron Company's plans in regard to the building of a furnace on Pine Lake.

We are in possession of information which enables us to state that these reports are entirely unfounded, and that the plans of the Company, are yet the same as have been represented to them.

Their letters to business men here are of such a tenor as to leave no room for doubt that they are as rapidly completing their arrangements as the magnitude of the enterprise will permit. Negotiations are in progress between them, and a prominent business man in Charlevoix for building stone, and they have offered to contract with another leading business man for 10,000 cords of wood, on our to land route.

They have contracted for their building brick and iron, and the ore for next season [illegible].

They assert that the people of this region are sure in getting out all the wood they can, which they will accept, at fairly remunerative prices.

Of course all their plans are pre-natal with the understanding that the people in this region will keep their faith in the pledges given to equip the cut between Round and Pine Lakes. This faith must be kept, in all hazards.

Upon the last phase of the subject, we have something to say elsewhere.

Nice maple sugar at Carpenter & Bartholomew's.

THE Maine legislature has been duly organized according to the Garcelon plan, and the fraud is consummated.

A daily line of steamers between Traverse City and Mackinac is talked of for next season, and it is more than likely that the City of Grand Rapids and the Tom Hamilton will do the business.

W. D. TOMLIN of Chicago, has been engaged by the G. R. & I. R. R. Co., to write up the Pine Lake region for their forthcoming guide book. Mr. Tomlin is an enthusiast on the subject, and an expert angler, and what he says in the guide book will do us justice. It may not be amiss to say that the extract from the Forest and Stream in another column of this issue is from his pen. Mr. Tomlin spends a month every summer on our inland waters, and generally makes Hotchkiss's Bay his headquarters.

M. E. SUNDAY SCHOOL.—The Union Sunday School, which has been held at the M. E. Church in this village, was on Sunday reorganized as a Methodist school with the following officers:

PERSONAL.—Hon. John Nicholls has been confined to his house and bed for some time by a painful attack of lumbago. He is recovering slowly.

—A. E. Palmer and wife are visiting at the home of R. Knight, Mrs. Palmer's father, in Banks. Mr. Knight and Mr. Palmer were in town Thursday.

—Treasurer Cooper, of Marion Township, returned Thursday from Grand Rapids, where he had been to collect the railroad tax of his township.

—Dr. C. A. Perrin, of this village, leaves today for Cheboygan, on professional business. He will return Saturday.

—Misses Bother and Essie Bowers have returned to their home in this village, from their visit to Port Austin.

—R. Miller, Esq., of this village, is quite seriously ill.

THE UPPER CHANNEL.

Every Consideration of Good Faith and Economy Demands that It Shall be Opened.

There is evidently but surely approaching upon the front, that stern and ghostly goblin, which for many years has disturbed the dreams and filled our pockets books.

The upper river question must soon be met, and met with overwhelming banks and promptness. The first consideration is one of finance. We, as a people, have pledged ourselves to open the rich consideration of the purchase of a site on Pine Lake for the personal interest of the Pine Lake Iron Company. So far, there is no reason to doubt the honesty or good faith of this company, and it remains for us to perform our part of the contract.

The second consideration, and which is coequal with the first in importance, is the imperative necessity which exists for the improvement of Pine Lake shipping facilities. The experience of the latter part of last season alone should teach us a [illegible] lesson on this subject.

We venture the opinion that the lighterage and other expenses caused by the shallow condition of the upper channel would in one season pay for the proposed improvement.

Does all this come out of the shipper? No. Does it come from the pockets of the middle man? No. Does it come from the vessel owners? No. Is it paid by the Chicago or Milwaukee dealer? He is manner of means.

It comes from the men in the Pine Lake region who own it first—in the first!

When we can furnish an unobstructed channel to Pine Lake, larger vessels will trade here, freights will come down, and, of course, a higher price will be paid for wood, ties, posts and all other commodities in which this region abounds.

This fact cannot be questioned.

Therefore it is of the utmost importance that the question should be considered now, while the season is in the right quarter" as it were, to speak. It is generally conceded that dredging without treatment is more than idle, and that the treatment should be done first. What is wanted is a united movement in the direction of getting out offers and forming them for the channel protection this winter. This done, the dredge can make a channel which will remain. This plan is the only truly economical one.

We hope those interested will push this matter.

The Charlevoix Liberal Club, and the public, are toward Monday evening with a lecture by Rev. L. Cole, on the "Life and Times of John Bunyan." Of course, no views taken by the speaker were from an orthodox standpoint, which may be as near right as any, may not be? It is certain however, that the lecture was interesting and instructive. Another fact is, that the city was full of the people, as an opportunity was offered our liberal minded friends to ease their minds. Reader, did you ever hear the pretty little parable of the spider and the fly? Do you suppose the spider wanted to enjoy the society of the fly, or feast upon the words that fell from his lips? No. The spider knew that the fly was "fair meat," and plied the poor insect had accepted the invitation of the neighbor, the places that had known him knew him no more forever. If we were not upon the rack and compelled to express an opinion about the "Liberal" of the Charlevoix Liberal Club, we also told say that it was a good deal like the "peace of Warsaw. Gentlemen, please don't invite us to lecture before your Association, especially upon theological subjects. We know there is truth in the saying that we receive some degree of our punishment in this world, but we prefer the scourges. An even handed debate is all right, but one man being showed up by an indefinite number of his intellectual peers, lacks the essential elements of true enjoyment, in our opinion. But nevertheless it is "fun for the boys," and as fair for one as it is for the other, and the truth should be able to bear probing, but why don't some of our orthodox friends join the club and give some of us "[illegible] it takes a few [illegible] under the short ribs, so to speak.

Sectarianism.

There is a great deal of vain and nonsense talked about sectarianism.

It is often imagined that if a man is fond of his church he is sectarian.

You might as a man is sectarian if he likes his own family better than any other in the same street. The man I call sectarian is the man who is not contented with the blessings of mother law, who is not content with his own wife and family, but who talks and growls about another man's family. Give me the man who has honest, earnest, convictions about his own church, and I extend to him the right hand of fellowship.

Love your Church, do all you can for it but try and imagine at the same time that other men are as conscientious as you are and give them the right hand of fellowship when they do all they can for the church,

Norman Macleod, D. D.

Erratum.

DEAR SENTINEL:

In my article last week on "Intense Sectarianism," the types made me say "Baptists" when I wrote "Papists." It was the Papists, and the Baptists, that persecuted the Protestants in the sixteenth century.

TERRIBLE RAILWAY-BRIDGE ACCIDENT.

Appalling Accident Near Dundee, Scotland—An Entire Train of Cars Containing Nearly 100 Passengers Hurled Through a Broken Bridge into the Frith of Tay—Not One of the Employees or Employes of the Train Survives the Disaster.

LONDON, December 29.

A portion of the bridge across the Frith of Tay was blown down while a train from Edinburgh to Dundee was crossing at fourteen minutes past seven o'clock last night. A dispatch says that the train was bound for Dundee, and had arrived safe at the south end of the bridge crossing the Frith of Tay, shortly after seven o'clock. The bridge was intact at the time, for signals were given to have the train to cross. The wires were interrupted a few minutes thereafter, and no further communication could be obtained. The gale was so strong that the steamboats were unable to reach the scene of the disaster, but several mail-bags have been washed ashore, four miles from the bridge, and there is no doubt that the train is in the water. Large quantities of wreckage and clothing and six London mail-bags for Dundee and Aberdeen drifted ashore, and by nine o'clock all the beach was strewn with the remains of broken carriages and pieces of bridgework.

A dispatch from Edinburgh, dated four this morning, says: "The portion of the bridge which fell consisted of several large superimposed girders at the centre and navigable portion of the river, which averages from forty to forty-five feet in depth. The train would fall about eighty-eight feet before reaching the water. Some time elapsed before the nature of the disaster was ascertained. The damage to the wires on the bridge and the badness of the weather interfered with the transmission of news, and it is unknown whether the girders were blown down before the train entered the bridge or were carried away with it, and it will probably never be ascertained, as there are no survivors. The bridge was only open for traffic in May, 1878. It was considered a triumph of engineering skill. It was about two miles long and had eighty-five spans, the widest of which was 245 feet. At the highest point it was 150 feet above high water."

The train left Edinburgh at 4:15 in the afternoon. It consisted of four third-class, one first-class and one second class, and the brakesman's van. At the last station before entering the bridge the tickets were taken and the train was then crowded.

Vast quantities of wreckage, such as doors and roofs of carriages, pieces of the bridge and articles of wearing apparel are coming ashore.

The entire thirteen girders of the long central spans of the bridge are gone.

The night was one of bright moonlight, but the wind was blowing a hurricane.

The Provost of Dundee and a party of citizens who accompanied him in a steamer to the scene of the disaster have returned. Search was made about the bridge in small boats, but no trace of any survivors could be found. The gap in the bridge is about half a mile long, comprising eleven of the longest spans, each 245 feet in length, and one span 145 feet in length.

A later dispatch from Dundee asserts that the number of lives lost does not exceed ninety. The bodies of six victims have been recovered.

THE WEATHER.

Colorado and Switzerland Compared.

"Is Colorado as beautiful and grand as Switzerland?" I often hear the question and have often asked it of myself while journeying through these mountains. After a first mountain trip of about four hundred miles I was ready to answer, no; it was only after seeing Estes Park that my opinion wavered, for that, at least, was as beautiful as anything that I had seen in a rather limited Swiss tour. Yet there are certain elements of beauty among the Swiss mountains that are wanting in Colorado. The difference is chiefly due to the very much smaller precipitation of moisture in the center of our continent. As a consequence the lakes are few and small as compared with the Swiss, though often of exceeding beauty. Mountain streams and high waterfalls are comparatively rare. Though the winters here are longer and more severe, the snow-fall is so much less that no peaks are wholly covered with snow through the summer as are some of the highest Alps; nor is there a glacier to be found in the State. The number of very lofty mountains is far greater in Colorado than in Switzerland, but none are as high as either Mont Blanc or Monte Rosa; yet much of the impression of height is, of course, lost on account of the great altitude from which they are usually viewed. The plains at the base of the foot-hills are from five to six thousand feet above the sea, and the mountain parks vary in altitude from seven to ten thousand feet, while the highest peak in the State hardly exceeds fourteen thousand five hundred feet. Yet in spite of these points of inferiority which a traveler fresh from Switzerland would notice, there are certain great charms about the Rocky Mountains peculiarly their own. In some parts there is a display of stupendous perpendicular grandeur, of wild, jagged and fantastic rocks, of strange towers and needles of stone that is not found in other mountainous regions. The deep, dark canyons have a gloomy, rocky, Plato, in the form of pinnacles, tankards and waiters, was such in most families of any circumstances. Punch, an almost common beverage, was drunk from one large bowl, and beer from a tankard of silver. At dancing assemblies no gentleman under twenty-one or lady under eighteen was admitted, and the supper consisted of tea, chocolate and rusk. Six merchant managers distributed partners by lot for the evening, leaving nothing to the success of forwardness or favoritism. Gentlemen always drank tea with the parents of the ladies who were their partners the day after the assembly." Invitations were printed on playing cards: "The honor of Miss ——'s company is desired to be held at six o'clock, p. m., ——," minus the queen of hearts, and in one of many such tragedies still preserved.—From Mayer, in Harper's Magazine for January.

—A method has been discovered for making more than the usual quantity of tea from any given quantity of the leaf. The whole secret consists in steaming the leaf before steeping. By this process, it is said, fourteen pints of good quality may be brewed from one ounce of tea.

MECHANICAL AND SCIENTIFIC.

—Nordenskjold is to make another voyage of exploration, departing from the River Lena to the New Siberian Isles, as soon as he conveniently can, in order to obtain the data necessary to render the coast of Asia on the north safely accessible to maritime commerce.

—The Nature reports that the recent Hungarian earthquakes were attended with phenomena of a most remarkable character. One of the shocks divided the large Danubian island near old Moldavia in two, and from the chasm thus formed a huge column of water was ejected sufficient to partly flood the island. Suddenly, there was a cessation of this flow, but black sand and clay were thrown up from many pencil-shaped craters in the leasure. Months of cares near Weissbrichen had fallen in, and the ruins of the Castle of Golubacz were demolished. But as the waves were the breeding-places of the Kolumbacz mosquitoes, the agitation will not be considered an unmixed calamity if it has also caused the utter destruction of the insect pests.

—The engineering statement that Mr. Robert Packer, while traveling in Nebraska, had canvassed with his wife and friends at his home at Sayre, by means of a telephone, a distance of two thousand miles intervened, is thus modified by the Scientific American: "It is now from good authority that though Mr. Packer's friends received his communication by telephone from Boston, sent by Mr. Packer. The messages were from Nebraska to March Chunk, Pa., by telegraph; thence it was telegraphed to the Sayre office of the Pennsylvania Canal & Railroad Company, of which Mr. Packer is Superintendent, and from there it was transmitted to Mr. Packer's house by telephone, falling short of the first report of the telephone's performance by some 1,999 miles and a fraction."

—In France rains made from potatoes is largely used for culinary purposes. The famed grandes, sauces and sauce of France are largely indebted for their excellence to that source, and its starch and sugar principles are a source of great deal of the so-called cognac, imported into England from France, is the product of the potato. Throughout Germany the same uses are common. In Poland the manufacture of spirits from the potato is a most extensive industry. "Steetin brandy" is well known in commerce, is largely imported into England, and is sent from thence to many other parts. Potato champagne is the product of the grape, and is placed on many a table of England as the same, while the fair ladies of our country perfume themselves with the spirit of potato, under the designation eau de Cologne. But there are other uses which this excellent tuber is turned to advantage. After extracting the farina the pulp is manufactured into ornamental articles. Boxes, picture frames, cigar-cases and several descriptions of toys, and the water that runs from it in the process of manufacture is the most valuable scourer. For perfectly cleansing woolens and such like articles, it is the housewife's panacea, and if the washerwoman happens to have chilblains she becomes cured by the operation.—Chicago Times.

—At a recent meeting of the Physical Society, London, Dr. Shettle gave an account of some experiments which suggested to him that the blood exercises an induction power on the various structures of the body of animals. Copper and zinc wires, well insulated from each other with parchment paper and paraffined silk, were wound closely together in spiral form. Connecting, then, one extremity of the copper and one of the zinc wires to the terminals of a galvanometer, while the other ends of the wires were free, the needle was deflected. There was no indication of a current when the adjoining free ends were placed in an intimate connection; the needle remained stationary. When hot water was poured inside the coils so as to increase the temperature of the warm, the deflection of the needle of the galvanometer was considerably augmented. Dr. Shettle then began to freeze an analogy between this physical arrangement, with its results, and certain physiological combinations and the probable source. Like the copper and zinc coil, the heart is made up of nerves and muscular fibers, wound spirally, and some of these about each other, so as to form a number of capillaries are also in intimate relation with this spiral. An inference was, therefore, drawn that the nerve and muscle fibers may present indirect electric currents the same as the wires. It was clear that if the warm blood may increase this current, a like current in the wires was increased by the hot water.

Starved to Death.

Yesterday morning at six o'clock Carries A. Gordon, aged fourteen years, died of starvation at the residence of his father, Mr. T. J. Gordon, on Forty-fourth street, Lawrenceville. The case is one of the most remarkable on record, and at the same time one of the saddest. For four weeks the lad has lived without tasting the least bit of food or drinking a drop of water. Several prominent physicians, among whom were Drs. E. H. Hamm, B. M. Isaacs, Jr., P. Iler and R. H. Clark, were interviewed on the subject, and they all join in saying that they have never seen nor heard of an instance to equal the one in question.

A reporter of the Post called upon the bereaved family yesterday afternoon, and obtained from Mrs. Gordon a statement of the case, which is as follows: About three years ago Carries became afflicted with St. Vitus's dance, and has ever since then been troubled with the disease. Several months ago there appeared on his neck a large lump which increased in size until it resembled a tumor. It was not painful, however, but was attributed by some to scrofula. This caused him to hold his head in a twisted position, which was quite painful. The little fellow soon began to complain of being ill, and said it was very difficult for him to eat. He grew rapidly worse, and finally became so weak that he had to take his bed on Thanksgiving Day. From the time on he could not swallow a mouthful of food or a particle of water. Otherwise the boy was perfectly well. The case completely baffled Drs. Hamm and Isaacs. Dr. Brines, of Fourth avenue, it appears that the entire roof of Charlie's mouth and the inside of his throat, including the œsophagus or windpipe, was eaten away. In a few days he became terribly reduced in flesh and grew weaker every day, being every known means known in medical science to save the lad's life, and finding that they failed, Dr. Brines gave up all hopes of his recovery. This was only a week after he took his bed, and the physicians who have been watching the case felt sure he could not live longer than a couple of days. But they were astonished as he lingered on from day to day, and did not die until fifty hours weeks after he had been given up, and all that time without nourishment of any kind.

The poor little fellow's sufferings were terrible, said the story, as told by Mrs. Gordon, could not fail to bring tears to the eyes of the strongest man. For several days after he was confined to his room the smell and sight of cooking victuals would almost make him wild, and he would crave for them for hours at a time. It finally affected him so much that the cooking was done in the house of a neighbor. Everything he desired, even to the choicest dainty, was produced, but when set before him he could only place a bite on his tongue, but could not swallow it, and finally he would spit it out. The same with water. They would place a cup of the fluid to his lips, but his power for sipping it was gone. So utterly helpless did he look that he was a most distressing spectacle. He continued to get thinner and thinner until he was a mere skeleton, and it is said was drawn up like a little old man. His voice became a husky whisper, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he could talk at all. At night he seemed to sleep very well, but the moment he awoke he commenced to beg for something to eat or drink. On several occasions he would tell his mother that during the night he had such a beautiful dream about grand suppers where he could eat with the greatest of ease. Then realizing that it was only a dream he would burst out in sobs. The other day he asked her if she would have a good dinner for him in Heaven, and being answered in the affirmative, said he wanted to go there. On Christmas and up to the time of his death his agony was heartrending. He appeared to be crazy for water only toward the last. One day he told them to put a hose in the window and run the room full of water so that he would be covered with it. He thought he would burn up if they didn't. On another occasion at his request they laid him in the bathtub and let him rest in the water, but he was not relieved. Seeing a small hose he run some water in his ear in a wild effort to get some to his stomach.

The scene at the bedside during the horrible agony he died yesterday morning, literally of starvation, while he was surrounded with food and drink. He was in full possession of his senses until the last moment.

What was the real cause of the eating away of the root of the mouth and the œsophagus is not known. Some attribute it to a scrofulous affection, while others consider it a sort of cancer.—Pittsburgh Post.

—The Roman Catholic Archbishop of Cashel, in a letter to the Dublin Freeman, earnestly deprecates emigration as a remedy. "I have seen," he writes, "the scattered children of our race in almost every land since the sun shines upon it, and, after a fair experience in the great Republic of the West, and in the numerous dependencies of Great Britain, I have no hesitation in saying that an Irishman's fittest and happiest home is Ireland. Religion is essential to the happiness of the Irish Catholic, and nowhere is he so sure of finding it as in Ireland. We must resist any proposal of this kind—an extensive emigration scheme—as an outrage on the country."

"What were the worst results of the civil war?" cried an orator. "Widows," shouted Jones, who had married one.

Beautify Rural Homes.

Much as has been said and written of late years on the importance of rendering rural homes attractive, the subject is by no means exhausted, and is of special interest to country residents. The topic is certainly of sufficient interest to enlist the attention, if it does not insure the action, of all rural readers of the Observer who believe in genuine progress and improvement.

One of the greatest drawbacks to American farm life is its monotony. To break up this monotony and brighten and render attractive our rural homes should be among the earnest aims of those who appreciate the benefits of a well-ordered and beautiful home, and would imbue their children with such a love of country life and pursuits that they will remain on the homestead in preference to seeking distant and uncertain occupations. As it now is, and has been for many years, the farmers' sons willingly embrace any opportunity after arriving at an age when they can enter other pursuits; and this will continue to be the case for all time to come, until more attention is given to making our rural homes more pleasant and attractive. Indeed, unless farm life be made more enticing and enjoyable in various ways, young men of spirit, ambition and taste will naturally seek village and city occupations, with, perhaps, a dread of having pleasant surroundings.

Such being the condition of many agricultural districts of the country, (there are notable exceptions), it becomes the duty of farmers who regard the welfare and would retain the society of their children to devote special attention to the embellishment of their homes and the aesthetics of rural life generally. They should not only attend to the style of dwellings and immediate surroundings, but must be suitable provision for the mental entertainment and improvement of the various members of their households. Among other essentials, it is important to supply the library shelves with periodical and books of an interesting, entertaining and useful character, and to surround the dwelling with such flowers, plants, shrubs, etc., as will embellish the scene and tend to render it a source of pleasure to inmates, visitors and wayfarers. Though the outlay may be considerable at first, the investment will soon show what can be done toward rendering their homes more beautiful—and, after all, the ladies are most interested in making both the interior and exterior of their dwellings pleasing alike to kinsmen, friends, and strangers.—N. Y. Observer.

WESTMINSTER, CONN., June 19, 1875.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir:—I feel it to be my duty to tell you what VEGETINE has done for me. My little boy had a terrible sore break out on his face, which the doctors called Scrofula. They said it was impossible to cure it. He was under the care of two physicians, and they both gave him up. I then commenced using your VEGETINE, and before I had used one bottle I could see a change for the better. I have used seven bottles, and my boy's face is entirely well. I cannot say too much in favor of your VEGETINE. Yours, respectfully, MRS. H. H. DRAPER.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 13, - - 1880

FOR PRESIDENT IN 1880,

ULYSSES S. GRANT.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

NEW YORK, JAN. 8, 1880.

The old year slipped out weeping in an icy sort of way and its last week took on with it two prominent New York citizens, Alexander Hackett is dead. So is George (Count) the Count Jumbos. The former was the tenor of burglars and snaps. The use of a prime actor, in father having per haps the very best impersonator of Pat staff who ever appeared on any stage, he had the coolness of the hearts about him. As he delicately pared his nails, he would pleasantly remark to a convicted culprit that he was the biggest fellow he had ever met, and then pick out the dreadful sentence "Twenty years." His life was threatened almost daily, but he took his walks abroad with his pistol in each pocket of his velvet sack coat and it was well known he was a dead shot. To get the drop on him required more nerve and consciousness of right than is possessed by the average thief or murderer. Hackett was a great sportsman, and while not a popular man had many warm friends, and retained his responsible office under any and all changes of parties in the municipal government. No higher compliment would have been paid to his sterling merits, for in New York the practice of victors seizing all the spoils is carried out to its fullest extent as a rule. Hackett could have claimed the title of Baron Hackett in the peerage of Ireland. Count Jumbo, the one American nobleman who bore a title, who was really a nobleman, having received a genuine title from some petty German Prince Palatine, was at one time a very fair actor. He then became a fair lawyer, but some law in his interest so influenced him that he became very eccentric, and of late years was "gayed" in the most outrageous way in everything he undertook. His peculiarly shabby genteel attire, stilted tragic walk, glossy locks and portentous wig and dyed mustache, his blazing decoration and most wise fumbling to every one, from the newsboys up. Seldom entertained him, and the Sun used to publish his preposterous nonsense with an air of solemn awe and exaggerated respect that was very funny in itself. He died attended by his adopted daughter, Aranda Fairbanks, whom he had befriended with his usual Quixotic chivalry. He hadn't a real enemy in the world, and many who laughed oftenest at the poor, harmless old man will feel sorry now he's gone. Even the rowdy persons he occasionally assaulted as he asserted his dignity never bore malice.

Whether people should call in swallow-tails or frock-coats, or whether there was going to be any calling at all in the time-honored fashion first adopted on these shores by the good Manhattanese, has been agitating polite circles, but with the first day of 1880 all doubts were at rest. Everything went off in the most jolly way, just as on many happy New Year's before, only possibly a little more so, for the clouds are rolling further back every day and getting turned inside out, showing the silver lining. The earliest call of the day was paid by Jacobus to a Canal street dry goods merchant, whom they relieved of $8,000 worth of silks and other fine goods.

I spent a part of the holidays in Hartford this year, and while there had the good fortune to meet the man who has probably given more people the luxury of a good laugh than any other individual on this distracted globe. This description ought to be enough to identify Mark Twain, but to avoid all possibility of mistake I will mention that he is the individual referred to. Twain has now in the press of the American Publishing Company, of Hartford, a new book which is going to add largely to his already enviable fame. The title of the new volume is "A Tramp Abroad," and it is a fit companion to the now world-famous "Innocents Abroad." It is in the author's richest vein which you know is saying a good deal, and shows his marvelous resources and versatility. One would think that "Innocents" had about exhausted the possibilities for Twain's peculiar fun in connection with European travel, but you will all see when the present book appears that there were plenty left. The latter deals with higher latitudes than the former, being mainly devoted to Germany and Switzerland of which Twain sees and depicts the humorous side exquisitely. The book is profusely illustrated and has for a frontispiece the only existing steel portrait of the author. I should not wonder if the new volume should repeat the wonderful success of "Roughing It," of which, 10,000 copies were sold the first week of its issue. Like its predecessors, the new book will be sold by subscription exclusively, and is going to furnish lucrative employment to a small army of agents.

Charity allied with the light fantastic toe or the leaders of fashion in any other way, is apt to take in more money than when like a violent blushing maiden. The remark is suggested by the figures in the case of the great seventh Regiment Armory Fair which I wrote about while in progress. The navy swung millionaires got $140,000 toward filling up their new club house and drill room. Hospital Saturday and Sunday was a new idea over here at any rate. Boxes with little yellow dogs were placed at all the ferries, stations of the elevated railroads and the public places, where people were supposed to drop in their odd pennies, and collections were taken up in the churches. The results were under $40,000, which will be divided among the hospitals. The grand Charity Ball comes off at the Academy of Music on the 5th. This is always the event of the season, and as this year it is to be a masked ball will undoubtedly bring in an enormous addition to the treasury of the Widows' and Orphans' Fund.

The joint wizards of melody and wit, "Pinafore" Gilbert and sullivan, have brought out their new farrago of pleasant nonsense "The Pirates of Penzance," and set everybody laughing. Whether it is as good as Pinafore is as yet a mooted question. Some say it is a good deal better, both in words and music. Others say the airs, though very pretty and sometimes catching, are not "whistleable," and will never be as popular as "Little Buttercup" and its sister ditties.

The terrible disaster to the Tay bridge in Scotland where the Edinburg express was precipitated by a hurricane, together with half a mile of bridge, into the raging waves below, has set the engineers to thinking about our iron truss bridges. Our elevated railroads are, in fact, nothing more nor less than enormous bridges aggregating thirty miles in length with numerous and very abrupt curves. Hundreds of trains rush over them at very brief intervals every day, and while no serious accident to the cars has yet happened, the results of a very little carelessness would be simply awful.

Hart the colored boy, who first appeared at a pedestrian in the last international match, has won the latest of the tramps in a creditable way. Having completed 450 miles, thus beating the Englishman Rowell, the champion, and everybody else except the little ex-reporter Weston.

The failure of J. Lloyd Haigh, a former partner in the iron business of Congressman Abram S. Hewitt and Mayor Cooper, who supplied the crucible steel wire to wrap the cables of the East River bridge, was one of the last events of the old year. The trouble was caused by some complication about the contract above mentioned for supplying the East River Bridge Company with wire. It amounted to nearly $300,000, and Mr. Haigh had a great expense built new factories on purpose. Some of the wire was thrown back on his hands, and there was delay in payment for the balance. RAIKE.

The indignant citizens of Belfast, Maine, unquestionably condemn the Greek insurgation, and yet they deprecate and disavow all intention of a resort to arms, and declare that "the final resort, must be in the use of public opinion, as expressed at the polls in future elections." But what assurance have they that an expression of public opinion, however emphatic, will do any good? Have they submit to the usurpation now, what assurance have they that it will not be repeated the next year, and the year after, and so on indefinitely? Do they not understand that nothing so emboldens criminals as success in crime, and immunity from punishment? If Garcelon and his fellow-conspirators are permitted to overturn the decision of the people this year, there is every reason to believe that they will repeat the performance next year, when there will be more at stake. They will assume, and not without reason, that the people are too cowardly to assert their rights, and will proceed to carry things with a high hand. The time to assert rights is when they are first invaded. The time to put a stop to executive usurpation is at its very inception. It will not do to give criminals to understand that they can commit crime with impunity. Some means must be found now of preventing the consummation of the monstrous political crime in Maine. The blow there is aimed straight at the heart of representative government, and if the people permit it to be delivered without resistance, they will be less able to resist next year, and they must expect no mercy at the hands of the infamous conspirators against their rights and liberties. Chicago Times.

THE STATE STEALERS.

The Maine Supreme Court Gives a Few Reasons Why Garcelon and His Gang are Thieves.

From the Chicago Times.

The unanimous answer of the justices of Maine supreme court to the long series of interrogatories sent them, Garcelon was built into substantially to them will afford that would be stealer of a state very slight consolation. On nearly every point submitted the justices deny the right of the governor and council to act as they have done. The justices assume that the intent of the constitution and the laws is to enable every legal voter to vote once, and to have his vote counted, and most people will be struck with the large amount of common sense in the answers they have given. The following is a synopsis of the reply:

1. The governor and council have no authority to order a new election when no proper return is made. The house may seat members who have in fact been elected, even if no return at all is made to the secretary of state. A representative is not to be deprived of his seat because municipal officers have failed to do their duty.

2. The constitution calls for returns which shall be regular in all essential particulars, and which truly represent the facts they purport to set forth. But much of the constitutional requirements is merely directory. The constitution does not aim to deprive the people of the right of suffrage or representation for formal errors, but to avoid such a result. When the constitutional requirement is imperfectly executed, it is in aid of the constitution to supply the deficiency as correctly as possible. If there is an error in the return, it should be corrected by comparison with the duplicate statement on record, which record is made for exactly such a purpose. In regard to this, the statute of 1877 is only permissive, but it is a legal maxim that when public interests are concerned, a permission becomes mandatory. The statute is, the justices sarcastically observe, "in command clothed in language of courtesy." And that because it would not be doubted that high and honorable officials would not unwarrantably avail themselves of the lawful means to declare the result of the election according to the actual facts, in obedience to the fundamental principles of popular government."

3. While towns may have seven selectmen, most of them have but three, and the signature of two of those is sufficient. In the case of boards of aldermen, a majority of a quorum, though not a majority of the whole, is competent to act. If a bare majority of a quorum signs the returns, it is not the business of the governor and council to ascertain whether more than a quorum were present or not.

4. It is unmaterial whether the returns from a city show the vote by wards or not. It is not necessary that each candidate's name should be on the returns, provided that the votes returned as scattering, however added our subtracted, do not affect the result. Votes returned as scattering may have had that word printed on them for all the governor or council know. Where a plurality elects, an election is not to be defeated because the whole number of ballots is erroneously stated, or not stated at all.

5. Returns are not valid unless signed by the town or city clerk, but a deputy clerk or clerk pro tem. would answer the purpose.

6. The governor and council must act on the basis of the returns as they are sent to the secretary of state. If they purport to be made, signed, and sealed in open meeting, the governor and council have no right to ascertain whether they were so made or not.

7. If returns are signed by two selectmen, the governor and council are not to inquire whether the town had but two selectmen or not. Two signatures would be enough in certain cases, and the presumption is in favor of the return.

8. A person not a citizen may be a selectman de facto, and bind the town as completely as if he were a selectman de jure. So far as the public are concerned, the acts of a de facto officer are as valid as those of a de jure officer.

9. In the case of marked ballots, selectmen have the right to reject them when offered, but the statute forbids the rejection of a ballot after it has been received into the ballot box. The selectmen have no business to report the matter of marked ballots to the governor and council, and the latter have no right to pay any attention to such report or statement.

10. There can be no ground for rejecting the words "for" or "for" or diversifying the dots or marks that are in common use their substitutes.

11. The governor and council have no right to reject returns on the ground that they are not genuine, unless objection in writing is presented to them declaring that any or all the signatures are not genuine, or that the return had been altered since it was made, then notice should be given to the parties interested, and in investigating the case the governor and council should be governed by the usual rules of evidence.

12. In case of duplicated returns, both in proper form, the first received must be the basis of the action of the governor and council. If defective, they can be corrected according to the statutes. Returns must have their full effect if they are insensible, in spite of trivial irregularities. They are not to be strangled by idle technicalities, nor their meaning destroyed by captious criticism.

The Republicans of Indiana are said to be well organized, and hopeful of carrying the State next fall. If they succeed in doing so, the Democrats can get the Presidency only by stealing it.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Domestic.

ON the 22th ult. the capitalists who organize the Edison Electric Light Company were so sanguine of the success of the Professor's experiments that they would not sell a share of the stock for less than fifty times its nominal value. The total capital stock is $300,000, in three thousand shares. Fifteen months ago these shares were quoted at $15. On the 9th $4,240 was offered but not one was to be had for less than $5,000.

IN the case of the manager of a lottery company against the Postmaster General the argument was concluded in Washington on the 20th ult., and the decision reserved.

AN explosion on the steamer Prairie City occurred near Evansville, Ind., on the 20th ult. Upon the lives of the captain's wife had both her arms blown off and the captain lost one arm.

CHARLES P. BISSEL, of Cleveland, Ohio, has sold his English patents for electric lighting apparatus to a large incorporated company in the United States.

SMALLPOX is so prevalent at Washington as to create considerable alarm. Three had been eighteen cases on the 20th ult., mostly colored.

THE Secretary of the Treasury has written Senator Morrill a long letter on the subject of the bonded indebtedness of the United States. He takes the ground that it would be unwise to attempt to refund the 5's and 6's falling due in the next eighteen months in 10, per cents, and states as a reason why the latter would be unsuccessful that the improved standing of the mercantile and manufacturing interests of the country will afford better opportunities for investments than even a bond bearing a higher rate of interest than those about to be refunded. He says in regard to Fernando Wood's bill providing for a 3½ per cent. loan that the bonds would not sell at par, and that he has grave doubts of the Government's ability to borrow money much longer at four per cent. To make the total, however, as early as possible, he recommends that action be taken by Congress for the immediate issue of coupon four-per-cent. bonds for the amount of bonds to be refunded prior to July 2, 1881, is nearly $800,000,000, and Mr. Sherman thinks the time now available is none too great for that purpose.

THE residence built in Washington some years ago by ex-senator Stewart, of Nevada, was partially destroyed by fire on the night of the 30th ult.

A COMMITTEE appointed to investigate the cattle disease in New Hampshire reports that it is not pleuro-pneumonia, but that it was induced by local causes and is not contagious.

THE Postmaster of New York City has been instructed to refuse the payment of money orders or the delivery of registered letters addressed to certain firms in Broad and Wall streets, purporting to be engaged in stock brokerage.

ON the night of the 29th ult., at Boston, Mrs. Isabel J. Ward was shot and killed by her daughter, a young lady nineteen years of age, under singular circumstances. The girl stated at once that she committed the tragedy while in a state of somnambulism, but as she afterward told contradictory stories concerning the matter she was arrested and locked up.

MORE than one hundred colored emigrants from Goldsboro, N. C., arrived at Petersburg, Va., on the 30th ult., en route for Indianapolis, via Washington. The emigrants, consisting of men, women and children, were under charge of the General Passenger Agent of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. Several hundred more were to follow.

A SON of Senator Morgan, of Alabama, was shot at Washington on the 1st, by Miss Lucy W. B. Horton, who, last summer sued the young man for breach of promise of marriage. The girl was arrested, and the victim of her wrath was taken to his residence. His wound was not dangerous. Since she began her suit against Morgan Miss Horton has lost a position she held in the Treasury Department, and she claims that the loss was caused by the Senator's espoused regret after the shooting that her aim had not been a deadly one.

After five of the highwaymen had been killed and many wounded, these Alleghanians received a very precipitate manner, three of the Yankee lads received painful injuries.

Later News.

THE Maine Judges of the Supreme Court in an opinion on the questions recently submitted by Governor Garcelon. The opinion was unanimous, and entirely condemnatory of the position taken by the Governor and his Council. In reply to the First Question, they decide that the Governor and Council cannot order a new election where there has been a return. It appears to the House of Representatives that there was an election of Representatives in Lee, that the result shall there to their seats, though no return be made to the Secretary of State. The Representative is not to be deprived of his rights because subordinate officers have neglected their duty. In answer to the Second Question, they reply that reference can be made to the record to correct an error. In answer to the Third Question, they decide, substantially, that a return signed by less than a majority of the selectmen of a town or Aldermen of a city is valid. The Governor and Council cannot go behind the returns. In answer to the Fourth Question, they decide that the votes in some of the returns designated as "scattering" are properly so designated. To answer to the Fifth Question they decide that the returns which are not attested by the Town or City Clerk are not valid, but in the absence of the Clerk, a Town Treasurer or a Deputy Clerk can act. In reply to the Sixth Question, they say that the Governor and Council must act on the returns forwarded to the Secretary of State. If they purport to be made in open town meeting they constitute the basis for the action of the Canvassing Board, and the Board has no authority to receive [illegible] in relation to [illegible] ent form. In reply to Question No. Seven they say that the Canvassing Board has no right to inquire whether a certain town had more than one meeting, and the Council can not go behind the returns to find out. In answer to the Eighth Question, they say that a person not a citizen might be elected a Representative, and his office and seat therein given to Gubbin's overhasting, reversible and automatic pen, patented '75, '76 and '79. The pen is reliable. In reply to the Ninth Question, they say the Governor and Council could not inquire whether certain ballots had a distinguishing mark. Their business was with the returns only. The statute prohibited the rejection of a ballot "after it is received into the ballot-box." In reply to Question Ten, they say that the use of the words "do," "ditto," or points equivalent to them, constitute a good reason for the rejection of returns. In answer to Question Eleven, they say the Governor and Council have no power to reject returns, either on the ground of improper signatures or alterations, unless an objection in writing is presented setting forth that the signatures are not genuine, or that the return had been altered after it was signed. Such notice must be given and the facts adjudicated upon. The Governor and Council have no right to reject returns for such cause without a hearing. The genuineness of the returns is to be presumed, and this presumption is not to be overcome by evidence. In answer to the Twelfth Question, the Judges say that when two returns are received, the return first received must be the basis of the action of the Governor and Council. If defective or not a true copy of the record it can be corrected in accordance with the provisions of the statute. "It is enough if the returns can be understood, and, if understood, the full effect should be given to their natural and obvious meaning. They are not to be stranded by [illegible]."

A WASHINGTON dispatch of the 4th says General Hatch left Lake City for Fort Garland on the 2d. He is stated to have expressed the opinion that the White River murderers would not be surrendered until after the return of the Utes from Washington. He thinks that Ouray was altogether sincere in his desire for prevention, and believes they would have been yielded up had it not been for a fear that the people of Colorado intended to lynch them before trial.

Fashion's Miseries.

History gives an account of how many hundreds of years ago, ladies descended from three to six hours to the arranging of their hair; and a certain Queen was known to leave her couch at four o'clock in the morning that Madame might have her hair dressed by ten. One can easily imagine, while gazing, upon the portrait of the unfortunate Princess Lamballe—the staunch friend of the unfortunate Marie Antoinette—how much time could be consumed in the toilet. Looking at these faces as a living of the past, they only provoke a feeling of surprise, and cause one to wonder if such things were the feelings of the times. And yet to-day the ladies of San Francisco are not one whit behind their dainty predecessors in devoting time to the greatest discomfort pain and loss of sleep to appear fashionable. What with the usual Hebrew wedding last Wednesday afternoon and the brilliant ball on Pine street in the evening of the same day, the "Court" hairdresser found he had more orders than he could attend to in one day, and, that he might oblige his numerous lady patronesses, he became necessary to dress the heads of some the night before. Last Wednesday a Chronicle reporter met a gentleman who related an incident worthy of reportorial note, only to show the miseries and tribulations of which Dame Fashion is the cause. The gentleman said that on Tuesday he spent the evening away from home, and did not return until near midnight, when, upon entering and stepping upon something, he was struck with affright at beholding his wife propped up with pillows and cushions, her head resting against the mantelpiece of the bedstead. To his hurried inquiries as to what terrible affliction had befallen her, she quietly explained that she had been having her hair dressed for the following night. The same day, Wednesday, the reporter noted upon the body of the lady and one whom she knew was to be at the same ball. Here she found the coiffure threats engaged in the inquiry, and was informed that the artist had called at seven o'clock in the morning, and the young lady was forced from her pleasant slumbers to the chair. Here she sat half asleep, half awake, sit perched up in a straight-back chair for over an hour, when

South Arm Items.

A very pleasant time we had at South Arm this week. Tuesday evening was my first appointment on my third year as pastor of the Baptist church. Arriving at the little log chapel, we found it brightly lighted, beautifully decorated with every grace and expressive motto, and densely packed with people. The evening was made joyous with select singing and a bountiful supper, in both of which Mr. John Muirhead, of Norwood, who was present, seemed an efficient leader.

At a late hour in the evening, after sufferance "good byes," all retired to their homes leaving your correspondent better supplied with cash, groceries and provisions, hay and oats, and last, but not least, a splendid sleighing 20½ pounds, in all about twenty dollars.

By the way, the people of Norwood planned and executed a similar move for our benefit some two years and the only thing to mar the pleasure of being the recipients of the benefit we, we did not hear a word about it until it was all over. These people in both South Arm and Norwood, have always treated us very kindly, and have on best occasions and sincere thanks.

Please allow us also to say thanks to several parties in the Miller district, and in the Chartrand school house district for parcels of good things. Also for some very substantial tokens of esteem from friends in our own town, such as chickens of the breed described by "Clericus," that have left their heads on the block; a turkey of the same kind, a beautiful lap robe, a handsome lot of goodies for New Year's &c., also lots of parcels of apples from the editor's cellar, and other cellars, all the way to our nearest neighbors.

Among the curiosities I have received, a bag which Capt. Albert Smith of South Arm, sent full of oats, which [illegible] he has carried around the world.

Sol. Isaman has discovered his barrel of molasses from the bottom of the lake.

ATTRA.

Norwood Notes.

The school was resumed on Monday the 5th.

Mr. Wm. Harris slaughtered a fine pig on Tuesday. It was eleven months old and weighed 421 lbs.

Mr. John Pearl and lady, of Eastport, improved the fine weather on Wednesday by a flying visit to our village, and a few pleasant calls.

The sun of the "Beautiful Snow," is much lamented, and the mourners go about the streets, their horses sad in the barn.

It was a great oversight in not mentioning the Bee's oyster supper the night before New Year's eve. It was held in the Eagle House in an upper room furnished and made ready for the occasion. The public were not admitted. It was quite exclusive, only invited guests being present. Considering its storey prelude, we guess it was full of pleasantry enough. All's well that ends well."

The health of Mrs. Harmon Stafford, which has been very poor for some weeks is somewhat improved.

Miss Addie Stafford is reported to be in a decline.

Mr. Marshall brother of Mr. Edw. Marshall, has moved to Antrim City from Ohio, and lives in the house, and owns the property, formerly occupied by Mr. Price. He lost a valuable horse on the trip. Two other families came with him.—Mr. Lee, and Mr. Baker, who propose to buy and settle in this country. VIDEO.

EDITOR SENTINEL:

Circumstances over which we had no control, have compelled us to defer this communication to the present. Yet form us courtesy on your part lead us to hope you will insert it.

A Christmas tree in our school room on the evening of the 24th of Dec., was heavily laden with highly appreciated gifts by friends of District No. two and three; it being the occasion of a union spelling school of said District.

Vocal music was furnished by Mrses. C. Willis, Thos. Watson, and the Misses Watson, Mrs. I. A. West, Miss Abbie Willis and others.

A Recitation by Miss M. W. Willis. Excellent and appropriate and very interesting address was delivered by Rev. Wingfield Watson, and all went "merry as a marriage bell" under the supervision of Miss Lizzie Watson. The teacher in District No. two, who was assisted in the distribution of the gifts by Mr. W. H. Olds, to whom he takes this opportunity to tendering thanks. It is the desire also of the teacher of both schools, to acknowledge their indebtedness to him and all who rendered assistance upon that occasion, which and to the public generally, for the generous support given them.

The fact is, Mr. Editor, we are having a glorious time up here in the woods this winter, and those who are not of the "dog in the manger" disposition are enjoying themselves hugely.

We would like to speak of the things which most nearly concern our school, but as we wish to take our monthly report on to this, we forbear further infringement at present.

TROUT IN THE JORDAN.—A mill dam is in process of building on the River Jordan, Michigan, and the auctors, who visit that stream for trout and the grayling, will be pleased to learn that efforts are being made by energetic members of the guild to secure the erection of a McDonald fish way. There is good reason to think that the fish way will do, both—and the fishing preserved. The stream is far too valuable to the residents there, to be thoughtlessly destroyed as an anchor stream. A valuable [illegible] ing grounds, and enough public spirit to act vigorously, and at once, writes in regard to better protection of fishing waters.

It is no use talking; we must come to the same system adopted in Europe, if we want trout fishing. The streams must be better protected, and, though it may be contrary to the spirit of the institutions of this free country, yet in time the rights of land owners against trespassers will come to be recognized and respected.

There will be no need of eating liver fed trout, if clubs can lease and control streams that are the habitat of trout. I know a stream, mentioned sometimes in the English Fishing Gazette, that for twenty-five years has been a fine brook stream, and always will be, though running through public lands.—Forest and Stream.

Announcement—Ondineo Arnold, of the Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad, requests that our Ford, formerly of Little Traverse and well known in the courts of this city and state for cookedness in years past, stole two little boys about six and eight years old at Cadillac on Jan. 1 and took them to Reed City. There the little fellows escaped from him and walked back as far as Ashton, when the conductor of a night train took them home. The sheriff of Wexford county arrested Ford at Henry yesterday morning and took him back to Cadillac on the charge of abduction.—Grand Rapids Democrat.

DIED.—The wife of Superintendent W. Bailey, of Wilson Township, died sudden ly on the 3d, of Lung Fever.

A man named McKay, aged 59 years, died in Echo, Antrim county, on the 11th.

Just received another lot of those celebrated H. W. Peace crescent saws at M. J. Stockman's.

The firm of Hayes & Hundley, of Advance, has been dissolved, Mr. Hayes continues the business.

WILLIAM SLAWSON, the veteran Grand Traverse surveyor, died in Traverse City last week, aged seventy two.

Hon. E. H. GREEN resigned the Superintendency of the M. E. Sunday school last Sunday, and A. BUTLER was elected to fill the vacancy.

MASONIC PARTY.—The Masons of Charlevoix, their wives and daughters, had an oyster supper at the Fountain City House on Saturday evening, after lodge, which was a very happy occasion.

MARRIED.—By Rev. S. O. Plowman of Norwood, Jan. 15th, at the residence of the bride's mother in Banks, Antrim Co., Mr. Henry H. Thompson of Saginaw, and Miss Della L. Greenman of Banks.

THE editor left yesterday for Detroit to attend the annual commemoration of the Grand Lodge, F. & A. M. While out he will visit Big Rapids, Grand Rapids, Flint, Marshall, and other places on the road of his travels. He will be absent nearly two weeks.

THE Charlevoix Knights of Honor are to give a grand Masquerade Ball at Fox's Hall on Monday evening Feb. 23, in commemoration of Washington's Birthday. The programmes are already out, and Richardson's Band have been employed to furnish the Music.

BELLAIRE is developing rapidly. There is an increased demand for lots and sales are lively. Recent thaws interfere somewhat with work in this vicinity, particularly the cordwood business. Torch lake is higher than it has been before for several years. The prospects for this town and this part of Antrim county are encouraging.—Antrim Co. Herald.

Norwood Notes.

Religious services have continued in the school house during the evenings of the past week. The attendance has been small and the interest in proportion.

Mr. F. J. Marsh is very busy superintending the getting out of railroad ties in various parts of the surrounding country. He is away from home most of the time.

Mr. Frank Moyes left here on Saturday morning, for the lumber woods near Elk Lake where he expects to spend the remainder of the winter. VIDEO.

Sunday School Convention.

There will be a Sunday School Convention at the Deer school house near Hortons Bay on Saturday Jan 24th, 1880, commencing at 10 o'clock a. m. for the purpose of discussing Sabbath topics and of organizing means for advancing the interests of the Sunday school cause. All who can possibly be present and assist in the much needed work.

Banks, or modern Plymouth Rock, is quiet and stand as usual.

No service last sabbath, which is unusual.

"Old John Cross" does not "keep the village day school," for the scholars go to school and have a good time.

Fiddles or other strains are heard every Tuesday evening while passing the school house. We hardly know whether it is the old musical organization revived, or a singing class. We are confident the building is haunted, for a fiddle can be heard a mile, and there is a mysterious disappearance of some of the scholars writing paper. Where is the school board?

Mr. Hagler hardly escaped being burned a few weeks ago, the result of a fire in his cellar, and floating his potatoes in it.

We see that Mr. Beach's Apiary is braving the winter on summer stand he has quite an Apiary and others in that locality are making bee culture a study thinking to experiment understudy. It is thought that this country is one of the best for bee culture, it certainly is with its summers, but may be one of the curse with its winters.

We always supposed country Post Masters were cross, but we find our friend Wilkinson as smiling and affable as you please.

Prof. Richardson and family have gone to Advance to spend the winter.

We believe there is no serious illness at present.

Deaths none, Marriages none, not even though Christmas and New Year's although we have some good candidates. We hope another Christmas and New Years will take every one of them.

Births; only eighteen or twenty, we will not tell you of one of them, not even the 11½ pound boy as Wm. Rainey's, Mr. Rainey relieves the Antrim City doctors of after the holidays, where he has been at work at his old trade.

Mr. Knight's daughter has been making a visit here. We are always glad to see Hattie.

EDITOR SENTINEL:

My Dear Friend—In a late number of your excellent paper I noticed a correspondent signing himself "Christo" has been pleased to notice my labors when in Charlevoix a few weeks ago.

Mr. Christo at that time was one of the most pleasant, to me, of any I have enjoyed since coming to the District, and I hope to greet the good people of your delightful village again in a few months notwithstanding the unkind threat of "Christo."

As an attack on one clergyman upon another, on mere hearsay evidence, it is clearly an exhibition of moral recklessness and flattered dishonor that the intelligence of your readers will answer for any formal reply.

If an "intense denominationalism," which I sought to prove contributed to the present Unthinkfulness among all Christians, and the best way to unite the Church of God, had throughout the lesson of "Christo," his use of Webster and the History of Idolatry would have been devoted to a better purpose than a maudlin newspaper assault upon a brother minister.

For one clergyman to pound around in unlicensed freedom, and then listen to the reported criticisms on a fellow laborer, and then rush into print with a love for moral discovery hitherto, and that literary infidelity to the broad charity of the age, is such a specimen of unchristlikeness as has no explanation but in feeble faculties, or depravity, or both. Northern Michigan, it is to be hoped, has few such characters, to make "Watch and ward" necessary to protect the unwary of our religious fields.

To dismiss this unsavory subject, I wish to express my obligation to you for the weekly visits of the SENTINEL. I hope your enterprise will be rewarded by a very generous support.

The last Sabbath in April will bring me to my work in Charlevoix, and I anticipate much pleasure and no reference to "Clericus."

Yours,
A. J. EUDRED.

EDITOR SENTINEL:

Business at "The Head," is not rushing just now. Our merchants complain of dull trade of late, and we are sorry to say reaction which generally follows the lively holiday trade. Then, too, the sleighing has failed us, a thing not common to this country) and many who would otherwise be busily engaged cutting and hauling wood, ties, &c., in the woods for shipment are waiting for snow. The snow to be in good demand. If we see a stranger in town we just run down as a "Tie man," and are not often astray.

And right here comes in the subject of the "Upper cut." They say if the "Upper cut" were opened we could pay a cent or two more apiece for ties. If some one will take the trouble to go around this lake in the spring and count the ties and cords of wood, they can make an estimate of what it is costing to leave the cut as it is. It reduces the price received by the producer of every tie trained by it, and every cord of wood and bark that passes through it, while in its present condition, besides, it is a drag now to be the county and state. It is to be hoped that the people will move in the matter and have it attended to early in the spring, and that, too, in a thorough and substantial manner.

Messrs. Lyon & Son's brake cramp yesterday, having finished the putting in of twenty-five thousand cubic feet of very fine square timber from their land near this place. A. A. Garrison immediately took possession with a large force of men and teams. He has the job of putting in two hundred thousand feet of logs, which are to be sawed at this place. He is also to put in a large quantity of railroad ties for the same firm.

Our Good Templars Lodge seems to be in a flourishing condition and are making considerable stir in the community. They have now more than on the docket.

Our fellow townsman, I. W. Hull, being tired of waiting for a stockholder on the line concluded to try it a few days ago. The few days ran into a week, then a month, and finally into a year, and got pretty thoroughly wet. But you know Hull don't dislike water as badly as he did. He is now one of our strongest temperance men, and says he proposes to fight it out on that line, if it takes all winter.

V. G. Crane, brother of R. K. Crane, and of Mrs. J. W. Hawks, has arrived from the southern part of the State, and taken charge of the business of the latter, which is the running of a daily stage between this place and Boyne Falls, which will bedone in a satisfactory manner. We bespeak for her in this undertaking the liberal patronage of the public, which she deserves.

C. Ingraham, of the firm of Richardson & Kingsbury, merchants, has gone south on a visit.

In my next I will have something to say concerning our school.

Opinion of the Maine Supreme Court.

The following is a summary of the answer of the Justices of the Maine Supreme Court to the interrogatories submitted to them by Governor Robie. The questions are indented in the answers given. The opinion, which is extremely brief, is the unanimous opinion of the Governor and his Council, was a unanimous one, and was signed by Judges Appleton, Walton, Barrows, Danforth, Peters, Libbey and Symonds:

1. The Governor and Council have no authority to open a new election when no proper return is made. The House may seat members who have in fact been elected, even if no return at all is made to the Secretary of State. A Representative is not to be deprived of his seat because municipal officers have failed to do their duty.

2. The Constitution calls for returns which shall be regular in all essential particulars, and which in the general the facts they purport to set forth. But much of the formal legal requirements is merely directory. The Constitution does not aim to deprive the people of the right of suffrage or representation for failure to do what it is easy to avoid doing. When the Constitutional requirement is imperfectly complied with in the direction and intention to supply the deficiency as correctly as possible. If there is an error in the returns it should be corrected by computation with the duplicate returns on record, which ought to be made in as much as a purpose. In regard to the statute of 1881, c. 211, it is only permissive, but it is a legal maxim that where public interests are concerned, such permission becomes mandatory. Such a construction obviates the language of ambiguity. "The Governor and Council shall," is equivalent to "they may issue them." I express a duty to the public that must be performed. Whether the act referred to contravenes the Constitution in allowing cities, towns and plantations to vote in the election of the voters in owning their votes is one that the statute which they are not now called upon to consider. If unconstitutional in some of its provisions, would not affect the constitutionality of the other sections not to conflict therewith.

3. What votes may have been sometimes, based on illegal voting, and have been returned by officers is subsequent. In the case of Bartlett, 1 Greenl. 129, and of Lee, 65 Me. 191, though not a majority of the whole number of votes, yet a majority of the votes upon the returns, it is not the business of the Governor and Council to ascertain whether more than a quorum were present or not.

4. It is immaterial whether the returns from a city, town or plantation name the ward, if necessary that each candidate's name should be on the ballots, provided that the votes returned as such cities, however added or subtracted, are correct. Votes counted or rejected as scattering may have had that word printed on them by the voters themselves without knowing it. Where a plurality exists, as election is not to be determined because the whole number of ballots is erroneously stated, or not stated at all.

5. Returns are not valid unless signed by the Town or City Clerk, but a Deputy Clerk or Clerk pro tem would answer the purpose.

6. The Governor and Council must act on the basis of the returns as they are sent to the Secretary of State. If they purport to be made, sealed and sealed in open meeting, the facts must and should have no right to ascertain whether they were so made or not.

If returns are signed by two Selectmen, the Governor and Council are not to inquire whether the third was present. Selectmen of one or classes and all religious there [great appearance] doubtless shall have the right to every [illegible] to all save resulted that the Governor and Council may be caused [illegible] order to the end of their county [illegible] and that no cause may exist to prevent similarity in the country from doing their duty by the men which has given them birth. [Great applause.]

The band then played the "Rocky Road to Dublin," to which the audience kept time with their feet, and then Judge Gildersleeve introduced John H. Dillon, who was received with prolonged applause, and, after expressing great gratification at the warmth of the reception in this country, said:

The newspapers state that the Land League in Ireland has only aggravated the distress of Irish people. We take the first opportunity to correct that statement. The Land League has actually benefited by its efforts, even to the extent of diminishing the [illegible] aggravate the distress of Irish tenants. One of our great objects is to force Irish landlords to do their duty. We saw the only way to save the people was to cut off their supplies from the landlords, who will then believe their tenants are dangerous. Subsequent to that fact there is distress. Over five hundred thousand men have taken part in our meetings in Ireland, where this spring there will be two hundred and fifty thousand people without food, and America canned food then for more than a few weeks, and by cutting off the supplies that we assume they, as well as ourselves, will bring to bear on the Government will bring relief.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That Mr. Charles Stewart Parnell and Mr. John Dillon are deserving of our most grateful and most unqualified confidence; that the services they have rendered and the perils they have encountered in coming to the rescue of our land in time of need, and suffering Nation are entitled to a generous and practical recognition and response, and that the promises made by us in our welcoming address to them be no false pride, as well as our duty, to redeem.

2. That we give to our suffering brothers in Ireland our heart-whole sympathies in these the days of their deep distress, and while asking no sympathy, as would counsel hope [illegible] day, sang in their good cause, will assuredly [illegible].

3. That while either of immediate suffering as a claim upon our immediate action, we cannot refrain from the fact that the system which produces this suffering needs a change; that the tenant, the producer of food, is [illegible] rament for the afflicted poor are needed at home; and that, beyond and inside this principle, [illegible] done its fearful work on several victims, surrounded as they were [illegible] by a generous public, and [illegible] safety below by the burning staircase. Several persons sustained severe injuries by leaping from the highest stories of the building into [illegible] while crying frantically for aid to the firemen beneath, was all the while pushing a woman, who was trying to get a resting, from the fourth-story window. She finally leaped, and struck the ground head on in the middle of the pavement. Her brains were scattered around on the pavement. Another woman, in [illegible] breaking both legs and arms and almost crushing her to death.

Of the twelve or fifteen persons sleeping in No. 64, four were burned to death and five injured. The fire was discovered by a couple of [illegible] who were passing at the time. Others were gauged below the belt and entirely without drapery. The waist is an English shirted coat, or else this shape is used for the outside garment, which covers a plain, short, close-fitting jockey basque.—Harper's Bazar.

THE railroads of Florida are models of convenience. If passengers desire to get out of a train and gather a few flowers or alligators, they can do so at any time. The trains never run off and leave anybody. The [illegible] but that kind of trains.

IN A BURNING BUILDING.

Twelve Persons Confined in the Upper Rooms of a Burning Building. Four of Them Burned to Death, and the Others Seriously, and Some of Them Fatally, Injured.

New York, January 5.

Fire broke out this morning in the basement of Tenner Hall, on East Fourth street, occupied by William Winckel as a ball-room, and when the flames were extinguished, William Gelb, ten years, Lena Schmidt, thirty; Henry Gehrweiler, twenty-five, and Teresa Erhardt, twenty-five, were found on the top floor, dead. Winckel and wife were badly burned, and were sent to the hospital. Annie Bauer received internal injuries by jumping from the fourth-story window, and was badly burned about the hands and face. An unknown woman had both legs broken by jumping from the top floor.

The progress of the fire was so great that it was hardly five minutes after the fire engine company arrived before the entire inside of the premises seemed to be ablaze with flame, the tongues of which ran up the back work with a speed which put to naught the first efforts of the firemen. The premises Nos. 66 and 68 were occupied by Tanner Hall proper, and in the upper stories of 68 William Winckel, proprietor, resided with his family and several lodgers. As soon as the firemen could reach the roof they cut holes in it and broke down

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 20, 1880.

FOR PRESIDENT IN 1880.

ULYSSES S. GRANT.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14, 1880.

The electric light people are still perturbed about Edison and his methods. Some say he can't do what he actually does, others say there's nothing new about it; that he begins where others left off, and so forth. No one yet, so far as I know, has suggested that the Chinese invented it ten millions of years, or so, ago. Meantime the exhibition at Menlo Park has been like a young Centennial, and it was not until his laboratory became a bear garden, his air pumps were broken, his wires "short-circuited," and his lamps stolen, that Edison shut down on the promiscuous multitude. His telephone, by the way, has at last been utilized in a way that was suggested on just when it was first introduced. A clergyman has had his pulpit connected by wire with the sick rooms of a number of his aged and infirm parishioners, who know, on a Sunday forenoon, as they sip their tea and nibble their toast, have stored during the week, and withal in with the hymns of the congregation and choir, which it seems they can hear perfectly.

J. David Bugh, the contractor whose failure I recorded in my last, has fruished the sensation of the day in local financial circles. He has been arrested in Jersey and pulled his bogus securities on the Grocers' Bank, which also suspended. It appears that no less than five banks have been victimized and knocked for his alleged securities for months, but refused to prosecute, hoping to recover their money by milder measures. What a lobster-shell! Worst of all, it is said Mr. Bugh deliberately cheated the Brooklyn Bridge people about the wire he furnished, and, in spite of the assurances of the engineer to the contrary, it is feared that much defective wire has been used in the great cables, and that grave risks of terrible disasters have been incurred. Bugh has been released on $15,000 bail, and is quite comfortable under the circumstances. It is said he married three women and was engaged to two other girls at the same time, all by Gad, friends living in a village where a few blocks of each other.

Two Staten Island justices, one of Teutonic, the other of Milesian origin, have been enjoying a tournament of tomfoolery which is worthy of "Pinafore" or "The Pirate of Penzance." One lives at Northfield, the other at Prince Bay, miles apart. Some difference of opinion once arose between the alleged bribery and corruption of a drunken old negro mulatto woman of the Sailors' Snug Harbor, and the Irishman had his Dutch friend arrested on a warrant, very early one cold morning, and brought before him for examination. Next morning, which was still colder and more disagreeable, the Irish justice found himself treated with a little of his own medicine and was treated off shivering to visit the Teutonic judge in his majesty. The arrests caused the greatest consternation among the sisters, cousins and aunts of the contestants; the village ranged themselves hotly in favor of their respective dignitaries, and the rest of the adjacent world laughed. It is refreshing to note that with the holidays benevolence prevailed and the war was ended over a morning dram of hot Scotch.

Charity begins at home it is said, and the charity Commissioners at New York have been keeping their weather eye open to good purpose. There has been considerable trouble of late for the Louisiana Lottery people. Their scheme seems to all right in Louisiana, where each of two distinguished ex-Confederate generals have the supervision of the drawings, but is against the laws of the Empire State, and a few days ago their officers were raided by the police and tickets, money, &c., confiscated. It turns out that among the tickets was the one drawing the capital prize of $100,000. According to the law by which confiscated property of this description is turned over to the Charities, the Commissioners have put in their claim for the money. It is a nice question of law whether they can legally profit by illegal sport, or whether if they accept the money they do not condone the offence and compound a felony, or at the very least a misdemeanor. The lottery gamblers style their action "infernal impudence."

The venerable General Abner Doubleday has been startling the grave merchants of the Chamber of Commerce from their thoughts on trade and finance by their prediction of what would happen to New York in case of a foreign war, should a hostile fleet chance to enter. According to the old soldier, who is acting president of the Theological Society and is, no doubt, intimately acquainted with spirits of all sorts, and whose utterance are considered by a small circle as inspired, there isn't a gun mounted on any of the forts in New York harbor capable of making an impression on a modern iron-clad man-of-war than the ammunition of a boy's brass cannon on the scales of an alligator. A fleet, so the doctrine of limit our ship, could calmly steam to the foot of Wall Street and demand a modest contribution of any fifty millions, to redress the wrongs done to the poor in prison. The gunners could count to their pockets, inside the only men carry money. Somebody feeble enough to fire off torpedoes, but the shots was dismissed promptly as not practical and a petition to be sent to Congress, praying for protection, signed by the most influential men in the city.

Your readers will no doubt remember Lew Baldwin, the fine man, who some time ago, awakened out of a nightmare or so to find a fine employment, and had no much financial sense that he didn't invest it. He was mad, though, when he did find it out, and when the culprits were sent to State Prison rubbed his hands gleefully. To his intense disgust, one of them has managed to get up a petition signed by a number of well-known citizens which completely pulled the wool over the eyes of the unwary Governor Robinson, who commuted the sentence, and the rascal got out of jail penitent. Mr. Baldwin has indignation against him for $200,000 which he may now whistle for. He is now engaged trying to checkmate the efforts of the other victim to get off in the same way.

Tom Hallo, a famous German resort, was burned only the other morning, and seven waiters and chambermaids were destroyed with the rest. The poor creatures were seen by the previous evening's festivities, which included a wedding, and when awakened by the cry for fire found their escape cut off. Three were shot for escapes. Factories, hotels, tenement houses, etc., are all compelled by law to have more or less adequate provisions for such contingencies. This Tom Hallo, which seems to the average mind to combine the characteristics of all those, was not, so says the Building Department, in any such legal fix as to be compelled to put up such provisions. But a city that's governed so much it is hasn't blood to many securing catastrophes by fire which would appear to be so easily preventible.

The first collision on the elevated railroad has occurred, owing, of course, to frost and slippery rails. Luckily for persons concerned, no one was hurt, and the matter will no doubt be carefully forgotten till some terrible travelled accident shall occur.

Captain Mackenzie, the chess champion of America, who has recently played, on several occasions, as many as twenty one games at once, winning twenty of them and drawing one, together with a number of other victories of the noble game, from all over the world, are holding a tournament. Our American player, so far, seem to be holding their own capitally. The games are to be published at the completion of the grand contest and will no doubt prove a most valuable addition chess libraries, embodying as they necessarily will the most effective openings, supplemented by the most vigorous succeeding play of skilful players on their merits.

The Produce Exchange and grain dealers have been conquering with the central system, but have at least by an overwhelming vote resolved to go back to the old weights and measurements with all their incumbrances. Old customs, like old clothes, are comfortable. Hasty.

The military court of inquiry ordered by President Hayes to review the case of Gen. Warren, who was deprived of his command at the battle of Five Forks by Gen. Sheridan, for not obeying orders and misconstrues to the face of the enemy, began its sessions in New York, Tuesday. As Fitz John Porter and a number of others who were justly condemned during the war have been "vindicated" in the last two years, why shouldn't Warren also be vindicated, even if he being associated is equivalent to condemning Sheridan and Grant, just as the vindication of Fitz John Porter and others virtually condemned Lincoln and Stanton? If there are any more imbecile failures or guilty culprits of the war who want to be vindicated, they should apply pretty soon, for the vindicating era will probably come to an abrupt and permanent close on the 1st of March 1881.

Politic and Impolitic.

To the Republican party in the Blaine legislature—All Hail!

The joyful rumor that Tilden and Kelly have kissed and made up, is afloat in New York city.

Republicans, looking for a little loss of shotgun in the campaign this year, hope to carry South Carolina.

The Indianapolis Journal would like to see Sherman wait until 1881, so that Hayes can have another term.

Some of the Copperheads rather blame Garcelon that when he put on the lion's skin he failed to pull in his ears.

A Richmond letter to the Charleston News protest that the South must not make itself the Ireland of America.

The New York Tribune reminds the Democracy of that state that if John Kelly is a fast friend he is also a vindictive enemy.

Two of the most prominent Democratic journals in Indiana are convinced that Hendricks is no longer a possibility for the presidency.

Harper's Weekly wishes the papers which are opposed to Grant would say so —as if the opponents of Grant had been lying still for the past 12 months.

If all the use of these old plugs are consuming on the coast this year, McClellan thinks he might as well camp, also, and begin to pack up his cars accordingly.

The Copperheads are pitching into Eugene Hale. Therefore, mind ye, Eugene Hale. Wherever a pitched may be the Copperhead is a good man to stand by.

The New York Mail thinks that a Hayes had a couple of years more in which to improve as he improved in 1879, he would be good for a commutation that would be threat upon him.

A couple of the largest rolling mills in Pennsylvania have taken heavy contracts to furnish axes for guillotines with which to cut off Democratic heads on the expiration of thrust. This is reliable.

The difference, my son, between Gov. Garcelon of Maine, and Gov. Bishop of Ohio, is one thin. That while Mr. Bishop is prone to let Blaine out, Mr. Garcelon can would let the devil in.—Spirit Gold, El Paso.

The Chicago caucus met Monday, and as soon as it had a good a bleeding, reached forth its hand for the government of congressional districts established by the convicts in the last legislatures, and will mend them.

Hampton, while equally vindictive, and perhaps more thoroughly, has not the courage to close up, he does his works openly and above board. Hampton is a smooth tongued political assassin, whose personal ambition has no bounds. I would believe and tell, on Gates's word when I would not trust Hampton on oath. —Ex-governor Perry of South Carolina.

The Mule-Hampton Charleston News is furious at the Southern compliment given to Grant, and is especially stirred up at the Augusta Chronicle which said that "the representatives of the new south extend a cordial greeting to the conquerors of the old." And then it lines itself all along its back.

Governor Blackburn of Kentucky, in discussing the condition of the state penitentiary in his recent message, says, in a burst of candor. "Who among us has not been guilty of some crime? None, no, not one." He would have been very much disgusted if anybody else had said that about him.

The Boston common council had the vote for the annual dinner under consideration when a Republican moved to strike out the clause providing liquor and cigars. This loss of the principle ingredients of their meal unwathed the Democrats, and the whole dinner was, on their averging running, voted down.

It took one hundred and fifty thousand dollars in silverining to make Dr. H. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, immensely rich and a member of Congress.

Dan Rice, the veteran showman, has been converted in St. Louis under the evangelical labors of Mosely and Sankey. He will go forth to preach the gospel, and has selected the South as his field of labor.

Cincinnati has done well for famishing Ireland. One entertainment on December 30th resulted in $3,000 being raised for them. America is virtually getting to be the mother of Ireland, if paternal care can make it so.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Domestic.

There had been no much hostility manifested to the adoption of the cental system that the Boards of Managers of the New York Produce Exchange resolved on the 5th to recommend a postponement of the experiment until the necessary National and State legislation can be obtained and the principal commercial exchanges agree upon a time for its simultaneous adoption.

By an explosion in a Newark (N. J.) celluloid factory on the 8th, three men were instantly killed and two others fatally burned.

In a bitter sermon at Salt Lake on the 6th the Mormon John Taylor declared that polygamy would be practiced in spite of the Federal Courts. He asserted that it was the duty of the saints to defy the communications of God, regardless of the statutes of their enemies, and leave the results in His hands. A request on his part for the people who would resist the polygamy law or no law, to signify their intention, brought up the hand of nearly every person in the vast congregation.

At New Orleans a few days ago Collector Morris Marks was assaulted and badly used up by a man named Martin from Ascension Parish. The difficulty is said to have grown out of an unfulfilled political promise.

The Receiver of the suspended Grocery Bank of New York says that the cash that forged paper to the amount of $125,000 had been found among its "assets."

A fire broke out at San Francisco on the 6th in a two-story frame dwelling occupied by Daniel Haskins, his wife and five children. Haskins and the eldest son had gone to work, and Mrs. Haskins, after breakfast, went to her room on the second floor front, and, lay down on a bed with Eddie, aged four. Her daughter Annie, aged nineteen, and a baby sister were still sleeping in the back chamber. Thomas, the second son, who was in the lower part of the house, heard his mother cry "Help, help." Running up stairs he found the way barred by flames. An alarm was instantly given, but before the engines arrived the house was almost entirely consumed, and the bodies of Mrs. Haskins, Annie, Eddie and the infant were found in the ruins. The origin of the fire was unknown.

Mrs. Kate Anderson, of Chicago, undertook, a few days ago, to hurry up her kitchen fire by pouring kerosene into the stove from a common oil-can. An explosion followed, throwing the burning oil all over the building, and before assistance could be rendered her she was burned to a crisp from the head to the feet, in a most fearful manner. She died about four hours after the accident.

The Ute Indian representatives, on their way to Washington in charge of a detachment of the Ninth Cavalry, arrived at Pueblo, Col., on the 5th. They had ordered dinner at the Union Depot Hotel, but seeing so large a crowd of pale-faces destroyed their appetites, and they went aboard the train at once and left without eating. Between two and three thousand people were at the depot to see the savages. "Hang the red devils," "Shoot the murdering Sculks," and like expressions were frequently heard from a portion of the crowd, and they were pelted with stone coal by some boys who had taken a position on a coal train on a side track. The Indians were horror-stricken and completely cowed. A move was about in the morning to organize 500 men and lynch the savages, but cooler counsels prevailed, and the citizens determined to let the Indians pass without injury. The party reached Kansas City, Mo., on the 8th. It comprised Ouray, the celebrated Ute Chief, and ten other Indians who had been selected by General Hatch to go to Washington.

The Treasurer of the New York Produce Exchange, H. C. Rogers, died suddenly on the afternoon of the 5th, and as he had been discovered to be a defaulter in the amount of over $90,000, it was thought he might have committed suicide.

Personal and Political.

Chief-Justice Waite, of the United States Supreme Court, on the 5th denied a motion to take up the Legislature case out of the regular order. He added that the Court would refuse to grant motions to advance cases involving important Constitutional questions so long as they could not be heard before a full bench.

Rudolf Gilbert Haven, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died recently at his home in Malden, Mass. The disease was primarily neuralgia of the stomach. He was fifty-eight years old.

Gen. Jack. J. Logee, the Yankee comedian, died in Lowell, Mass., a few days ago.

The State officers elect of Wisconsin were inaugurated on the 5th.

The Republican members of the Ohio Legislature, in caucus on the evening of the 6th, nominated James A. Garfield for Senator, by acclamation. The names of ex-Governor Tod. Stanley Matthews and ex-Governor Hoadley were withdrawn before the nomination was made.

The Governor of Alabama has filled the vacancy in the United States Senate caused by the death of Senator Houston, by appointing Luke Pryor, of Athens, who was a late partner of Senator Houston. Mr. Pryor has always before declined public office. The election by the Legislature will take place in November next.

The California Legislature effected an organization on the 6th. All of the officers elected are Republicans, the attempt of the Workingmen and Democrats to unite proving a failure.

The Massachusetts Legislature effected an organization on the 7th. Senator R. Bishop was unanimously chosen President of the Senate, and C. J. Noyes (Republican), on the fourth ballot, Speaker of the House.

In his message to the State Legislature Governor Ambrose, of Connecticut, shows a reduction in the State's income. The extension of the right of voting to women is recommended, at least in all matters affecting ladies. More stringent divorce laws are urged.

Governor Cornell, in his message to the New York Legislature, shows that the State debt had been reduced $32,000 during the last year by cancellation, and that the canals had cost the tax-payers $900,828. In regard to railroad transportation, the Governor says: "The public have the right to demand that freight tariffs shall be uniform for like service without discrimination as between citizens and communities, and that they shall also have all reasonable publicity. This should be secured by just and practical regulations."

Affidavits signed by Thomas B. Swann and Moses Hartman were published in the Augusta (Me.) newspapers on the morning of the 6th, in which Atlanta stated that they had been approached by agents of the Republican leaders and offered $1,000 each for absenting themselves from the opening session of the Assembly, and that they had accepted the money with the intention of exposing the corrupt solicitors.

The Maine Legislature met on the 7th and perfected an organization in accordance with the programme of the Fusionists. In the Senate the Republicans refused to vote, and James D. Lamson, the Fusion caucus nominee, was elected President. The case of the counted-out members was referred to a committee of seven. In the House, on the refusal of the Clerk to call the names of the counted-out members from five districts, the Republican sheriffs, only Maine remaining to protest. A message was sent to the Governor and Council, stating that a quorum of the members was present, ready to be qualified. After this notification the Governor appeared and qualified the members. He then announced that seventy-six members, being a quorum, had taken and subscribed to the necessary oaths, and were regularly and duly constituted the House of Representatives. The Governor then said he put into their hands the opinion of the Supreme Court, as well as the petition of gentlemen from certain cities claiming seats, and invoked their careful consideration of the same. The House then organized by choosing John C. Talbot, as Speaker, by a vote of 72. Mr. Hale objected that no quorum was present, but was overruled, and Mr. Talbot took the chair. The Clerk and Assistant were chosen by a vote of 74 and 68, respectively, but Mr. Hale's objection of no quorum was again overruled, and they were declared duly elected. The demand of the Representatives claimed to have been elected in the cities of the State for admission was referred to the Committee on Elections when constituted. In reply to a remark that the House was not bound by the decision of the Supreme Court, Mr. Hale made a speech defending the Court. He said that the election officers and the law had been passed by the Legislature as now constituted would not be legal.

The Conference of the National Greenback-Labor party met in Washington on the 5th. About 100 to 125 delegates from different States were in attendance, and, with the exception of thirteen Greenback Congressmen, were mostly representatives of State and local Greenback associations. There were, however, a few delegates who came as representatives of Trade and Labor organizations. The assemblage was called to order by E. P. Bowers, Chairman of the Greenback-Labor party, who delivered an earnest address, after which Representative Murch was made permanent Chairman. A committee, consisting of members of the National Executive Committee and the Congressional Committee of the Labor party, together with one delegate from each of the States represented in the Conference, was appointed to report upon the time and place for meeting in a Presidential Nominating Convention, and also to report the basis of representation in that convention. A number of resolutions were introduced and referred to the above committee.

Little of interest or importance was done at Augusta, Me., on the 8th. During the sitting of the House the Republican members had filing certificates, sixty in number, presented themselves and asked to be sworn in, but Acting Governor Lamson declined to qualify them at present, as he did not exactly know the extent of his powers in that direction, but should inform himself.

On the 8th Rev. Thomas Alfred Starkey was consecrated Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Northern New Jersey.

The special Senate Negro-Exodus Investigating Committee consists of Messrs. Voorhees, Vance and Pendleton, Democrats, and Windom and Slater, Republicans. It was stated on the 9th that they had decided to examine a few witnesses at Washington before proceeding to North Carolina, Indiana and Kansas.

Major William E. Sweet, Chief of the Internal Revenue Division in the office of the First Comptroller, Treasury Department, Washington, was recently dismissed for alleged extravagant expenditures while traveling on Government accounts.

At its recent session in Washington the Greenback-Labor Conference fixed upon Chicago as the place, and June 9 as the time, for holding its National Convention, and a call was issued to that end by the Chairmen of the Conference and the National Committee. The Greenback editors in attendance upon the Conference organized an association to be known as the Greenback-Labor Press Association, and elected Colonel S. F. Norton, of Chicago, President, and J. B. Hardall, of Clyde, Ohio, Secretary.

Gratiual Chamberlain proclaimed, at Augusta, Me., on the 9th, an order stating that, "in view of the extraordinary situation now presented at the seat of government, I will assume command and protect the public property and institutions of the State, in trust for the people, until the Governor's successor has been legally elected and duly qualified." When the House met, as soon as the reading of the journal was finished, Mr. Swann, of Minot, arose and read a statement that $1,000 had been paid him not to appear at the organization of the Legislature. He stated that the money had been paid him by Wallace H. White, of Winthrop, and that he (Swann) should not claim it. Mr. Harriman, of Kennebec, testified that the same offer had been made to him by White. James B. Clark and Alfred Cushman made substantially similar statements. No business was transacted for want of a quorum. No Republican was present, and in the Senate only one put in an appearance. The President of the Senate, Mr. Lamson, having concluded that he had no legal authority to do so, declined to administer the oath of office to members-elect of the Legislature who had not already qualified. In reply to instructions that he was implicated in the alleged bribery cases, Mr. Blaine telegraphed an emphatic denial and pronounced the indictments an unqualified calumny.

Both branches of the Maryland Legislature have chosen Democratic officers. The Governor, in his message, says the balance in the State Treasury September 30, 1878, was $256,30-.

Governor Perkins, of California, was inaugurated at Sacramento on the 8th.

Foreign.

Right Thiguand people are reported to be starving in Spain.

A dispatch from Cabul on the 6th says General Roberts had offered amnesty to all Afghan insurgents who would lay down their arms and promise not to make war again on the British flag.

Herr Bok, Secretary of the Boer Committee in South Africa, was recently arrested for high treason.

It was stated on the 7th that Russia had asked Germany to extradite all military refugees, and that the request had been denied.

Dublin dispatches of the 7th say the Irish rent agitation had extended from rural to urban localities. A movement had been organized to reduce rents in Dublin and other large towns. It was stated that the Government had set apart £250,000 to be loaned at an exceptionally low rate of interest to landlords and local bodies for the construction of public works, in order to provide work for unskilled workmen.

Gordon Pasha, the American officer so long in the employ of the Khedive of Egypt, has resigned, and his resignation has been accepted.

The ravages of diphtheria in the Russian province of Kharkoff are so great that the local Red Cross Society has formed three medical and sanitary detachments to assist the Government in combating the epidemic.

It was reported on the 6th that the new Queen of Spain had become seriously ill from the shock consequent upon the recent attempt upon the life of her husband. She had been attacked with epileptic fits.

Herr Pretorius, ex-President of the Transvaal, and chiming still to hold the office, has been arrested upon the charge of high treason.

It was reported on the 9th that the Fenians in England were becoming active.

A severe fire occurred in the Cracow district of Poland have been inundated by the overflow of the river Vistula.

The wife and mother of Yakoob Khan, the ex-Ameer of Afghanistan, have recently been arrested, and are on their way to India as state prisoners.

Later News.

A Berlin dispatch of the 11th says the family of Prince Bismarck had been called to his bedside in anticipation of his speedy demise.

A St. Petersburg telegram of the 10th says Russia had established a virtual protectorate over Servia.

The Ute Indian delegation arrived in Washington on the morning of the 11th. They were met at the depot by two employes of the Interior Bureau, who conducted them to their quarters at the Tremont House, where they remained in their rooms all day.

The Chicago papers of the morning of the 12th announce that the strike among the employes at the Union Stock Yards was practically at an end, and that the strikers were about to resume work without having accomplished the object of the strike, which was to exclude the employment by the packers of any but members of the Butchers and Packing-House Men's Protective Union.

At Eau Claire, Wis., a few evenings ago a young servant girl attempted to burn up a fire by pouring oil from a can into the stove, when the usual explosion followed. The clothing of the girl caught fire and instantly wrapped her in flames. Before assistance arrived she was burned to such an extent that it was thought she could not recover.

Charles Stewart Parnell has issued an address to the people of America asking for contributions to alleviate the distress in Ireland, and stating that all subscriptions collected for relief purposes may be forwarded to the Treasurers, Drexel, Morgan & Co., of New York City, who will forward the money to the Treasurers of the National Landleague in Ireland. In his address at the Parnell and Dillon meeting in Brooklyn Henry Ward Beecher said, speaking of England: "The Government that has only emigration to offer its people has no right to longer exist."

There was no quorum in the Maine House of Representatives on the 10th, and the House adjourned, after a brief session, until the 12th. There was a short session of the Senate, and that body also adjourned until the 12th. On the 11th President Lamson prepared a communication to the Senate announcing that he had decided to assume the duties and exercise the functions of Governor. It was stated that General Chamberlain had notified President Lamson that he would only recognize him as a Senator-elect. The property of E. F. Pillsbury, the Fusionist leader, was attached by Elezenor Sproul for libel. On the morning of the 11th a statement was published over the signature of Wallace H. White, in which the statements and affidavits made by Swann and Harriman that they had been tempted by White were declared to be "absolutely, unqualifiedly and malignantly false." White adds that he courts the fullest investigation by a properly constituted Legislature, but will not consent to be investigated by "co-conspirators of Swann and Harriman."

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

A burlesque at West Bay City, in which was stored seven hundred barrels of gunpowder, was burned, the other day, and the people fled, in fear of an explosion, which, however, did not occur. There being no Government, the dynamite burned like grease.

William Jennett, of Cedar Springs, Kent County, has been deposited in jail on a charge of pointing loaded firearms at people. It's about time such items as these began to get plenty.

Charles Tobias, a coalminer on the Michigan Southern, who had one of his feet crushed by a moving train at Otsego, several weeks ago, died December 30 from the effects of lockjaw.

The dwelling of Alfred A. Reid, in Lansing, burned on the 1st. Loss, $1,000.

The Quincy mine rockhouse was totally destroyed by fire on the afternoon of the 31st ult. The mine, machinery and adjoining buildings were saved. Loss, $50,000; no insurance.

S. C. Phelps, of Berlin, was arrested and brought to Monroe on the 5th upon the charge of killing one Simms at his house on the preceding day. It appears that Simms went to Phelps' house when drunk, and smashing a window and door, attacked Phelps, who defended himself with a gun. Simms, who had lost one arm, used a chair for a weapon, with which he tried to force Phelps' gun upon him. During the struggle the gun was discharged, unintentionally. Phelps claims, and Simms fell mortally wounded, dying in a few minutes.

Miss Laura B. Welch, wife of the Detroit Receiver of Taxes, met with a severe accident the other day, narrowly escaping with her life. While engaged in cleaning a pair of kids, the gloves being upon her hands, the benzine she was using caught fire in some manner, and before the flames could be quenched her hands and arms were frightfully burned.

The family of Joseph Manser, of Calumet, Keweenaw County, will have good reason to remember Christmas day of 1879. Young Manser, a lad of about eight or nine, accompanied his sister to midnight mass on Christmas eve, and next morning was found insensible in his bed. While being carried down stairs the sight so startled his grandmother that she fainted. The boy died in a few hours; his grandmother the next day.

The Legislative four committees Detroiter, and the inspection for December, being the first month of the new year, was $17,917 against $13,867 in December, 1878. During the month 40,000 barrels salt salt was shipped to Chicago.

There is no record in existence on Lake Superior that shows so uniformly cold and boisterous weather as characterized the month of December just ended.

During the past year there were sixty-six deaths from diphtheria in East Saginaw.

Several days ago John F. Duval, a merchant of Cadillac, transferred his stock of goods to Robert Christenson, taking notes in payment, and went to Canada to avoid creditors. On the 6th Peter Doran, the attorney for Christenson, Sogers & Co., dealers in boots and shoes at Toledo, went to those to whom Duval was indebted, presented a writ of attachment, and took possession of the entire stock of goods, which is valued at $5,000.

The store of James Stewart & Co., extensive wholesale dealers in lumbermen's supplies, and manufacturers of lumber, at Saginaw, doing a business of $800,000 annually, was closed by the Sheriff on the 6th, under an attachment in the interest of Chicago creditors. Mr. Stewart was absent in Chicago, and the total amount involved is not known, but roughly estimated at $250,000. The assets consist of several million shingles, stock in store, a few thousand barrels of salt, and outstanding accounts, the value of which it is impossible to estimate at present. The cause of the failure is attributed to unlucky speculations in Chicago options and losses on salt contracts.

Charles Schumaker, traveling agent for John Caulfield, wholesale grocer, of Grand Rapids, has disappeared. It is said, in the section of Canada, and it is reported that he carried away a considerable sum of his employer's money.

General Byron R. Pierce has been appointed Supervisor of the Census for the Second Muskegon District.

Jerry Holland, aged seventeen, employed at Dwight's saw-mill, in Detroit, stumbled and fell across a circular saw the other afternoon, and was instantly killed. His body was cut entirely in two just below the armpits.

The recent high water in Grand River carried away the bridge at Lamont. Boone containing 1,500,000 feet of logs, belonging to C. J. Comstock, Jr., also on the belt. The logs went down the stream, involving a loss to the Boom Company of $10,000.

Large flocks of wild ducks can now be seen every day feeding in the open water of the rapids at Sault Ste. Marie. There are several kinds of these birds, and they come in great numbers annually every winter, after the ice has locked up the streams and the shores of the large lakes, and gather their food from the bottom of the shallow portion of the open water. They seem to come only and expressly for the purpose of gathering their food, arriving early in the morning from the open waters of Lake Michigan and returning again in the evening.

During the year of 1878 the number of cases reported to the Board of Health, three Grand Rapids physicians testified that they did not consider diphtheria infectious or contagious.

A Grand Rapids girl saw a heavy fog, and thinking it was smoke gave an alarm of fire which brought out the city fire department. They came to spirit and returned to swear.

The Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw Railroad sold 8,000 acres of pine lands in December for $9,800, and 620 acres of farming lands for $2,881.

The plaster companies at Grand Rapids have agreed to sell plaster at one dollar a ton by the car. This is said to be scarcely the cost of production.

The following are the Detroit grain quotations: Extra Wheat, nominal; No. 1 White, $1.06@1.06½; Amber and Mixed, No. 1, nominal; Corn, No. 1, Mixed, cash, 36c; No. 1, Mixed, September, White, no sales; Rye, No. 1, 57c; Barley, No. 2 State, $1.75@1.80 per cental.

CONGRESSIONAL.

Among the bills introduced in the Senate on the 8th were—to establish a Court of Appeals; to provide that no person on the retired list of the army, navy or marine corps shall draw a pension in addition to their pay; all matters intended for exhibition at the Centennial International Exhibition at Cincinnati in 1880, Mr. Hamlin presented petitions from a large number of citizens of New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania, praying an amendment to the passage of Senate Bill 126, providing for medical and surgical examination and the taking of testimony in pension cases. Mr. Logan presented a very large number of petitions of soldiers for the equalization of pensions. The motion of Mr. Morgan, as a mark of respect to the memory of the late Senator Houston, the House adjourned. In the House Mr. Scales, Chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, reported resolutions, which were adopted, directing that the communication relating to the transfer of the Utes of the recent outbreak of the Indians at the White River Agency, in Colorado, and authorizing it to send for persons and papers; calling on the Secretary of the Interior for copies of all correspondence since the 1st of January, 1879, by S. C. Stanley with the Secretary of the Interior, Bureau of Indian Affairs, and the copies of all correspondence by Hon. Nathan Bishop, General Hatch and Adjutant and Special-Agent Pollock with the Interior Department relative to the Ute Indians. Mr. Blackburn submitted the report of the Committee on Public Lands, in favor of the Committee of the Whole. Mr. Hewitt introduced a bill to prevent the issuing of patents for land on which homestead-warrants have been located. Mr. Forney introduced the bill in death of Senator Houston, and the House, as a mark of respect, adjourned.

In the Senate on the 7th Mr. Pendleton gave notice of an amendment to the Bagley-Davis resolution, declaring that no such notes shall not be available for any of the receipts into the Treasury. Mr. Sherman moved to amend the Pendleton amendment by establishing the Committee on Appropriations in conjunction with the Committee on Finance, to consider all questions relating to the Treasury Department, the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, the Mint, the Coast Survey, and other surveys and railroad statistics. A communication was received from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting the correspondence called for concerning the Ute Indians, excepting two letters received from General Hatch concerning the Indians then taken by the Ute Commission, and the other to make further negotiations with the Utes with reference to their removal. In relation to the Secretary says, the interests of the public policy would be seriously injured by public publication at present. A large number of petitions were introduced in the House, among which were the following: To regulate coinage; to restrict the immigration of the Mongolian Chinese; to prevent and punish the sale of intoxicating liquors to Indians; to repeal Indians; for the regulation of inter-State railroads; to authorize the building of a bridge across the Mississippi River at Dubuque; for the relief of Fitz-John Porter; concerning the

From South Arm.

Dr. Phelps:

We have recently been informed from a reliable source that the Pine Lake Iron Company have been negotiating with parties in this place for wood, lumber, coal, or ores to be brought to the new furnace to the exclusion of nearly all the long talked of charcoal business. If it is so, it is a good deal of encouragement to us already.

Our school keeps on understand took 12 to 15 scholars, but we could increase it much more if we had room. But as that cannot be done at present we must wait a little longer. Our school is now under the management of Miss Ada Avery a recent graduate of Albion College, who is a lady of fine education and good address. She is also a good teacher and we hope to have a good school. Why, she is done and got so interested in our welfare that she has been visiting the scholars at their homes. Some of the scholars are over 20 years old and have not been to school for 10 years. Some have to walk two miles to and from school.

Our school house is finished in fine style and is a credit to the township. Our next effort is to have a church erected on the premises, to be used by all denominations. Our people are very much interested in the matter and we hope to have it completed before the close of the season. Mr. Bowers, Mr. Wm. Bowers and Mr. Wm. Hall have been very active in the matter, and are willing to work.

Thanking Harry and Dassa for their kind remembrance, I will close. Yours truly, Dassa.

NOTES OF TRAVEL.

DEAR SENTINEL:

Not long since, your correspondent started for Petoskey, where his business was to take his notes to returning Mr. Osborn, he having sold his double variation with his interest at Charlevoix. It was his first visit to Northern Michigan, and he was just delighted with the country.

Our start was accomplished at the [illegible] at A. Ray's, and early in the morning, and [illegible] and had about [illegible] on the block of [illegible] and we were [illegible] to [illegible] Lake Michigan, [illegible] Lake Michigan, sometimes called [illegible] the [illegible] reach, reminding one of the [illegible] in the vision of the Apocalypse.

We took a peep into the large store of Messrs. Fox, Rose & Butters, and found their goods [illegible] burned that they were doing a [illegible] business.

We [illegible] the pleasure of meeting, for the first time, the Rev. Mr. Peters, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, of whom we heard many praises.

We also met Rev. Mr. Shier, pastor of the Methodist Church, and from his conversation and reputation, judge that he is not "universally denominational." He is said to be a man of very liberal and catholic views.

Petoskey has seen a [illegible] season up to breathe; but as an offset to the [illegible] influence, it has about six hundred voters to the temperance pledge.

We called upon Brother Rose of the Democrat, and received a very pleasant [illegible]. Some of the Democrats of our own county, we should judge that the Democrat stand considerable "cuffs." Aside from its politics, the Democrat is a fine paper.

We also made a brief call at the office of the Record and found the proprietors, Messrs. Mosher and Grimm, hard at work. Mr. Grimm is a graduate of Albion College, and as a knight of the quill, is [illegible] excelled in Northern Michigan. In it is one of invention he is said to be terrible. The Record is an able paper, and its [illegible] is well deserved.

We enjoyed our roam much, and hope for a better acquaintance with the generous people of our sister town.

The Maine Republican Appeal.

The Republicans of Maine have again appealed to the Justice of the Supreme Court, and agree to be bound by it finally to abide by their opinion. The Republicans claimed in the legislature by the votes of the people that the Republicans had the house and the Senate, Monday night. They then elected 5 Senators in dispute to be returned to the supreme court justice the answer to which questions will decide whether the Fusion legislature is a legal body, and whether Dingley is a legal governor of the senate or whether the Republican organization is the legal legislature. FOR PRESIDENT IN 1880,

ULYSSES S. GRANT.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

NEW YORK, JAN. 25, 1880.

Frank Leslie is dead—and removed to shape the most American of funerals. In the absence of pictorially exciting everything interesting to our people in the way of dying or of funerals—in the profession, he was by long odds the most conspicuous man New York ever saw. An artist by profession, with the keen eye for picturesque subjects, a successful publisher, he was by long odds the most picturesque figure in the papers, for no breath of scandal ever stained the name or character of Frank Leslie, while, after arriving here he naturally adopted, and the change was sanctioned by the best of taste, the most unique and original of modes of life for the winner of the honor one particularly be contrasted with such quiet affairs would take rounds and spade. His financial difficulties ever came back to her. Years was a notorious one in connection with many other men of prominence, but the shock was unabated, and had in fact a fatal, because he would not have been able to withstand the strain of his old-time vitality, when consciousness is changed. Instead of dust. His existence of weakness, a profound dating for long and suffering, becomes a volume, announced to every man law, and sent for the doctors. Consulting and prescribing like a fool, a week after a day became. A belief pitying people and a genius childlike soldier brought into notice, which, for weakness, the work of time, has when because the lucky owner $2500 or $3000. Mr. Leslie's smooth country manners, with its pure, was the glory of Saratoga. Ice he enjoyed an elegant hospitality. Mr. Leslie was an excellent judge of character, and a fine hand. His employees, from his chief editors and artists, down to the scrub woman who polished the floors of the new and magnificent building in Park Place, were devoted to him. He was married twice, his second wife, to whom he was fondly attached, being the sole legatee of his large fortune. He married well quiet enough, but among the hardest fighting Democrats was many of the foremost citizens in the country, men distinguished by learning, dignity, wealth and genius.

As a pleasing instance in point of our present prosperity, I may just remark that on Tuesday last Uncle Sam took in $907,000 cash; $7,000 less than a million in the New York Custom House. On the same $7,000,000 was in gold coin, weighing about a ton and a quarter.

The preparations for becoming World's Fair in 1883 are likely to be begun shortly. Two rival organizations have considered in the most unkindly fashion, and at a preliminary meeting under the chair manship of President Acosta of the Erie Railroad, considerable enthusiasm was manifested. The appropriateness of the date selected, being the centennial anniversary of the acknowledgement of American independence by Great Britain, and the place, New York being the last portion of our soil evacuated by hostile foreign troops, was duly dwelt on with effect.

It is quite the correct thing to wear every one and then to commemorate the events of particularly absurd presentiments and all that sort of thing. A few days ago a Brooklyn paper, by way of a sensation had some articles and interviews about what might happen on a Sunday, just went to the establishment. Of course, in such an event the consequences might be awful. The East river is a very crowded watery highway, full of remarkably swift, intricate and ever varying currents and eddies, and the ferryboats are during several hours of every week day packed like sardine boxes. Hundreds have for years been very fortunate, the few lives of passengers which have, but having been sacrificed by their own imprudence in trying to land, or embark while the boats were in motion, or else by suicide. The officers predicted no other thing or and consequently declined to go to the expense of keeping two boats at the usual $5 their begin all the time. However, one day, a sunbeam, was observed carrying a little about the steam, passing the cupidores of all the other craft in the vicinity as to how they should get out of the way. The panic and its aftermath. Next morning early the police force of the Fulton ferry took its usual stand while the long was in the shop engaged in repairing a terrible

From Horton's Bay.

We had supposed from what we had heard, that the climate of Northern Michigan had established its reputation as being of a very "stable character." But we find, that, like a former acquaintance of ours who was ever boasting of her "established reputation." It is subject to many ups, and downs, and very radical changes, and the zoology in opposite to reach, as does in no very alarming degree as yet discernable.

Yet in an "ill wind that blows nobody any good," and we are happy to say that our lot has been cast at Horton's Bay, where an ice boat is owned, and "chawed" all around by the united efforts of U. S. A.

How is it Mr. "Pecd," can't you arrange the law for business interests?

Seriously, isn't this a spell of a season? are exceptionally fine ones for out door work, and no parents justifiable in permitting, under ordinary circumstances, their children to be absent from school while the roads are in no worse condition than at present, and the weather no more severe.

We have no very great reason to complain in this District or the vicinity, yet there are none of us faultless, and when, with a moments reflection, we note the vast importance which attaches to "first impressions" we readily perceive that no child will have a Parent qualities, who neglect the earlier education. Neither does the parent do justice to her whose duty, who just drops the old from his bed, get in minute rush off to school and evidence for its comfort of body or mind; thoughtful care as to the habits of and kindly wholesome advice to the child on the part of the parent, goes very far toward making it a happy and studious one. Very much must depends upon the treatment at home (into many respects. Teachers are often held responsible for what is clearly traceable to the door of the parent, or guardian.

For instance, if no exercise or order is observed at home, the child thrills with a bad grace to the necessary discipline of free and regulated school, and often to the judgement of the instructor of a case that is good government to subject the child to chastisement, if often occurs, that parents sympathies with the child and denounce the instructor from whom they except this one. But were we to enter into the many ways in which the parent or guardian might assist instead of resist the efforts of teachers in our common schools. We should occupy many more than properly would well yield, therefore to the present we refer.

Since our last writing we have had fine sleighing, when the roads which in places flooded bared in the morning have so closely flooded bared in the morning that one shall have more fully described, we pledge ourself faithfully to the public to obtain, in manuscript, and attempt it to be issued, and we should endeavor to sell our pamphlets outside of our locality, for the benefit of County Hand Crafts as well as well to the other of our young for, these remarks were, who is no doubt, correct in every the least.

CASUAL OBSERVER.

Growing Peach.

We take the following from Prairie Farmer Record of Rochester, New York for the benefit of such of our readers as may not cut peach trees the coming spring.

"We've been at it for the last four weeks, trenching over one thousand to twelve hundred trees a day last fall and spring, heading back and starting two or three inches of limbs as near the ground as possible. We are thoroughly the old practice of growing peach trees with a body four to six feet, growing our trees low to the ground, and head secure low front, where, in the old way it could not be practiced. We investigation the experiment of cutting back an old peach tree to a mere stump, working around it and feeding it well, and have been astonished to see the change in size of fruit and productiveness, as well as increased healthiness of tree. We set about no protection in preventing in part, the frost than from arriving near the ones that do receive protection in an orchard. We trim our peach trees with a view of not only having the lower limbs as close to the ground as possible, cut the most on the west side. We are confident that white washing the bodies of fruit trees just before the winter sets in, is a great protection from hot rays of sun in winter."

Says the Monroe Commercial "One of the present inmates of the County House is a puzzle to all who see him. He was found in a streetcar, in Pennsylvania, about Thanksgiving, and is apparently not far from 25 years of age. Where he came from and who he belongs to no one knows. He utters no word, can converse ally, less to be helped to bed, and stand or sits just where he is put, without moving a muscle or seeming to take any note whatever of what is going on around him. He stands for hours and hours together in one position, his hands hanging listlessly by his side, his eyes fixed on vacancy; line a sense what rapid movement of the pulse, but moves no muscle unless helped to move by some one of those in charge of the inmates. He eats is one of the most strange and puzzling ones that we have ever witnessed."

The young ladies of Norwood gave their gentleman friends a leap year sleigh ride and oyster supper on Friday evening.

At an early hour a four-horse team was seen upon the street, and, calling at the various residences of the feminine gentlemen were duly escorted by the proper lady to the sleigh, well furnished with comfortable robes, and finally were conveyed to the residence of Mr. Daniel Stafford where an oyster supper was bountifully prepared. The evening was pleasantly spent in social and pastoral amusements and the gentlemen were all safely returned to their homes in good condition at a reasonable hour. VIDOCQ.

EDS SENTINEL.

Since my last, we have received a liberal installment of snow, sleighing is good and business seems to warrant an active. All hands are busy, and all seem to wear a more cheerful look. This cheerfulness will be impressed to the utmost in pushing forward the work that must needs be done on sleighs, for past experience teaches us that it may be short lived.

F. J. Meech of Norwood, is spending a few days in this vicinity looking after his business.

Hon. James Allen of Norwood, is with us. He is clearing ground and cutting wood, preparatory to commencing the lumbering business in the spring. He is looked to by Messrs. Nichols and Morgan, and it is only necessary to know these gentlemen to be assured of the success of any enterprise, if reasonable attendance is met with. The material found in the hill near here, and especially at the point where the yard is being prepared, is pronounced to be of the very best. A few brick made from the clay and burned in a kiln at Fife Rapids, are said to be superior to the celebrated Milwaukee brick. They propose to put up a kiln of 500 M. the coming summer, after putting up a small kiln to test the clay.

The recent mild weather was well improved by Gore, having buildings in progress of construction, among which is the large three story hotel owned by F. M. Abraham and a sibling, which is being built for a sister of D. Tainter a well known and substantial farmer living near here. A Lloyd, another of our enterprising farmers, preparing to build a comfortable dwelling in the spring on his farm near here.

J. Fleming a jeweler of Nashville Barry Co. has been spending a few days in town working at his trade and looking up a suitable business.

A revival is in progress here by the M. E. people. No marked results as yet.

Our school is prospering under the able management of Miss. Anna Cooper. All speak of it in terms of the highest praise. It is the first term in the new building, everything is neat, and orderly, the teacher seems devoted to her work, and the school are to their studies, all of which is as it should be.

Capt. W. W. Smith of the scow Hornet is busily engaged repairing his vessel. He intends to put her in first class order anticipating a busy season next summer. He is also engaged in the lumbering, and R. R. tie business, Mr. S. never sets the grass grow under his feet. CIRCUS.

Eulogies on the late Senator Chandler were delivered in the Senate last week by Senator Blaine, Bayard, Anthony, Hamlin, Logan, Ferry, Morrill, Ransom, Carpenter, Hoar, Baldwin, Cameron, and Booth.

R. H. Morrison, the much sued and deeply investigated ex-Odd Fellow, grand treasurer, has opened a law and collection agency at Sturgis. Of course everybody will want to entrust him with their business matters.

The Charleston News wants to know why General Grant is entitled to southern hospitality. It evidently forgets that when Robert E. Lee and his gang of ragamuffins surrendered at Appomattox, Grant gave them the first "square meal" they had enjoyed for some time.

THE SENTINEL

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH.

EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 3, - - 1880

FOR PRESIDENT IN 1880,

ULYSSES S. GRANT.

Scotch Knights—Kalamazoo—Trout—Ancient Druids—Holy Mother—Prince of Darkness.

EDITOR SENTINEL:

DEAR SIR.—Amongst the many papers that pass through our hands "The cream of the Editorial Rooms," yours at WASS comes as a welcome visitor, endeared by the many pleasant associations that cohere in memory, of your pleasant neighborhood.

The choicest tid bits, that form our charge of your journal are those of your local correspondents. While the occasional letter from some one outside pulls spice to the feast.

We pick up a lig cut and then it for the news, while the SENTINEL is read and remarked on. "Alpha," "Video," "Nor wood," "Kalamazoo," and last but by no means least "Clerico," the dog-on the clog! all of them send in something interest to the point, of common interest to everybody around the lake. But at times some one falls in the hands of sharp critics. I have been amused at the theological strain your paper has taken, and await the coming of each paper to see what new flame is tilting his lance of your clerical knight. He reminds me of the days of chilvary and jousts, in the region of Henry, and Phillips of Hessonia. There was a famous Knight who was a great top, and thought himself a lady killer at one of the tournaments, he bore the emblem of a maypole on his shield and armor. The device was

"I lean a pin, who pinkerly at pass,"
"Whose pinkerth at him, I pick at his nose."

A brother Knight of Scotch lineage had seen the device and shield being prepared, and bid him to his armorer, bidding him prepare this device for his armor and shield.

"I bear a Falcon, fairest of flight,"
"Who so pickeith at him, I fight."

At the tournament, the grim old Scotch Knights was almost the last to enter the lists. He was instantly recognized and horse came prancing forward until the horses of every Sir Knight was changing their tits with excitement, the horses of the two Knights managed somehow to get into collision, at which the hoary Sage proudly rated the fop, for his stupidity. The fop was boiling over with rage to see his emblem stolen, thould Knight so much Lester equipped; and having for his device so noble a bird as the Falcon, flung back a rude insult. The Knight dropt the point of his lance, thus challenging him to combat. They separated under their different leaders, each took their places. The chariots rung out in the air, bidding the Knights to fight manfully, to put away every cause of offience, and may our Holy Mother give the just the victory. The charge was sounded instantly and away sang along like the wind, came the ten troops of horsemen. They met with a crash that sonnded like thunder. Amidst the trampling of horses, the clashing of arms, the shouting of men, could be heard the harsh voice of the Scotch Knights, Hoot! now yield thee! yield thee! as the dust cleared away, amidst the many fallen ones could be seen the device of the Falcon on the uplifted arm of the Knights; his mailed foot was on the breast of his antagonist; his sword within an inch or ten of the hapel throat, demanding his surrender in these words: Hoot! Insolence a valiant, thy emblem and device smacks more of a chattering pie, than a brave Sir Knight had hither thy sword quick, shield!" And surely the noble Knight of the Fallow bore away those emblems of his conquest.

So to, the moment Clerico sharpens his goose quill, and dips his cassor into the arena,—some one takes him up.

"Kalamazoo" with his close discriminating faculties, delineates the prominent characters of your town and county. Clerico rushes into the breach with a snapping brain, in which are shown the proper qualifications of a "Kalamazoo lunatic."

The paper of a neighboring town, comes to hand with a marked letter in which some gives a gentle hint that Clerico knows how to eat trout.

Then comes some religious banter about "Sectarianism," closing with a letter from Traverse City, in which the Presbeting Elder pretty plainly hints that "Clerico is troubled with itching ears."

Hear I feel like pausing, I am only a Layman and don't feel like rushing in where Angels fear to tread. Yet if Clerico is indeed a Parson, I think he has forgotten the social assemnies due to brethren of the cloth.

The teaching of my boyhood comes forcibly to my mind.

The respect and reverence due to the time servant of the Living God clings to me still. I cannot forget the homage paid to their priests by the children of Israel.

The Ancient Druids reverenced and adored their priests, clothing them in robes of pure white, holding them, as the visible emblems of the mystic Deity they worshipped.

And in these days when as much of the world creeps into the church, do we not recognize in the industry of a pastoral care, the bring why lends our thoughts our hearts our better nature up to the presence of him who said, "My peace I leave with you, not as the world giveth, give I unto you."

When the Prince of Darkness is so sorely engaged all around us, stirring up strife—rousing the worst passions of our natures—those who profess to be clothed in the garments of the ministry, and who set themselves up as teachers amongst the people, should surely refrain from picking holes in the garment of a fellow worker in the vineyard of the Lord.

A LAYMAN.

From Boyne Falls.

The sleighing has nearly gone, and with it a part of the business of the place. Our hardware merchant is packing up and preparing to leave for a better location, as business in his line is not sufficient to bear expenses. He expects to locate in Grand Rapids.

The past three weeks of warm weather has caused a great many to call on Dr. Hood, the complaint being a hard cold, a distemper that has never been known in these parts before; the Doctor has been out almost every day for the past three weeks, but finds all seem to get over it with his skillful treatment.

Mrs. E. Wanson has been very sick, but is rapidly improving.

John R. Mears, brother of the Landlord of the Boyne Falls House, is on town looking for a site to start in business somewhere in Northern Michigan.

J. W. Barnes, Esq., seems to be doing considerable business, and keeps a very good assortment of common furniture and is busy making to order. He sells cheap.

The people of Boyne Falls meet on Tuesday night at the hall, to make arrangements for a donation party for the benefit of Elder Sweet, the M. E. Church Pastor.

The sermon Sunday evening, gave very good satisfaction, hutchi! the singing, now Judge please be more prompt and sing with the quire, and don't keep us standing so long to start the tune. Go and buy a tuning fork.

The Treasurer of the town of Jordon, has been to the Rapids and got the means wherewith to pay part of the Highway orders. We hear Boyne city expects to draw the county seat to the head of the Lake. So does Boyne Falls expect to as some very fine residences erected the coming spring and summer, by Nelson, also by Powers.

Jim Garrison has contracted to build a school house north of Hannvers Station, in the spring.

We understand that Mr. and Mrs. Ames of the Boyne Falls House, will leave soon for their old home. All will miss them.

Where the Carpenter got that beautiful dresser he carried home; that was the first piece at Barnes' shop I guess.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

NEW YORK, JAN., 28, 1880.

With General Newton is daily and unostentatiously exploding mines under the roots at Hell Gate, and English miners are blown at the rate of 1,000 a year according to the latest statistics, while excavating coal, we have been treated to a similar disaster on a smaller scale on board an ocean steamship while being docked on its arrival from across the Atlantic. Some incautious longshoremen took a lighted lantern into one of the coalbunkers of the National Steamship Greece, and the gas generated by the soft Welsh coal, and confined for the utter absence of any sort of ventilation, exploded, killing one man outright, mortally wounding two others and severely injuring a number more, including Capt. Brackett, the well known retired service federal officer, who was in the very act of making an important entrance of smuggled silk. It is feared the Captain will lose the sight of both his eyes.

The remarkable virtue of the New York police has been exhibited again in the shape of their favorite raids. The more keen The Vilen keeps a dance house and gamgers in Bleecker street. The frequenters are not all of the low class one would suppose would haunt such a place. At any rate, many who drop in are only occasional visitors, and are mainly attracted by curiosity. The other evening the place was surrounded, and some three hundred male and female prisoners made. Unless they undertook to mark the names of the ingoodest people to raise it is astonishing how many mistakes of prominent warriors and statesmen were victims of the mess sieur. One young gentleman had evidently forgotten his false manche but given, and was fined double in consequence. He was dazed by getting too long under the juniper tree.

Of course your readers have heard about the mysterious murder of a young lady of too easy virtue in Prince street, on the west side, in the station-house where preaches "Lightning Charley," one of the smartest police captains in America. It falls far to rank with the historic Nathan and Hartsell murders in interest. The girl was apparently robbed, but many valuable articles than any named were left behind. No arrest was made, though in the room below reclined a sleepless invalid. Altogether, it is a very strange case, and will exercise the keenest ingenuity of the detectives to unravel.

It is estimated that no less than $100,000,000 worth of buildings are annually destroyed by fire. Were these enormous losses not distributed by means of Fire Insurance Companies, the consequence would be ruin to many of the most enterprising people. It is important that insurance should be effected where losses will be paid. Like capital invested in other directions, insurance follows the line of concentration. While many hundreds of the smaller fry of companies are cutting rates and running each other, and becoming utterly unreliable from their rabid scramble for cranky customers during their precarious existance, such corporations as "The Home," for instance, keep steadily accumulating funds and adding to their reserve even during the darkest periods of depression. During the early portion of last year there were some terrible fires, most only in the dry goods district in New York (by far the richest district in the city) but in various parts of the country. Of course the largest and strongest companies have their full share of the loss. On examination of a report just published by the "Home," I see that they not only continue to pay their regular dividends, but have already recovered their loss by these great fires, and possess as strong an array of unfinished assets as ever for the protection of their policy holders.

I told you some time ago of the enormous sale of New York Central Stock by Vanderbilt to a syndicate. These bonds are now offered in general market by the great operators in parcels to suit, and they await bids, of course intending to clear a comfortable little profit by the transaction.

The too-effeminate clergymen have been frolicking lately in a very exuberant manner. A Methodist minister has just been acquitted of immorality, but rebuked for indiscretion in promiscuous kissing by a conclave of his brethern. A German clergyman has been obliged to sever his connection with his highly respectable congregation in Hoboken because of a further lively interest in his good-looking cook, excemplified as usual by kissing, and another Hoboken minister, a youth of eloquence with tender whiskers and a tender heart, was hunted out of his very pleasant boarding house at the point of a revolver by an irate husband who heard him trying to coax his wife to elope.

A good business for street railroad companies to keep out of, and one in which they have shown great proficiency, attained by constant practice, is that of running over people. A small boy who was crippled by the carelessness of a horse car driver has just recovered $10,000 damages. A few more such swinging verdicts will improve the soulless corporations with some regard for the lives and limbs of pedestrian citizens.

A pretty good bit at the pompous parties who are always going to reform politics and usually fail in the most inexcusable manner, has been made by a prince in one of our least savory localities, namely, Avenue A, more commonly known as Dutch Broadway, where the least aristocratic of our German fellow citizens do greatly congregate in multitudes. He remarks that a papers' association is an organization for the employment of a lawyer and to lick a brush other.

The ocean suburbs of Brooklyn are to be improved in a marvelous way. Two colossal enterprises are now under way. One is to improve the far famed and fragrant fashionable watering place, Rockaway Beach, to the extent of $5,000,000, a prominent feature being a mammoth hotel across the thirds of a mile long, with all the appointments suggested by the late success at Coney Island. The other scheme is a new railroad to connect New York direct with Coney Island by a strategitious route involving the bridging of the East River at Blackwell's Island. And no doubt there will be room of money in both of them.

Notice.

STATE OF MICHIGAN County of Charlevoix, ss. Public Notice is hereby given that the County of Charlevoix, through its Board of Supervisors, has entered into a contract for five years from Nov. 1st 1879, with the Detroit House of Correction, for the maintenance and keep, of all persons convicted in this County, and punishable by imprisonment in the State Prison; and for a term not less than sixty days.

Dated Nov. 18, 1879.

Edward H. Green, Prosecuting Attorney and Agent for the Board of Supervisors.

STATE of MICHIGAN, County of Charlevoix ss. Notice is hereby given, that by an order of the Probate Court for the County of Charlevoix, made on the 13th day of November A. D. 1879, six months from that date were allowed for creditors to present their claims against the estate of Sarah Hoagsty late of said County, deceased, and that all creditors of said deceased are required to present their claims to said Probate Court, at the Probate office, in the village of Charlevoix, for examination and allowance, on or before the 13th day of May next, and that such claims will be heard before said Court on Saturday the 15th day of February and on Saturday the 15th day of May next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of each of those days.

Dated Nov. 13th A. D. 1879.

J. MILO EATON Judge of Probate

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

XLVIth Congress.

MR. FERRY introduced a joint resolution in the Senate on the 19th, for an amendment to the Constitution providing that suffrage shall not be restricted on account of sex, or any other reason that does not apply to all the male citizens of private bills were passed. Mr. Sherman's resolution instructing the Committee on Finance to inquire into the practicability of refunding any part of the public debt at less than five per cent. interest was taken from the table and referred to the Committee on Finance. The bill to prevent arrest of suitors in transportation was debated. In the House Mr. Townsend (Ill.) introduced a joint resolution proposing a Constitutional amendment in regard to the election of President and Vice-President, providing for their election by a majority of the votes of the people and for the abolition of the Electoral College; in the case of Mr. Young (Ga.), an invitation of the House was extended to him to be present on the occasion of an address by Gen. Grant, on the 22d of February, in all of Ireland, was accepted, and a resolution offered by Mr. Warren was adopted. [Ireland the hall of the House of Representatives on the 24th.

IN the Senate on the 20th the House bill to submit free of duty articles for exhibition at the Milwaukee Exposition for 1881 was passed. The bill to prevent cruelty to animals in transportation was further debated, and then a motion was made to refer it, with a view of the many amendments made to the bill, as to importance and the difference of opinion as to its effect, it be committed to the Committee on Patents, in order that a new bill might be reported. Bills were introduced by Mr. Pollock, to equalize homesteads and for the relief of settlers on school lands in Washington Territory. Mr. Jarvis (Va

The S. S. Convention at Horton's Bay.

The second quarterly convention of the Evangeline Twp. S. S. Association recently held at this place was in every particular a success, not excepting the superb dinner which was served up right there in the school house (where the meeting was held) by the good people of the district who are justly noted for their hospitality.

But the feast was not by any means all confined to the inner man. The meeting was a very profitable one and truly a "Feast of reason and a flow of soul." It was well attended, all present manifested an intense interest and nearly all took an active part.

Those who gathered first, and before the President arrived, engaged in song and prayer for the advancement of the S. S. cause.

On the arrival of the President of the association the convension was at once opened with appropriate devotional exercises, a secretary chosen and a committee appointed to arrange a programme, who soon reported; then after arranging some details for the afternoon session, we adjourned for dinner.

Dinner over we resumed business and proceeded to carry out the programme agreed upon, which consisted of short addresses on various S. S. topics, the reading of essays on similar subjects, the answering of questions given out at the last meeting and those deposited in the "query box."

Although feeling that much more of interest might be said upon this broad, interesting and important subject, which should be so near the heart of every man and woman in the land, and engage much more of their time and attention. The convention adjourned to meet at the Crawford school house, Dis. No. 5, on the third Saturday in April, when it is hoped the attendance will be even larger than here. Why not wake up on this important subject and attend these conventions from all parts of the county, and get up an interest that will secure and maintain a flourishing Sabbath School in every School Dis. throughout the country. Surely Sabbath Schools are desirable and beneficial, that all must admit, especially when they recall the truth of the adage. "As the twig is bent the tree inclines." The following resolutions were adopted by the convention:

Whereas, We regard the Sabath School as equal at least wid the common school in importance, as a means of advancing the bert interest of a people, and, Whereas we regard S. S. Conventions as an efficient means of creating a public sentiment in favor of, and a general interest in Sabbath Schools, therefore, Resolved, that we pledge our influence, our personal presence, and our best endeavors for the promotion of the interests of Sabbath Schools in our respecure localities and throughout the country. Resolved; that we will individually and collectively, do all in our power to maintain and increase the attendance at interest in and usefulness of the quarterly convesations of this association and to extend their iafluence.

ONE WHO WAS THERE.

Gen. Logan, Tuesday last, made a strong report against the proposition to restore Fitz John Porter to the army, or to vote him pay for service he has never rendered. This indicates a stubborn fight over the proposition in the senate. In the house, Gen. Garfield is already preparing a strong speech against the measure, in which, if he is allowed to use his knowledge as a member of the original court-martial of what transpired in its secret sessions, it is said he will make some startling revelations of facts not proper to have made public at the time, and since kept secret by the rules of the service.

The Chicago Sub-Treasury is reported to be paying out about $46,000 a day in gold. The gold pieces begin to show in artistically knit purses.

DIED.—We learn that Dr. Morgan, the dentist, died in Grand Rapids lately.

SPECIAL Masonic meeting this (Tuesday) evening general attendance is desired.

Charlevoix county has 1,663 school children according to the school census of 1879.

QUARTERLY MEETING at the M. E. Church next Sabbath, Rev. Mr. Blanchard of Norwood, will preach.

CHEBOYGAN has the small pox. Mr. Nelson, a prominent citizen of that place, has been stricken down with that dread disease.

STEAM SAW MILL.—E. M. Conely, of Indiana, has leased of W. H. Wallace a piece of ground on the State Road at "Shagonaba's," twelve miles north of this village, on which he will erect a steam saw mill. They expect to have it in operation May 1st.

PROMINENT Unitarians are in correspondence with believers in that doctrine here in relation to the establishment of a Society. Meeting here the coming summer. At the last meeting of the Charlevoix Liberal Club Messrs J. S. Dixon, J. M. Clark and E. Carpenter were appointed a committee to look into the matter.

THE lecture of Wm. Black last Monday evening before the Charlevoix Liberal Club, on "Sources of Belief and Formation of Opinion," is spoken of in all hands as an able effort, teeming with thought and logic. Mr. Black is a clear thinker, and is possessed of an easy, free delivery. He will undoubtedly again occupy the rostrum before this society.

THE Norwood School District case, of District No. 8, in that Township re Horace Hull, for the removal of that officer, for alleged abuse of office continued during two days of last week before the Township Board, and finally resulted in a settlement of the dispute by the resignation of the entire School Board. A special meeting of the directors of the District has been called for Feb. 12, to elect a new Board.

DURING our recent visit to Kalamazoo, we learned that the members of the Charlevoix Resort Association were longing for the day to come when they should again breathe our pure air, and revel among our lakes and rivers. Quite a number of new members have been added to the Association, and about $1,000 has already been raised to improve and beautify the grounds, and President Page will be here before navigation opens to inaugurate the work. The members in Kalamazoo are very enthusiastic over the prospects of the Resort.

Norwood Notes.

A rather remarkable change has taken place in the weather during the last week. Several heavy squalls have been experienced at Norwood, but the most important occurred at the residence of Mr. John Muirhead, early Sunday morning, Feb. 1st. It is of the feminine gender, and is said to weigh about ten pounds.

Mr. F. J. Meech, his daughter Belle, and his sister Helen, attended the Masonic supper at Charlevoix, Tuesday evening, and report a grand time, which is only what might be expected.

Mr. Fred Glaser has departed for parts unknown, with the best wishes of many for his safe arrival.

The donation for the benefit of Rev. S. G. Blanchard on Thursday evening was a very pleasant social gathering, and resulted in $51 in cash.

We trust, Mr. Editor, you will not allow your vanity to become unduly inflated by what we are about to say, but believing in the principle of "Honor to whom honor is due," we desire to mention that several very high commendations respecting the SENTINEL have reached our ears of late. The people remark the steady improvement of your paper, and appear to appreciate the clean, lively and really excellent sheet you are sending out week after week. VINCO.

THE UPPER DEC.—Again we call the attention of the people of this region to the necessity of being up and doing on the question of opening the upper outlet. It is a matter of vital interest, and should be attended to at once. The Iron Company agree to take wood and be responsible for subscriptions. This makes it easy for all. The interest of the public in this work should be all absorbing.

MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION.—A Ministerial Association to be composed of ministers of all Christian Denominations will be held in the M. E. Church at Petoskey, to commence Tuesday evening March 2d, and continue the two following days, for the discussion of various topics of interest, in connection with church work. All are invited. Entertainment will be furnished. The opening sermon will be preached by the Rev. A. J. Eldred, Presiding Elder of Grand Traverse District, on Tuesday evening. Look for programme of exercises next week.

PERSONAL.—D. R. Bennett and A. H. Coburn, of Norwood gave us a call Saturday.

—H. C. Coolman, M. D. and Daniel Blankley, of Torch lake, made us a call Saturday.

—J. L. Reigel, Treasurer of Springvale Township, made his returns to the County Treasurer Friday.

—Joshua Mudge of Canada, is here visiting his brothers, A. J. and Roswell Mudge. He will probably locate here.

EDITORIAL WANDERINGS

A Two Weeks Trip--State Institutions--A Profitable Cruise.

The editor returned from his wanderings last week, after an absence of two weeks, having visited Big Rapids, Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo, Jackson, Detroit and Flint. At Big Rapids we were unexpectedly called upon to pay the last token of respect to our excellent friend, the late Dr. Phelps, and the event will always remain in our memory as the most sorrowful of our life of which we have had a realizing sense.

At Grand Rapids we spent a day very pleasantly, meeting many acquaintances, and among them A. B. Turner, E. M. Harrington, R. N. Goodsell and others.

At Kalamazoo we passed a portion of a day, and receiving marked courtesies at the hands of Mr. Bardeen, State Railroad Commissioner Cobb, and Mr. J. L. Sebring. With the latter, behind his magnificent bays, we rode to the Insane Asylum, and under the personal guidance of the Superintendent, Dr. Palmer, made a thorough inspection of the Institution. We passed through the large number of halls of both the male and female departments, through seventy of maniacs in all stages of their malady. We saw simpering, shouting praying, laughing, maniacs, lunatics joyful and sorrowful, others murderous and fierce, and several strapped to their seats as the only means of restraint. We spent about three hours among these unfortunate people, and for some time after, every person we met in the beautiful streets of Kalamazoo we eyed as a raving lunatic. Even the dignified and scholarly Dr. Brooks, his brother the professor, and the venerable Mr. Page, did not escape our suspicion. But we soon realized that we were among sane people. In all its departments this Asylum is one of the most perfectly conducted of any in the country. Comfort is upon every hand, and kind treatment characterizes the duties of every officer. It is a wonderful institution, and the 600 patients are as thoroughly at home as the conditions of their disordered minds will allow.

At Marshall, our alma mater, we spent the Sabbath, the guest of Mr. Will B. Lewis, Asst. Postmaster, and a son of our old editor "Uncle Seth." After an absence of nearly fifteen years from this place we found lists of old associations. The Statesman where we spent our "leisure," has passed into strange hands, the old of those days have passed away and the young have passed into a forgetful manhood.

At Jackson we dropped off expressly to visit the state prison, and our card, together with a letter of introduction from a Hereford friend took us within the ponderous walls and gained us many courtesies. Under the personal guidance of the Deputy Warden, Col. Hinckley, we leasurely visited all of the great workshops, filled with the toiling criminals, doomed thus to labor in expiation of their evil deeds. We saw several noted burglars and murderers and saw every face as they passed before us in close file to dinner, and, standing by the side of the deputy Warden, saw them at their plain dinner of pudding and milk, and then file out again, to their labor. The prison contains over 500 convicts.

On to Detroit, where we spent three days attending the Grand Lodge, F. & A. M. and in our leisure hours loafing about this truly beautiful city. We enjoyed two pleasant rides with ex-Governor Bagley, a quiet chat with state Treasurer McCreery and Auditor General Lashmer, and visited at the house of Dr. D. McLeod, a brother of A. J. McLeod, of this place. The Dr. is a gentleman of culture, a physician of large practice, and a professor in the Michigan Medical College. We enjoyed the society of the Doctor and his lady very much, and regretted that want of time should cut our visit short.

We passed on to Flint, where we spent a half day with a brother, visited Prof. Gardner of the famous Flint City Band, our editorial friends and a few old acquaintances, and then left for our northern home.

For a nice sugar cured ham, go to Rimey's.

Carpenter & Bartholomew give notice to their customers that they are not receiving $100 bills on the Western National Bank, as there are counterfeits of that denomination on that Bank. But they are still buying eggs and musk rat skins.

The "Barber's Muzzle."

Among recent inventions there is none that has been welcomed by the public with more enthusiasm and hopefulness than the barber's muzzle. As its name suggests, its design is to put an end to the operator's conversational powers of the barber, which, throughout the civilized world, and, as Pope forcibly said, "to make reason confess millions sworn." The barber's muzzle is a light and really ingenious machine, made of the best steel, and exceedingly strong. It is designed to be fastened by a strap upon the mouth of the barber, and, when once in place, prevents him from making the slightest articulate sound. To be shaved by a barber thus securely muzzled would be a safe and, to a great extent, a painless operation, and, were it brought into general use, the death rate in our large cities and the number of annual lunatics would be greatly decreased.

The new muzzle is recommended by several distinguished scientific persons whose opinion is certainly entitled to respect. Professor Harkness, of the Smithsonian Institute, writes to the inventor: "Your barber's muzzle is a practical and valuable invention, which should be applied to every barber in the land." The Oshkosh Board of Health says: "We have tried it in our city, and the result has been a decrease of eleven per cent. in the weekly return of sudden and mysterious deaths;" and the editor of the Winfield Bugle exclaims, with enthusiasm: "Go on in your noble work! The man who can muzzle one barber where two were unmuzzled before is a priceless benefactor of his race." These strong recommendations, but, in spite of them, it is not certain that the plan of muzzling barbers is either practicable or desirable.

It is a matter of history that certain able and ingenious rats once patented a plan for defense against the machinations of a particularly dangerous cat. A bell was procured, which was to be attached to the tail of the cat, whereby she would involuntarily give warning of her approach and enable the exposed rats to retreat to their hiding place. A mass meeting of rats had adopted by acclamation a resolution approving warmly of this scheme, when an aged rat of vast experience cast a gloom over the assembly by asking to whom the bell was to be attached to the cat. Now, there is no doubt that the barber's muzzle is just as useful to his conversation if it is placed over his mouth, but the question arises, who is to put the muzzle in position? Of course, the barber will no muzzle himself, and, equally of course he will not meekly permit his customers to muzzle him. We think, perhaps, the weak point in the plan of muzzling the barbers. They will decline to be muzzled, and hence the ingenious muzzle will prove to be practically useless.

Moreover, if we concede, for the sake of argument, that it is practicable to muzzle barbers, nevertheless, it may be boldly asserted that it is undesirable. There are circumstances in which it is necessary that the barber should have the use of his voice. For example, he must be able to cry out:

"Next gentleman!" or, to remark: "Take a seat, sir." Or be ready for you in a moment, sir." It is also in many cases desirable, though not strictly necessary, that he should be permitted to ask if his customers will have their hair trimmed short, or if they habitually wear it brushed behind or in front of their ears. The muzzled barber could ask none of these questions, and the result would be unsatisfactory, and even worse. Without in the slightest degree underestimating the frightful consequences of unrestrained conversation by barbers, it may be assumed that were barbers to be strictly muzzled we should soon find that we had merely substituted one evil for another.

What is really needed is not a muzzle, but a sort of conversational brake, which can be applied by the customer whenever the barber's freedom of speech verges upon license, and he betrays a tendency to indulge in the fatal conversation which has produced such wide-spread misery. This brake must be exclusively under the control of the customer, who must be able to apply or release it instantaneously. Precisely how it shall be constructed and operated are matters of detail which may be safely left to the ingenuity of American inventors. When they distinctly understand the general nature of the required machine, they will doubtless be able to construct it in such a way as to render it readily available for the desired purposes.

But the conversational brake is not alone sufficient to render the barber innocuous. It would draw, so to speak, only one of his fangs. His power to talk his customers to the verge of death or insanity would vanish, but his awful "touch" would remain. He could not, indeed, urge it upon the public with words, but he could still hold it in front of the customers and compel them to try it at the edge of the razor. The distinguished men who have recommended the barbers' muzzle seem to have entirely overlooked the fact that it does not pretend to give us any defense against tonic. These can be but little choice between tonic and conversation. The latter is more immediately fatal to mind and body, but the former, perhaps, produces more real suffering. There are men who pays squandered fortunes in buying bottles of tonic which they hated and despised, at the request of barbers. There are thousands of young men who, are prematurely bald, and whose bodies are slowly suffering through the daily applications of a hundred different varieties of tonic. Pitt—Exchange.

Grub-Staking.

One can acquire an interest in mining property in many ways. He can find a mine himself; he can supply another man with food and tools, and give him a share in what he may find (and this is "grub-staking"); he may buy a mine when found, or a share of it, bearing in mind the Western saying that "a prospect hole is not a mine;" or he can invest in stock. Grub-staking a good man, and if possible accompanying him on his search, may be called the best way, for, said an old hand, "you make your loss at the start." Buying a claim or claims is not infrequently satisfactory; but said, with quaint gravity, another "old-timer," "If I was a capitalist, and I'd see a mine worth half a million, I'd want to buy it for about twenty-five thousand dollars, and have some advantage on my side. A man can't see very far into the ground."

It is stated that no geologist ever yet found a valuable mine—the humble prospector being always at the front—and even then owling much to accident. With his horse laden with a little bacon and flour, perhaps a little coffee and sugar, a frying-pan and a coffee-pot, and with his pick and shovel, this hardy working pioneer traverses the length and breadth of the mineral region, undergoing many and great hardships, often facing danger, often, indeed, laying his bones on some desolate hill-side or in some lonely canyon; and then—only to think of it—one in five hundred finds fortune! We hear of late years that mining has become as regular and legitimate an occupation as manufacturing; and it is undoubtedly true that method and system have been largely introduced, and that the strong carriers of paying mines and successful smelting works may rightly claim that they are engaged in sober and industrial pursuits; but with the great bulk of modern Argonauts, from our poor, sanguine pick-user and burro-driver to the New Yorker who, without the slightest practical knowledge of what he is doing, "takes a flyer" in Wall street, it is as certain as the sun rises and sets that the gambling and not the commercial instinct predominates. A bank was pointed out to the writer in a large mining town which, with a capital of $50,000, had deposits of from $700,000 to $800,000, and which had made $43,000 net profits in nine months.

"But they say there is no money in banking," was added—"I mean, no money as compared with what some of them can make in mining. When a fellow can go out and make a forty or fifty thousand dollar strike, banking seems pretty slow." Could anything better illustrate what has been said of the frightful consequences of unrestrained conversation by barbers, it may be assumed that were barbers to be strictly muzzled we should soon find that we had merely substituted one evil for another.

CUT NAILS. Cut nails, says the Philadelphia Ledger, would have proved a much more profitable speculation during the year just closed than the most buoyant railroad stock in the market. At the beginning of the year they cost $2.15 per keg. The price was gradually advanced, reaching $2.75 on the 1st of September, and then it took a sudden jump to $3 on the 15th, and $3.25 on the 18th of that month. Since then prices have continued to rise, and on December 26 the keg of nails that could have been bought in January for $2.15 was worth $4.35, a gain of over 100 per cent.

A LADY, once a social celebrity in Paris, Mme. Louise Lacene, has just published her one hundredth year. Under the First Empire her salon was as brilliant as that of Mme. Recamier, whose intimate friend and rival in beauty she was. Mme. Louise Lacene, however, mixed herself up with political intrigues, and officials and officers were invited to abstain from visiting her salon. But she went herself to the Tuileries and pleaded her own cause, and the interdict was removed.

The great building for the exhibition at Dusseldorf, which is to be opened this year, is nearly finished. Every branch of German art and industry, manufactures and commerce will be represented in the exhibits.

The French are about to follow the lead of the Germans in introducing submarean telegraph lines. M. —A paper by M. Becquerel was read recently before the French Academy of Sciences on the temperature of snow-covered ground. The author maintains that snow of itself does not protect from frost the bodies covered with it. It acts, indeed, as a screen against losing radiation, and gives water at zero, C., which filters through the ground; but below that temperature it melts or goes, like other bodies, variations of temperature which may be transmitted, if, however, straw or manure submitted had been laid on the ground before the snow fell, there would be greater probability that organic bodies in the earth would remain uninjured by subsequent frosts.

—At the last meeting of the Liverpool Engineering Society a paper was read touching the probable exhaustion of coal, in which the author advocated the substitution of the tides as a producer of motion which would outrival all other sources of mechanical power. A correspondent of the Builder, too, is of the same opinion. A compressed air chamber filled by the tide at Brighton, he says, each six hours, would maintain an atmospheric railway, such as Brunel invented, from that place to London. If the tides could be thus utilized all our railways and factories—all the work now done by the steam engine—could be performed by them. There would, moreover, be no jerk, no smash, no smoke, no noise. Apart from the fact that the present generator of steam will in time cost more to produce than it is worth, coal has so many disadvantages that no one will regret to see its time when it will be supplanted by another agents. When this is to be is the question of the future.

Mustangs in Texas Thirty Years Ago.

The word mustang is a corruption of mesteno, the Mexican name for a wild horse. Many years ago there were thousands, no doubt millions, of these animals in Texas. In 1849, and for several years thereafter, they were numerous in the region between the Nueces River and the Rio Grande. They were found further north, but not in such numbers. Immense herds of wild horses could be seen grazing on the prairies. When they saw any one approaching, the leader would often move to the front and make a reconnoissance. If things did not suit him he would give his head a peculiar toss, wheel and sound the note of alarm. These demonstrations could be followed by prompt movement on the part of the herd, sometimes to the front, but most usually to the rear. They would wheel into line, change front, move in line or in column with as much precision and order as cavalry. It was wonderful to witness how well they were drilled and disciplined. In the event a retreat was ordered the leader would move in the rear for a while. If any laggard or straggler did not carry out to the letter in a large mining town which, with a capital of $50,000, had deposits of from $700,000 to $800,000, and which had made $43,000 net profits in nine months.

AGRICULTURAL AND DOMESTIC.

—Our view is that no one who values his life has a right to eat raw pork, that the less should presume that "ham, to be edible, must be cooked." It is a fact beyond dispute that a person cannot use pork as an article of diet without committing a considerable risk of trichinæ, every one and then say, almost once out of every eight times that he sits down to eat of it. Inasmuch as a pork-eater must periodically strike a nest of trichinæ, he ought certainly to consider the prevention of cooking them till they are dead.—Dr. Poole's Health Monthly for February.

—Many persons know it, but some do not, that a pretty and easily-grown window plant may be obtained by soaking a round piece of coarse sponge in warm water until it is thoroughly expanded. After squeezing it almost half dry, place in the openings tuliber, red clover, and barley grass seeds, rice and oats. Hang the sponge in a window where the sun shines a part of the day, and sprinkle it lightly with water every morning for a week. Soon tender leaves will shoot out, and, growing rapidly, will form a dropping mass of living green. If regularly sprinkled, it will last for months, and will be blossoms of the clover.—Scientific American.

They affirm that the resources of the United States for supplying England with food are practically boundless. Refrigerating and receiving every day a new depot in both in the extension of agricultural enterprise and in the facilitation of transport. Mr. Gladstone suggested some time ago that if the farmers would turn their attention to raising fruit, vegetables, poultry, eggs and butter, but the Echo apprehends that even in this limited field they will be outdone by foreign competition. In that case, nothing will avail them but a universal reduction of rents.

—The best thing a young housekeeper can do if she finds she cannot from want of previous training, make matters come out right, is to go right back to her mother and let that mother do for her what she did long ago—teach her, better by letter, the alphabet of housekeeping. Or if that is impossible, employ the time and maintenance of some wise, experienced housekeeper, buy a good cook-book, a nice little note-book and a new leaden pencil and begin your education. The friend will open her storehouse of information, will make clear the mysteries of the cook book, and will help to obtain the controlling power over that stove, and so aid you that your work will be greatly lessened. The little note-book will gather within its covers the most valuable of your own private experiments all your observations, all that you read or hear on the subject, in short, everything that will be useful to you or anyone else, and in after time it will be a treasure indeed. It will be worth more to you than you can imagine now.—Kansas City Times.

Commencing With Ten Crops.

It is wise and well to occasionally substitute new crops for those that have long been a source of profit. The failure of crops is favorable to keeping up the fertility of soils. Farmers who are poor, especially those who occupy mortgaged farms, are obliged to raise those crops that can be produced without much expenditure of money. For a man who is very poor or very mean, or who does not think that the duty of his neighbor is to assist him in any particular account, may satisfy his soul by handing the officiating clergyman a dollar of two. A year after they are planted or sown, so that immediate return is realized from them. They may also be produced with very little labor. Potatoes may be planted on a small scale and to increase as can acquires information by experience.—Chicago Times.

Make Farm-Life Attractive.

The improvements that do most to increase the comfort and surrender farm-life attractive are not of the most costly character and are within the reach of every enterprising farmer.

In making home attractive, costly ornaments should be left to those who have the means to lavish upon them. The costly country mansion or cottage should be surrounded by shade trees, to protect it or, rather, its inmates from the cold blasts of winter, as well as the intense heat of summer. The trees are within the reach of all, at trifling expense. The roadways, too, could be lined with trees, with little or no disadvantage to the adjoining lands. If the Patrons of Husbandry would take hold of this important subject in earnest, how easily they could line the highways of the whole country with beautiful ornamental and fruit trees, and tax themselves but lightly in time or money.

Does any one doubt the desirability of such an improvement? Let such a one drive along a public road where trees have been set by forethought, and a little enterprise, years before such visit, planted such trees, and contrast the impression which it leaves with that from a bare highway, and then judge. The fact is, such investments costs but little and never fail to pay. No man can pass such a property without half-wishing he owned it, and if he is ready and able to purchase, he is willing to pay well for such improvements.

With the substantial comforts of country life it is the same. They are within the reach of every farmer, great or small, and cost comparatively little. All that is needed is judgment and a little well-timed labor to secure such comforts as fruits which many farmers never see in their dwellings. Apple, pear, peach trees and grape vines are as easily cultivated as corn. Strawberries can be grown with good success.

Most of the drudgery and monotony of farm life results from mere stupidity. It is commonly thought by those who live along for years on corn bread, bacon and potatoes, that such living is as delicious and healthful fruits are too costly for poor farmers. This is nonsense. No class of people in the world can raise them so easily and so certainly. City people know little of these luxuries in their perfection, as they get them fresh from the orchard, or charts, and, if the farmer would only study his employment, his family would seldom complain of their situation.—Farmers' Gazette.

Five Hundred Dollars in Greenbacks, Deposited in an Old Stove, Accidentally Reduced to Cinders—The Gallant Fireman Asked to Call Over from Issue.

Commissioner Brown is constantly in receipt of letters from citizens who have accidentally destroyed paper money as to the best way of getting their cash back again. A robbery, however, that his office is asked to consider is the redemption of very large sums. About seven years ago a case came to his notice of a man who gave $100 to keep money into a stove, along with some rubbish, and since that time has never come across the money. The Treasury Department for several parties who burned up five and ten-dollar bills by mistake. One man he remembered of, for whom a $100 bill in the dark, mistaking it for a $5 bill and paper. Last year a fellow called upon him with the badly charred fragments of a twenty dollar bill and a ten-dollar bill that had been manhandled by her dog.

This morning two peddlers, father and son, named respectively Gulley Goldberg and Erick Goldberg, called upon the Commissioner and directed his attention to a box full of cinders which they had with them. The cinders were of the shape and contained indistinct tracings of the letters on National Bank notes and greenbacks. Neither of them could speak English very well, but between them they managed to tell the Commissioner the purport of their call. They had, at 91 South Clark street, made a little money by peddling fruit or any other article of merchandise that they could handle. Last fall the father gave to his wife, Mrs. Goldberg, the sum of $300 to hide away for him. Mrs. Goldberg could think of no better place than an old stove in one of the rooms which was not in use. In this she placed the roll of bills without telling her husband. Nothing more was thought of the matter until yesterday morning, when Goldberg, Sr., decided to build a fire in that stove, and thus get rid of the rubbish it contained. The first intimation that the family had that anything was wrong before Mrs. Goldberg apprised her husband of his fatal mistake. Water was applied, but too late. Nothing but the charred remains of the bills were to be found. These were carefully collected and placed in a box. Commissioner Hoyne was sent for, and, after hearing the above facts and asking the Department to redeem the money. Mr. Brown, Auditor Teller in the Sub-Treasury, forwarded the box and the affidavit to Washington, and the Goldbergs may be happy yet.—Chicago Journal.

A Home in the Celestial City.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., Dec. 12, 1878.

H. R. STEVENS, Boston, Mass.

About nine and a half years ago I had a lump the size of a goose egg taken from my breast. It broke and discharged for a long time, and the doctor, from time to time, removed pieces of the cancer. I could not sleep a night at a time for six months, and a great many nights was compelled to get up and take opium—a dose as large as a pea—to relieve the pain. I have tried everything I could hear of to last, I have paid one hundred dollars for medicine, and have had the best medical attention, and now I can go to bed at night and sleep all night and every night seem shorter in the morning, and no occasion to waken from pain. I was told by perfectly good friends, and frequently when I would get up would be dizzy, and have to put my hand on something to keep from falling, and so bad I feel like a drunken man. I am now seventy-two years old, and never saw a day's sickness in my life, and have been a leading activity, from the poorest looks and feelings, I commenced taking Vegetine, and recommend it to all whom I come across, and I hope the man who introduced Vegetine from the United States will have a home in the Celestial City. Yours most sincerely,

G. S. LEACH.

Mr. Leach is a gentleman well known here, and is the owner of the celebrated Purchase Water Wheel.

Vegetine

Completely Cured Me.

NEWPORT, KY., Feb. 26, 1877.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

DEAR SIR—I write to say that seven bottles of your Vegetine have completely cured me from a very severe case of Scrofula of many years' standing. Physicians and many medicines had no effect upon me, and I was a great sufferer. I am now in good health as well as ever, and feel that Vegetine has done for me what no other medicine could do without it.

I remain, respectfully yours,

J. A. PATRICK.

THE SENTINEL

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH.
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1880

FOR PRESIDENT IN 1880,

ULYSSES S. GRANT.

A BUGABOO.

The effect of the ambition for aristocratic social relations, now pervading the richest class in America, must necessarily be prejudicial to the preservation of our free and equal republican institutions. This is one great influence which operates in favor of Grant and a third term. All such people are anxious to approach a monarchial and hereditary government as rapidly as possible.

The New York Weekly Sun of the 21st inst. contained the above, which is but a sample of the articles that emanate from that paper touching the third term question. Every possible phase of the question no matter how far-fetched, is made to do duty toward one object, namely the crushing out of Gen. Grant for the third term. The term "Caesarism," and all that it implies under that plastic pen, is promulgated with suttring vigilance, in order to frighten poor timid souls into the idea that we would surely drift into a monarchy should the people promote to elect Gen. Grant to the Presidency for a third term, according to their interpretation, this would be a fearful calamity—one that would engulf the whole country in ruin. The idea, because one man is placed in the Presidential chair for the third term, that he can hereby seize the reigns of government, and arrogate to himself the powers of a despot, in a country like this, when every man that is a man values and glories in his freedom as his life, when easily viewed from a non-partisan standpoint appears childish and ridiculous. Neither Gen. Grant nor any other man, would have an army with which to enforce his edicts; neither would he have a people at his back to support him in any such unlawful ambition as depriving the people of their liberties. Rulers govern by the enforced or taciturn consent of the governed, and on this basis it would be neither.

Admitting that there are a few foreign-born zeolots who would rejoice to see this country governed with a court, with all its tinseled appendages and ceremonies, their number and influence, when compared with the intelegent masses, is infinitesimal, and they have not enough lewn to leaven the whole. This country embraces too many highly educated, intelligent and ambitious men, many of whom are striving for political preferment, who would successfully appeal to the educated people should it be possible for such a sentiment as that referred to, to make itself felt.

It has been claimed, and it is a fact, that the wealthy men of this country prefered a monarchial form of government. Now nothing is further from the truth, for they do not favor any other than a Republican form of government. Under its benign influence and equitable laws they made their fortunes and realize that they, their children and their children's children, can have all the rights that the term American citizen implies, whether fortune favors them in the future or not. Should they meet with adverse circumstances, they well know that they can console themselves with the thought that not only they, but their progeny, can aspire to the highest places of emolument and trust that the country affords, and that no distinctions of birth are necessary to admit a person to the highest ranks of both social and political life, providing they have the ability, and are worthy to fill them.

We fail to see why it should follow, as a natural sequence, that because a man is elected for a third term, he would thereby use his best endeavors to overthrow the government, which he has given in every assurance (both in words and actions) that he loves dearly; neither do we believe that the Sun thinks so; it is merely a bugaboo set up by them with which to overthrow a Republican candidate that they know full well would be elected, if once placed before the people as a Presidential candidate; and that he will be thus placed will be determined by the Republicans according as they think it necessary to impress upon those Southern Democrats the fact that the results of the late war cannot be reversed. Did the Sun not fear the great popularity of Grant as a Republican candidate, they would not be so assidous in their attempts to poison the public mind against him.—Ann Arbor Courier.

Senator Lamar, of Mississippi, lately received a paralytic stroke, from which, it is feared, he will never sufficiently recover to enable him to take part in public affairs.

School Law.

There are at many uninformed concerning the law regarding the text books for our public schools, and so much trouble has been made for teachers and scholars be cause of ignorance and carelessness on this subject, that we quote the following from the Lansing Republican, which explains the matter in very clear language:

Section 59 of the general school laws provides that the district board "shall prescribe a uniform list of text books to be used in the schools, but text books once adopted shall not be changed within two years except by the consent of a majority of the voters at some regular meeting." The same section also confers on the board the power to establish "needful regulations" to enforce its action. Under it the district board in the matter of text books is therefore, first to prescribe a uniform list of text books to be used in the schools; second to secure the introduction of these books; third to see that the books are retained in the school for the period of two years, or until further action is co-ordinate with the law. The makes the positive duties of the district board, and if member neglect or refuse to perform them, they incur the penalty prescribed for the neglect of duties. The district board must make the adoption for the period of two years, and it is in force until legally changed; but any agreement fixing a longer period than two years has no binding force. The district board as such cannot purchase, or contract to purchase books for the ordinary use of the school, and any such contract or agreement is void. School officers, by a cheerful performance of their duties under the law, and by carefully refraining from exercising their prerogatives will avoid a prolific source of discord in the district and of personal annoyance and liability to themselves.

A Chicago report says: "A prominent commission firm here has issued a circular of facts, which they say have been carefully collected, showing the total packing of six principal points during the past season to be 720,000 hogs short to date, estimating the total average in the whole country at 12,000,000 in number and 200 pounds per hog in weight. They also report a deficiency in the available supply of meats and lard, the deficiency being 200,000,000 pounds of meats and 250,000 tierces of lard, compared with the same date last season." If these estimates are correct, there will certainly be an increase in the market price of these commodities

The negro exodus from Texas to Kansas still continues. Hundreds make their way by team across the Indian Territory. The weather being unusually mild, even for Kansas, enables those who cannot procure houses, to live with a certain degree of comfort in tents and in their wagons; still some deaths have occurred from exposure and the lack of proper food. The question occurs to our mind. How long will the Southern people so stand in their own light as to permit the bone and sinew, that should go toward the building up and improvement of their sections, to leave them?

Gen. Chamberlain, of Maine, has come into unusual prominence because of the Maine difficulties. The praiseworthy manner in which he conducted affairs as head of that State during the interim that it was without a governor, merits the unqualified approval of all. Had he been injudicious in the temporary use of the power bestowed upon him as governor and commander of the military forces of that State, he could have caused trouble the end of which it would be difficult to foresee. He has even been favorably spoken of as a Presidential candidate.

The Lake City Journal is known to abound in literary curiosities and curious sayings of curious folks. But it isn't often we find one like the following, which is taken from that paper:

Took Notice.—To all who got concerned about it: Der landt vot stands on der behindt side von dot leetle shanty of oil mine in 21-5 of Glam Union township was took already by mineself. I vas now going to see Katrina und der baby. Whoever vunnys me don gitaim vill I a head jut put on him so high up like a kite.—A vord to der wise vas der perginning of eli.

(Signed) PETER DIMBLEDIEK.

The woman anfrinchis ers as usual besieging Congress for a constitutional amendment which will give them the elective franchise. To day they will present oral arguments before the Senate judiciary committee on this subject. If perseverance will accomplish all ends, we can look for every lady in the land to have a ballot placed within her hand, so to speak, within the next decade.

The New York Sun is in despair over the Democratic prospects in New York, and refuses to be comforted.

In the California legislature 24 of the 42 Republicans are for Blaine, and 21 of the 35 Democrats for Thurman.

All is reported quiet in Maine except Pillsbury's mouth which is still going with the wabbling motion of a spinning top that is about to lie down.

A Connecticut paper believes that if Grant and Tilden would withdraw there are several distinguished gentlemen who would find more pleasure in life.

The Utica Observer fairly sings out to John Kelly that if he knows what's good for himself, he will not attempt to perpetuate last year's bolt in New York.

John B. Foster, for years president of Bangor insurance company, has been ousted by the directors for taking part in the attempt to steal the state of Maine, one by one, the roses fall.

Mather McCloor of the Philadelphia Times announces that the day has come for Grant to decline the presidency, but as no presidency has been offered him, nobody but a McCloor could expect him to decline it.

The New Orleans Picayune takes Beck by the coat collar long enough to notify that Kentucky sees that "the real Democracy confesses and derides the doctrine of a paternal government which he is supporting.

The Philadelphia Evening Telegraph speaks of Hassbrock, the Cincinnati German editor, as the man "who is supposed to carry around in his vest pocket that portion of the German vote which is not in the breeches of Secretary Schurz."

Thurlow Weed says the object of the bill prohibiting the payment of officers employed to protect the ballot boxes in presidential elections, is not to protect another states against military interference at the polls, but to permit Tilden and his thieves to steal the state of New York as they did, with good Tweed's help, before the law was passed.

It is most worthy of note that the congressmen who most zealously favor the gift of $3,000 to Fitz John Porter were confederate soldiers. They appreciate his services, and are ready to show their gratitude at the expense of the nation.—[Cleveland Leader.

There is quite a marked contrast in the way that religious teachers from different sections, belonging to the same denomination, look at the same actions. For instance, the pastor of a Roman Catholic Church at Greencastle, Ind., publicly reproved and discharged its choir because they had perpetrated a fraud in raffling off "a piano at a fair." At the Catholic fairs held in this country hardly an article of much intrinsic value can be found that is not put through the raffling process at so much a chance; and those who desire to show the most zeal and ardor in the cause of religion are the ones who will be the most earnest in admiring others to "just take a chance in this." All the two places, we must say that the one adopted by the Indiana priest meets with the most popular approval now a days.

Judge Anderson, of Virginia, declares that a Virginian who becomes a Republican, commits an act so infamous as to give sufficient grounds for a divorce. A Mrs. Latham sued for divorce on the ground that she admired and reverenced Mr. Latham as a man who fought for the Confederacy; but after marriage she was terribly shocked to find that he had become a "Radical" and was actually voting the Republican Ticket. She could not possibly live with such a man, and prayed for a divorce. In delivering his opinion, Judge Anderson said: "The shock and mortification of Mrs. Latham were to find that her husband had not been true; that he had deserted his friends and had gone over to the enemy and had joined them in waging a war upon them more cruel than a war of arms." It was perfidy, the moral taint of which she felt attached to him, and which would likely exclude him from the best society of the State. The Court did not agree with Judge Anderson, and so Mrs. Latham must go without a divorce. It will be remembered that Judge Anderson of the highest Court of Virginia, solemnly declares from the bench that a Republican in Virginia is "excluded from the best society." So long as this social persecution goes on and a man is not allowed to even think as he likes, so long may the South expect to be severely let alone by capital and business prosperity.

The House committee on public lands will report favorably upon, and urge the passage of a bill authorizing the President to select from the United States lands in the State of California tracts on which are growing either the redwood or big trees, or both of said timbers, as he may deem proper, not exceeding in aggregate two townships of land, to be set apart and dedicated as public parks, for the benefit and enjoyment of the people, said parks to be under the exclusive control of the Secretary of the Interior.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

XLVIth Congress.

MR. RANDOLPH, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported, in the Senate on the 27th, the bill for the relief of THE JOHN PORTER, and Mr. GARLAND made a minority report, declaiming that the President had no authority to organize a commission to examine the case of the court-martial sentence passable by Congress, and that Congress has no right to pass persons for services not rendered. Mr. HOAR, in explanation from the army. Messrs. and Republican friends had removed politics from the case. Mr. HAYARD (Del.) presented petitions of ex-soldiers and sailors for the passage of the Weaver bill to pay such persons the difference in value between greenbacks and gold. Mr. HAYARD made a lengthy argument in favor of his resolution to withdraw the public moneys deposited in banks that refuse to pay interest thereon. The resolution was passed in the House by a vote of 179 to 5—a majority of the Democratic voting with the Republicans in the affirmative.

A TELEPHONE test was made lately between Omaha and St. Louis, a distance of four hundred miles, and is reported to have been altogether successful. "The Sweet By and By" was sung in St. Louis in a clear hearty tone voice, every note was distinctly heard in Omaha; it was repeated then at Omaha, for the benefit of St. Louis.

ARRANGEMENTS to a speedy from Lawrenceburgh, Kan., on the 27th to the Chicago Inter-Ocean thirty colored people from Monroe Parish, La., had been arrested at that place. They were mostly children, women and old men, and were without means. They expressed a willingness to work at anything they could find to do.

ON a recent morning a New York policeman met three boys on one of the streets in that city, bound for Leadville, and took them into custody. Four loaded revolvers were found in their pockets, with a plentiful supply of those needs. The boys gave their ages as nine, thirteen and twelve years, and told Superintendent Walling that their names were in Worcester, Mass. A desire to see the world and seek adventure impelled them to organize the expedition. The youngest, who is the smallest, stole ten or twelve dollars from an apothecary's shop, where he was an errand-boy. Making their way to Boston, the lads started for New York on a Fall River boat. When arrested they had eight dollars left of stolen money.

PETITIONS for a general Bankrupt law are coming in to Congress from the larger cities, and a bill for that purpose has been referred to a sub-committee of the House Judiciary Committee.

A PATENT was recently issued at Washington to Edison for an electric lamp, described as a combination of a carbon retorter made of glass and conductors passing through the glass, and from which receiver the air is exhausted for the purpose of giving light by incandescence.

Personal and Political.

IN his recent annual message Governor Van Zandt, of Rhode Island, recommended that women be given the right to vote on the school question, and that prohibition take the place of the present Liquor law.

ON the 27th the Maine Supreme Court rendered its decision on the questions propounded by the Fusion Legislature. The Judges say that, while they cannot admit, by implication even, that the questions propounded are presented by any legally organized legislative body, still, as they are presented by gentlemen professedly anxious to know their duty and perform it, they conclude to give their opinion. The Court then states the reasons why it declines to recognize as laws of binding force, whose levies of taxes it will enforce, and whose choice of prosecuting officers it will respect. The decision recites the facts connected with the issuance of certificates by Governor Garcelon, the meeting of a pretended Legislature in defiance of the Court's opinion, the election of JOHN FAIRFIELD as United States Senator who have presumed to act as State officers, and pronounces these proceedings, from first to last, illegal and of no effect. The Judges, in the concluding paragraph, say: "Two Governments claiming to be in existence as valid and entitled to obedience of the people, both cannot rightfully exist at the same time; but one Government can be recognized and obeyed. The responsibilities and solemnities are imposed upon us to determine which is entitled to judicial recognition. We, therefore, declare that the organization and action of a majority of all matters involved affirm and declare our judgment to be that the Senate whose organization was effected by the Hon. Joseph A. Locke, and the House of Representatives whose presiding officer is Hon. George E. Weeks, constitute the legal and Constitutional Legislature of the State."

THE Maine Fusion Legislature met on the 28th, and, after a long secret session, adjourned most on the first Wednesday in August next. The Fusionist Secretary of State, SAWYER, promised to return all books in the office of the Secretary of State, and it was thought he would not claim to be Secretary any longer. The Fusion State Treasurer, WHITE, notified the Finance Committee of his willingness to meet them, and his desire to surrender his office as soon as his successor is qualified. Nothing of importance was done in the Republican Legislature. Several Fusionists took their seats.

On the 29th Secretary SCHURZ sent a note to E. H. HALL, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, informing him that the public interest demanded a change in the Commissionership of Indian Affairs, and that his further services as Commissioner were dispensed with. Upon inquiry it was stated, on authority of the Secretary of the Board of Indian Commissioners, who had been investigating the charges against Hayt diligently and thoroughly, that no proof of any dishonest act or connection with corrupt practices of any kind had been found, and that he had exhibited a part in the investigation which the Department ought to have had. Other parties stated quite as positively that, while the facts developed in the recent investigation may not have been regarded as sufficient ground on which to remove Hayt, they were of the most damaging character, and, had necessary senator failed to remove him, other charges of a still more serious nature would have been preferred. Washington specials of the 29th state that General Hammond, of Chicago, who had recently resigned the position of Indian Inspector, made a confession to General Fisk, who was presenting the case against Commissioner Hayt, implicating Hayt and himself in very crooked transactions in connection with their official positions; and that he (Hammond) had resigned the Inspectorship to avoid being brought before the Investigating Committee. After making his statement General Hammond was taken suddenly ill.

ON the 29th seven Fusion Senators and twenty-six members of the House presented themselves at the Maine State House and were given seats in the Republican Legislature. Their reception was cordial.

AT a meeting of the United States Senate Committee on the Census on the 30th ult. reports were received from the several Sub-Committees on Nominations of Census Supervisors. The appointments for Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts and Rhode Island were reported back favorably from the sub-committees, and were all those for the Western States, except three for Illinois, one for Iowa and one for Tennessee, which were held by the sub-committees for further inquiry.

ON the 30th ult. the Maine House of Representatives adopted a resolution thanking the Wisconsin Legislature for its congratulatory resolutions.

RICHARD FROTHINGHAM, the historian, aged sixty-eight, died in Charlestown, Mass., on the evening of the 29th ult.

S. S. HAYES, formerly Comptroller of the City of Chicago, and, at one time a member of its Commission to devise a new sewer system for the country, died suddenly, at his home in Chicago, on the night of the 29th ult.

A WASHINGTON dispatch of the 30th ult. announces that, although no official confirmation had been obtained of the story that the court which had been investigating the charges against Major Reno had recommended his dismissal, the accuracy of this report was generally conceded, and it was further stated, significantly, however, that General Sherman favored a milder course, and would recommend that Major Reno be suspended for one year.

DUBLIN dispatches of the 28th say that's was a popular riotor in County Armagh in opposition to the service of ejectment processes. Several shots had been fired into a bailiff's house, and notices posted in different places threatening sum of the tenantry as should show a disposition to yield to the demands of landlords and pay their rents under fear of the constabulary. Two men, supposed to be of incendiary origin, had occurred in the neighborhood. The feeling among the people was one of determination to resist eviction by force, if necessary. The National ists of County Mayo had nominated Michael Davitt and Thomas Brennand, under ballot-act for sedition, as their candidates for Parliament. The prospects of their election were considered good. Up to the 27th the Duchess of Marlborough's fund for the relief of Ireland had reached the sum of £20,360.

ACCORDING to Calcutta telegrams of the 28th a circular has been issued by the Indian Government announcing the death of Mohamed Jans, the Afghan leader, and the report on the general conduct of his case as reported that the Ministers had sent word to General Roberts, at Cabul, that they had determined to fight to the last extremity unless Yakoob Khan was delivered in Cabul as Ameer.

Zillah Milner, a governess, has been charged, at Brighton, England, by a lady friend of hers with stealing. The defense was that the complainant, beside slandering the defendant, had caused her to be prayed for at St. Paul's church as a person troubled in her mind." According to the defendant, two ladies related to the defendant had also been prayed for, "that truthfulness might be vouchsafed to them." The defendant was fined a shilling and costs, and was bound over to keep the peace.

And all the rest of the guests seemed to think that way, too, for the enthusiasm was tremendous.

A SAD SIGHT.

Last evening there was in one of the wards at the County Hospital a scene to make the stout heart quail, the cheek grow pale and the eye dim. In one of the male wards lay a manly form, with the arms and hands covered with a mass of lint, and the head almost completely concealed in a hood and mask of lint, saturated with oil and lime water, with which the surrounding bedding was stained. The eyes now and then peeped out from the scorched and swollen eyelids, which were visible through small apertures in the mask, and, through a larger opening, the blackened nostrils, the blistered and parboiled lips, and a small mat of singed beard. It was plainly to be seen that the patient was suffering tortures beyond description. But a moment later, when an attendant entered and spoke a few words to him, the heart of a father overcame the intense pain, and the sufferer, ever mindful of his children, asked in the most paternal delays his coming, for fear that the little ones might be frightened. It was only then that the awful extent of the calamity which had befallen him became apparent. The victim was JOHN THOMPSON, a driver for the Chicago Fire Department, and the scene was at the County Hospital, where he was taken after the explosion which occurred at the fire in the building occupied by Charles Woodward, on Michigan avenue, near the corner of Twenty-second street. Thompson was driving one of the hose carts attached to Engine No. 6, which was the first company to arrive at the fire. He had just driven his team to the hydrant on the corner, and was in the act of coupling the hose to the hydrant, when the explosion occurred. He was thrown violently to the ground, and his horses became unmanageable. They dashed down the street, and, turning the corner, collided with a hose cart coming in the opposite direction, and both vehicles were overturned. The horses were caught and quieted, and Thompson was taken to the hospital. His injuries are of the most painful character, and, in addition to the burns mentioned, he has received a severe concussion of the brain, which will probably result in his death. He is a married man, and has a family residing on the West Side. He is a brave and faithful fireman, and has been in the service of the Fire Department for a number of years. He was one of the first to enter the burning building, and was the last to leave it. He was terribly injured while in the discharge of his duty, and his many friends will sympathize with him in his misfortune.

JOHN THOMPSON'S RIDE.

Young John Thompson is riding down
Through the woods that echo the town;
The cheerful sunlight around him wears
Its fairy flames in through the leaves.
And the waving branches play and dance
Wherever the golden arrows glance.

There was something said by the pig-fat breeze
To his soul that gave it a sweet heart's ease;
A whispered word that the wind let fall,
If her ear was closed to sum of all—
So he sang to himself in a pleasant way,
As he rode to his friend on that clear June day.

The birds sang up in the cross above,
The lamb of the lass sang to the dove,
The flowers smiled as he passed them by,
And his own heart made them a soft reply;
For love and beauty, and song are one
To the knights that on Cupid's errands run.

A garrulous brook, that murmured through
The moss on which fell long drops of dew,
And laughingly dashed its crystal spray,
Where it rippled and prattled the whole day
Some in shadow, the same in sun,
Are sunshine and shadow in the loving one.

Before him the meadows were fresh and green,
And the road ran winding along between
Tall rows of maple, and elm, and beech,
Whose branches met like hands in reach,
And the waltz whose church steeple with gilded vane
Shone bright at the end of the cheery lane.

Past the church door and over the hill,
And by the bridge by the old gray mill,
He rode and sang and full of love,
As his "Old Brown" Jane stood lonely,
Waiting and watching for him beyond
A glimpse of the farmhouse by the pond.

Under the roses a maiden stands,
With her cheek resting on her hands,
And she looks at the turnpike from the town
For a certain young man in a suit of brown,
And a glad smile plays on her features fair,
At the click of the hoofs of the coming mare.

Although the figure she scarce can see,
She knows in her breast that it is he;
And under her bodice her little heart
Sends the blush to her cheek with a sudden start.
And the telltale color comes and goes
Like the tint on the leaf of the summer rose.

Her father's acres are nothing now;
Nor the herds of cattle that graze below;
Nor the orchard's bloom, nor the ripening grain,
Which, when the wind blows are see the pixie,
Like the waves of ocean rise and fall—
For young John Thompson is more than all.

And the young man knows it. Therefore he rides
In quest of the loveliest bride of brides,
Whose brown eyes won him; whose forehead fair
Is crowned with a wealth of auburn hair;
And up from his heart to his lips there rose
A song that the birds of the church he has just passed by.

No parting charger, foam-flecked, he rides,
To turn the terrible battle tides;
No sword-inspired warrior is this gallant flits—
"The dam has burst—by the mine! to me Hasten!"
For love and disaster from him are far
As the Southern Cross from the Polar Star,

As clear as the heaven that jewels above—
Pure as the fresh'd of a white dove—
Such as what a true gentleman should be
Are the eye and the heart and the crimson lips
Of love and beauty, and song are one
To the knights of the porch in the month of June.

No glory wrung from a dastardly strife—
No threatened danger to limb or life—
But, with a heart as free from guile
As the eye and the heart and the crimson lips
He passed on, his way through the tuneful dell.

With calm below him and calm above,
Was his soul at rest when he rode the love

Items from "The Head," Which being Translated, Means Boyne.

Sleighing excellent.

Everybody busy and consequently happy.

The various products of the forest are coming forward rapidly for shipment on the opening of navigation. Logs are coming into the mill, which is, however, taking a rest preparatory to starting up in good earnest.

Mr. Cobb, of Kalamazoo, is having quite a large quantity of logs put in to be sawed for cottages to be built at his summer resort near this place, formerly the eighty acres owned by the Dickrist. Mr. Cobb is making extensive improvements on the premises, and is also being much for the place and surrounding country. Other wealthy men of Kalamazoo, and other places in the south part of the State, are interested in this resort and, though wholly uncertarian, bids fair to become a formidable rival of the other resorts in Northern Michigan.

The prospects are very encouraging for this place and vicinity. A gentleman has just arrived from Ingham county, who owns land near Iron Lake, of which he proposes to make a farm. Such arrivals, and of those in search of land, are of frequent occurrence, and there is plenty of unoccupied land of the very best quality for farming purposes, which can be bought at a reasonable price, and on very easy terms. The climate is unsurpassed for healthfulness, the winters dry and pleasant, and are no colder as generally supposed by people living farther south. Strictly people are foolish to go west in search of homes, when Charlevoix county offers as great inducements.

Then, too, there are chances for engaging in manufacturing enterprises, and a means of shipping the products to market, not found in any other county in the State.

But I fear I am digressing and will leave the subject for some future time, with just this one additional remark, that if some of the idle hands and unemployed capital in other parts of the country could know of these chances there would be a grand rush in this direction. Lots are selling rapidly.

Messrs. Nicholls & Morgan sold three a short time ago to a Mr. John Hunt, who is a worthy farmer of Wayne county. Two of these are water lots on which he is to build a dock soon. He also bought between two and three hundred acres of land near here.

A few days ago his nephew, Seth Hunt, who is a merchant of Leavelle, Wayne county, bought a lot and intends to come here soon, erect a building and engage in general merchandise and shipping business.

O. F. Beardsley sold one recently to a Mr. Woodward, of Traverse City, who is a mason by trade. He intends to build a store which will be occupied by his wife with millinery and dress making.

James Snipp, one the oldest settlers, is quite sick, also Mr. J. B. Parker.

A. Nowland cut his foot very badly a short time ago while at work in Cameron's lumber camp.

The new bridge over the Boyne at this place, is completed and is a model of strength and durability.

The brick yard is progressing.

South Arm Items.

Mr. Datcher, of Charlevoix, passed through town the other day, he was on his way up the Jordan where he is getting out logs.

Miss Addie Crawford, of this town, came near being drowned the other evening. She was crossing the Arm after dark, and mistaking the mill light for the store light, she came up near Rimpey's dock where the water was thinly frozen over, the ice suddenly gave away, the water being about 14 feet deep, she broke through four times. She succeeded in getting out three times, but the fourth time being so nearly exhausted she gave up and called for help, she succeeded in holding on the ice till she was helped out. She is around again with no serious results from the cold bath.

Neither lost, strayed, or stolen, but came to the home of Calvin Bennett, one 11½ lb boy which intends to remain till further notice.

Samuel Whiteford of New York, lately came to town. He intends starting a blacksmith shop at this place. Mr. Whiteford is an experience workman, and all those desiring any work in this line will do well to call upon him.

Miss Laura Seofield has returned home. She has been absent for a few months at Westford county, where she has been teaching the young minds "readin', writin' and figerin'," which they cannot help doing under the skillful management of Miss Seofield.

OMEGA.

From Hayes.

In the town of Hayes, District No. 4, Maple Grove Union Sunday School was organized Jan. 18th, 1880. The following officers were elected:

Supt.—Rev D. H. Pierce.
Asst. Supt.—Mrs. E. Gibson.
Treas. and Librarian.—P. W. Howe.
Sec. pro.—Miss Anna Cook.

The first meeting was held Feb. 1, 1880, in Maple Grove school house, there were 19 present. The school was called to order by the Superintendent, the opening exercises were as follows:

1. Singing—Sowing the Seed.
2. Prayer by the Superintendent.
3. Singing—Come to the Savior.
4. Reading of the lesson by the Superintendent. Response by the school.

The teachers then attended to their classes, after which the school closed by singing Sweet Sabbath School. Adjourned to meet two weeks from date.

MISS ANNA COOK, Rec. Sec.

Correspondence.

EDITOR SENTINEL:

The people of Charlevoix county, and surrounding country, are enjoying quite an intellectual feast this winter in the reading which your excellent paper affords, especially the correspondence.

Obeying in one of his articles, makes known his doubts as to listener Sectarianism being the better way to advance the cause of Christ. To this the Presiding Elder, who considered himself attacked, replies in an article filled with nought but the kindest of feeling, and brotherly love for his liberal minded brother, whom he will not refer to when he comes.

Then Layman, as Burns says "takes up the cudgel" and lays it on unmercifully. What else is going on, the designers of our village are twice a month enjoying an intellectual feast into which enters no feeling of envy, nor any unkind, unkeepings among those who participate.

I refer to the lectures of the Liberal Club and the Historic Society of Charlevoix. In all there have been five lectures delivered three to the Liberals, and two to the Historic, any of which did credit not only to the lecturers but to the place. The next lecture before the Liberals will be delivered by A. M. Cook, Esq., Subject—"Money and its Functions." The Liberals have quite a liberal and able corps of lecturers already engaged whose names and subjects will be announced in due time. The Rev Mr. Parmenter delivers the next lecture to the Historics, subject not yet announced. Let the subject be what it may, the lecture will no doubt be a good one. It speaks well for the place to see such an interest manifested in both of the lectures of both societies; the only draw back being the lack of sitting room for the audiences. Thus encouraged we hope to see both societies go on "from prospering and to prosper."

NOTICE to present navigation between Charlevoix and Chicago.

THE Knights of Honor expect a big crowd at their Grand Ball the night of Feb. 23d.

CONSERVATIVES will remember that communications should reach the office the last of the week.

A movement is on foot among some of our citizens for putting up a quantity of ice for Chicago market.

THE G. R. & I. R. R. Co. are putting in new ice houses in their shops at Grand Rapids.

HON. S. C. Medbury and wife of Traverse City are making an extended tour through the Eastern States.

THE programmes are out for an Inter-Denominational Missionary Convention to be held at Petoskey March 2, 3 and 4, next.

THE Pine Lake Iron Company are withholding any further statement until the upper river question is settled.

MRS. James S. Martin has bought of A. E. Mason the lot on Bridge street, in this village, adjoining McLeod's meat market on the north.

PERRY Andrews, of the Occidental at Petoskey intends to place a steam yacht on the bay, and run it for the amusement and pleasure of his guests during the summer season.

ICE.—Charlevoix people have been industrious during the past week filling up their ice for next summer's use. An abundance has been secured, and of an excellent quality.

JAMES S. Martin has a very numerously signed petition to the Township Board, asking them to appoint him bridge tender again next season. Jim is the right man in the right place in that capacity.

ANOTHER PAPER AT CHEBOYGAN.—M. Bunnell, formerly of Bay City, and later an employe of the Petoskey Democrat, is about to start a Democratic paper at Cheboygan, to be called the Cheboygan Democrat.

THE WEATHER.—The sun shines out as generously as it does on a May day, and what little snow remains upon our streets is turning into innumerable rivulets and running riverward. Wagons have taken the place of sleighs, and people interested in tide and wood are begining to look blue. No ice in sight in Lake Michigan.

REGULAR communication of Charlevoix Lodge No. 293 F. & A. M. next Thursday evening, special this Tuesday evening. General attendance desired.

DR. Bowers was called Sunday to attend a 18 year old son of Hon. M. Wood of Advance, who fell upon the ice and broke his breast bone.

WILL Baxter, the eminent Chicago lawyer, and a party of his friends, expect to "summer" at Charlevoix next summer, and have written here to that effect. Other parties from nearly every quarter are striving to engage rooms, quite early.

PARTIES outside are in correspondence with parties here in relation to moving a bowl factory to this place, also a gentleman owning a planing mill in Detroit talks of transferring it to Charlevoix. There is no better opening in Michigan for either of these establishments.

REMEMBER.—The gospel meetings held during the past week have not ceased as was claimed.

—At the M. E. Church Sunday Rev. Mr. Blanchard of Norwood preached two interesting sermons. There was one baptism and two admissions by letter.

THE remarkable rise in paper is causing many newspapers to raise their subscription price. We wish to avoid this, and earnestly request all indebted to this office to settle accounts as soon as possible that we may be able to meet this extra expense forced upon us. Please pay up your subscription.

JUSTICE Duran.—John J. Hogan, of Marion, was arraigned before Justice Miller on Tuesday, on complaint of Robert Markham, for assault and battery. About the only thing proven was that Hogan was a mean cuss on general principles, but Squire Miller didn't consider it within his province to inflict punishment for constitutional meanness, and Hogan was discharged from custody.

THE County seat question waxes warm in Antrim County. Injunction and counter injunctions are flying through the air, and the Treasurer refuses to move his office to Bellaire. The last week's Progress publishes a petition signed by P. M. Russell before his election, and duly witnessed, to the effect that if elected he would not vote for the removal of the county seat. Russell is now in favor of removal and it is alleged against the nearly unanimous sentiment of His Township, Torch Lake.

PERSONAL.—Dr. Geo. W. Crouter returned from Jackson Friday, where he has been attending the Grand Lodge of Knights of Honor.

—Bernard Burns of Marion, returned from Texas last week, whither he went after his sick son, Samuel who returned with him.

—A. Fox has been laid up some time with a sprained ankle.

—I. P. Bartholomew is sojourning in Colorado.

—James Inwood is quite ill at his residence.

JURORS.—The following is a list of Petit Jurors drawn for the March term of the Circuit Court for Charlevoix county:

Charlevoix.—N. A. Balch, John M. Ackert.

Bear Lake.—Frank Jones, John Pierce.

For Governor.

Col. Wm. B. McCreery.

Our Candidate for Governor.

The Sentinel this week hoists the name of Col. Wm. B. McCreery as its candidate for Governor of Michigan.

Col. McCreery is the present state Treasurer and has proven himself one of the most capable and reliable officers the state has ever had.

He has a brilliant record as an officer in the late war of the rebellion, and has a record as a business man which places him in the front rank of the representative men of Michigan.

He is thoroughly identified with the interests of the State, and understands fully her every want.

He is a Republican of the stalwart sort, and is sound upon every principle of true Republicanism.

He has a large and enthusiastic support in southern and central Michigan where he is best known, and we believe him eminently fitted for and deserving of the next nomination for Governor.

Norwood Notes.

When Mr. Ed Stafford killed the fattest ox recently, it was rumored that he exported seriously at his house. The anticipate guest arrived on the 6th inst. and created the excitement usual on the introduction of strangers, but was altogether a boarder for no common character. However, Ed. is happy; he supposes because it's "on their boy."

Miss Belle Meech has the mumps. Poor Belle, how we all pity her, but then she must suffer just the same as a common mortal.

$10 reward for a description of the sneak thief, who stole two pairs of mittens, three pairs of overshoes, and three pairs of leggins at the Junction Thursday evening, the 5th inst.

Mr. Thomas Ellis has removed from Norwood, but his destination is not at present definitely ascertained. It is hoped he may do well wherever he may locate.

We learn that Upper Westgate proposes soon to preserve to South Arm, and keep a four ling house for the ice makers.

Mrs. N. Coye gave the scholars of her Sunday School class, a party and supper at her residence on Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Wm. Phelps who has been seriously ill for several weeks, is thought to be slowly improving.

The Quarterly Meeting of Norwood circuit was held on the 7th and 8th in the Blakely school house. The Presiding Elder, Rev. A. J. Eldred was present, and preached three sermons of great interest and power. The Sunday audience was large, and the occasion one of spiritual fervor and profit.

The Orange Lodge of Eastport, will hold religious service in the Blakely school house, on Friday evening, Feb. 20.

As an evidence of a degree of mortification among the lower order of animals, we might mention a large black cat that makes its home about the barn of F. J. Meech, Esq., and comes around daily at milking time for its rations, by having the hired man, Mr. Phelps, milk in its mouth. If the milker does not wish to bother with it, and takes no notice, the cat will give him a gentle tap on his hand with its paw, or slightly jerk his arm until he turns his attention to it, when it will squirt its mouth to receive the nourishing liquid—full as palatable probably, and more obtained than rats and mice.

VIATOR.

To the Officers of the Historic Society

CHARLEVOIX, Feb. 11.

DR. PIERCE' FUNERAL.—The funeral of the late Dr. Pierce, which occurred last Thursday, was one of the largest ever seen in this city. The Fire Department, the Light Guards, the City Cornet Band, the Knights of Pythias and the Masonic Fraternity all attended in organized bodies, which, with a long line of carriages, made an imposing procession. The Presbyterian Church was packed to its utmost capacity, and quite a good many were unable to obtain even standing room inside. The services at the Church were conducted by Rev. H. Lamont, assisted by Rev. E. W. Miller and Rev. C. L. Barnhart. At the cemetery, after the conclusion of the impressive burial ceremonies of the Knights of Pythias and the Masons, the remains were deposited in the public vault. The processing was reformed, and the family of the deceased escorted back to his late residence, after which the several organizations proceeded to their respective headquarters.—B. H. Pioneer-Magnet.

COMMISSIONER HAYT'S REMOVAL.

The Special Committee's Report—Action of the Board of Indian Commissioners.

A New York special of the 5th to the Chicago Tribune says:

The action of Secretary Schurz in remaining the West from the office of Commissioner of Indian Affairs was approved by the Board of Indian Commissioners yesterday, after the adoption of the report of the committee appointed to investigate the charges made by General Clinton B. Fisk. The report stated the conclusion and the examination of new witnesses that preceded the final action of the Commissioners did not result in any modification of the report as originally drafted by the committee. Mr. A. S. Barnes, Chairman of the Board, is the only member of the committee who has not signed his report.

"On the 6th of our appointment," say the committee, "we visited the Indian Bureau, had a brief interview with the Commissioner, made a hasty inspection of some of the records, returned and reported progress, convinced that a full investigation would require a considerable period of time." The committee say the committee "must generally be divided into two parts—the first concerning the interests of the Indians, and the second the prosecution of an ex-agent who has left the service in consequence of malfeasance in office. As to the first part our investigation has brought the committee to the conclusion that while the offenses of Agent Hart were discovered proper steps were taken by the authorities at Washington to investigate and punish them, and that the system of agencies in nature, to remove the agent from the service, to remedy the abuses existing at the Agency to put the Agency under proper control, and to protect the interests of the Indians. The responsibility for the long delay, such appeared to the committee, in the prosecution of Agent Hart to the one proper to authorities to investigate, cannot be justly charged to the Indian tribes. As to the second part—the prosecution of the agent Hart—we find that a number of affidavits bearing evidence of great importance in the case of Hart were delivered to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs in Washington in the month of May, that in June Hammond was directed to return to Arizona for the purpose, among other things, of completing the testimony; that in the meantime these affidavits remained in the Indian office unnoticed upon; that in July another one of indictment on the part of the ex-Agent was sworn to by Colonel J. Bates, transmitted to Washington by Inspector Hammond, and forwarded to the Department of Justice; that it cannot be learned that Hart; that the affidavits first spoken of remained unnoticed in the Indian office after Inspector Hammond had returned from Arizona in October without bringing any additional testimony; that on the 8th of October the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, the Secretary of the Interior that the Department of Justice be requested to employ an assistant in the District Attorney in Arizona in the prosecution of Hart, which request was promptly forwarded to the Department of Justice; that, however, the affidavits communicated to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs by Inspector Hammond in May, with those in the Indian office until the 10th of January, 1876, when they were sent to the Interior Department for transmission to the Department of Justice, accompanied with a number of letters from Inspector Hammond and various other persons, bearing date in May."

"The delay of action on the part of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the additional testimony he required by him by the inspector that it was necessary to bring them out the facts known to him were supplemented by testimony expected from Inspector Hammond and other sources. It seems to us that this explanation cannot be considered satisfactory, inasmuch as the additional evidence and correspondence transmitted to the Department of Justice, together with the affidavits in January, does not tend to the strengthening of the testimony sufficiently to show why the same should or might not have been transmitted before. We cannot avoid the conclusion that whatever case against the ex-Agent Hart was promptly forwarded to the Department of Justice in the month of January, with regard to the other cases, the evidence against the ex-agent considered sufficient

For President in 1880,

ULYSSES S. GRANT.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

NEW YORK, FEB. 10 1880.

It there is one thing more disagreeable than another it is to have any suspicion that one is excited. A excelling man in the presence of unconcerned listeners is the most self-satisfying people in the world. Nothing could be so ill at this moment. I have mean to clean up, as they say, and place on the millstone of public opinion all worthless persons who be spoken upon on the public platform of experience, and remove using men in places of trust from the broad road to embezzlement, and each women from wrecking their lives and breaking up their families for some passing infatuation, and had best stop that thing. As to Blackmail, the prize Paul Pry are terrified at the idea. It seems to be the general opinion, unfavorably expressed, that without incurring immorality of any kind, it is digesting on general principles for each Parisian of Russian spy systems to be introduced among us. Perfect freedom is the birth right of the American citizens, and if he does, in a moment of weakness, get drunk at unlawful hours, or lose or win a small fortune at faro or draw poker or yield to still more alluring temptations, it is probable that he will personally and privately feel more or less ashamed of himself and it is an outrage to drag his footsteps and record his misdeeds in a black list, which may, moreover, do injustice. And blackmail is an almost certain concomitant of a black list. However virtuous may be the stern promotion of the plan, their acts, smoking employees are also interlocutors some time or another to unmask the information they gather.

One hundred thousand dollars in one donation for sweet charity is a present that promises are got in the habit of making. This is the gift of James Gordon Bennett, of the New York Herald, to the famishing peasantry of Ireland, to say nothing of the surrender for weeks of columns upon columns of the most valuable space in his two papers to advertise in the most effective manner every effort in the cause. It is not the first time Mr Bennett has put his hand unostentatiously in his pocket in a way to relieve the deeds of men famed as philanthropists. When the panic broke out in 1873, he promptly met the situation, headed a subscription list with $30,000, and started his reporters all over the city to report on destitution generally, and particularly with the desired effect of stirring up the benevolent to practical methods of relief. He is thought of by a great many people as a careless man of the world, given to yachting, polo and fashionable dissipation of all kinds, to perhaps an undue degree, but the man who found the man in fact Livingstone, who organized the Arctic expedition, who explored Cuba by proxy during the bitterest times of the raging rebellion there has as much brains as moshaire. Perhaps he could not have founded the Herald, but it is a question whether even his father could have conducted it better along the peculiar course it has followed since its foundation.

Charles C. Waite, founder of the Brevoort House, a hotel much patronized by aristocratic visiting Englishmen, who also built a large annex in the magnificent Windsor Hotel, is dead. He was, although by no means a politician, a prominent member of the Union League Club and several very "toney" and scientific societies and will be missed. Another celebrity of a retiring disposition has passed away at the ripe age of 80 years, namely the genial William Cooper, brother to good old Dr. Peter Cooper, and scarcely second to him in the performance of good deeds. He was a very wealthy man and connected with many of our most influential financial institutions, besides developing a taste for gentlemanly sports which he kept up to the last. He was a good judge of a fine horse, and commodore of the Atlantic Yatch Club for another thing where I was introduced to him three years ago, and got warmly honored at billiards by the tekens. The members turned out in strong force, in many cases at considerable personal inconvenience, to attend his funeral. He was born in a farmhouse [illegible] stood within a few feet of the office writing this letter in.

Legislation is going on among the votes which will probably result upon this year of the famous Day parade and reading the in my which it would have cost to aid the suffering poor of Ireland. It is thought best not to "show on the shamrock" in the customary way with whiskey, while it is now deemed in to assist land with tears. With all their faults, the Irish are warm-hearted and charity is a passion with them. If the parade were always omitted henceforward, and the Orange celebration on July 12th as well, people generally would be better pleased. We shall miss but not regret the southern look of the processionists.

I read the other day in the American Reporter a letter from A recently report on the remarkable success attending the exhibition of Waltham watches at the Sydney Exposition, recalling the amazing success of Waltham abroad from its early days to its day, in the to-make gold time with intelligent people.

Money and nobility, men and silks jostle each other in crowds and fashionable manner at a ladies' stock exchange up town, where the fair dabblers in the waters of small stocks are aided by a young and lovely guide, philosopher and friend to make their investments. While they watch the tapes they can chat on dress making, and ladies, and when the agony is over with business hours, they can cook themselves for their lunch, or sweet consider their winnings while enjoying a bountiful and elegant free lunch. A superb parlor organ tempts skillful fingers to pour out dulcet strains of music, and they have a real jolly sociable time of it. It is decidedly a pleasanter arrangement than the unscrupulously conducted "bucket shops" which fleece the unwary, and which, by the way, the stock Exchange authorities have vowed to suppress and commenced a formidable attack on.

Two colored gentlemen of eccentric habits and some ability have just shuffled off this mortal coil. One who lived all misery was known as "Pop Hunt," and accumulated a large property in real estate and otherwise. He was more or less fortunate in his loves and his successive wives were invariably white women. He was a miser and denied himself every thing but the barest necessaries of life. Perhaps the severe regimen they had to share with him, was the cause of the mortality among the companions of his couch and conscience. The other old gentleman was not so thrifty and was eternally sent to prison for vagrancy and petty offenses. His skill as a whitewasher was recognized as something artistic and extraordinary, and his voice was powerful. His last words were breathed in music as he chanted a hymn and waved his lime-staining brush in a cell in the City Prison.

Lent is approaching fast and the final gaieties of the season are crowded together. The Liederkranz Ball, which is the great social event in the German fashionable world, long looked for and looked back to with fond memories, has come and gone, and among other signs of the day, the gilt-ness of the Theatre Comique, Harrigan and Hart's establishment for the cure of the blues are about to be temporarily dimmed. Their Mulligan Guard Christmas, which has made more side-ache than perhaps anything they ever before produced, is to be with-drawn, and another attraction about which profound secrecy is at present observed, is promised.

RAMBLER.

Congressman Conger of this State will have to be suppressed. He came very near firing the Southern heart again last Friday, by objecting to the phraseology of a petition of an ex-rebel for relief from his political disabilities. The petitioner was John O'Neal of Virginia, who respectfully acknowledged that in April 1861 while still loyal allegiance to the United States, he left the military service of his country and went into the service of the Confederacy, [illegible] that the political disabilities which he thereby incurred be removed. In substance it was a petition for pardon, and perhaps Mr. Conger was a little too particular in wanting him to confess in set terms that he was guilty of treason. But Mr. Conger disturbed the Confederate hornets' nest, and several of the inmates were out in an instant to "repel with scorn" the indignity, and all that side of the House was in terrible agony of suspense for a few minutes. But the padlock holders succeeded in holding back their tongues. There is pretty good ground for thinking that letting them loose was all that Mr. Conger was after. There will be new business for Mr. Bergh soon, if our Port Huron member does not restrain his disposition to torture the inmates of the Democratic menagerie.

No Secretary of the Treasury, nor United States Senator, was ever elected President.

An Associated Press telegram says that the New York Times of yesterday, editorially said: "A near personal and political friend of Ex-President Grant, who doubtless knows whereof he speaks, authorizes the following as a correct statement of the General's position with reference to the Presidency. He says that Gen. Grant is not now nor has he ever been a candidate for the Presidential nomination, but should the Republican National Convention nominate him in the same manner as any other candidate would be nominated, he would deem it his duty to the country and his party to accept. Travelling abroad, he was a stranger to the contest now going on for the Presidential nomination, and has written no letter on the subject to any person; and all assertions to the contrary are without foundation in fact.

The Lansing Republican pertinently remarks: "The Detroit Evening News, which thinks Fitz John Porter a much-abused patriot, has now turned its mud batteries on Gen. Grant, and is a rehashing the old exploded stories of his drunkenness during the rebellion. A imitation of Fitz John Porter, who ought to have stretched hemp, and a condemnation of Gen. Grant, who did more to put down the rebellion than any other Union General, show a coppery inward sentiment in the cerebellum of the News.

For the second time a court martial has found Major Reno guilty of drunkenness and conduct unbecoming an officer, and for the second time sentence of dismissal from the service has been pronounced against him. The first time the President disapproved of the sentence, and commuted it to suspension for a brief time. This time the President has approved the Sentence and Reno is no longer a soldier.

The Poughkeepsie Eagle, an able Republican journal of eastern New York, save of the situation in that State, in an article urging that representative Republicans shall be sent to the State Convention:

"We have no doubt that the first choice of a majority will be Grant, and the second Blaine, and though we should very much prefer to see the order reversed, we must admit that this is likely to be altered with the desire of the mass of the party."

The Springfield Republican sees a possible President in Vice President Wheeler. It says: "Wheeler is identified with the Hayes administration, and that would help him with the people. He would stand as good a chance of carrying New York State as any other candidate; perhaps a better chance. He has had no boom, which is in his favor, and his record throughout is good."

A Washington dispatch to the Philadelphia Bulletin says that senator Ferry is being very prominently mentioned among politicians about the National Capital for the Vice Presidency. His nomination would delight the people of Michigan; and if an Eastern man is nominated for President, the selection of Mr. Ferry for the second place on the ticket is by no means improbable.

Many newspapers are raising their price lists, on account of the advance in paper. The Chicago Times says that the difference in cost of that paper will be $100,000 per year, and has advanced the price of the daily to $14 per year, and 6 cents per single copy. The Chicago Tribune retains its old price, but will curtail expenses by dropping its supplements.

The Republican National Convention will consist of 604 delegates. A majority (303) will be necessary to nominate a candidate. The Democratic National Convention will have the same number of delegates, but the successful candidate will have to receive a two-thirds vote, unless they change their old rule.

When Gen. Grant was in Florida, an effort was made to drive off the poor negroes who were crowding around him when he said, in his quiet way: "Let them alone; wherever I am they may come." The general has first and last, uttered many striking sayings, but none better and more truly suggested than this.

According to the latest reports, there is scarcely a county in Ireland in which extreme privation does not exist in some portion, and the lord mayor of Dublin has expressed the fear that unless prompt assistance be rendered, tens of thousands of people must die of starvation.

Senator Conkling is not and will not be a candidate for President. It was by no choice or wish of his that he was named in 1876, and he is emphatic now. His own inflexible determination settles the question.—Albany Journal.

The Chicago Inter Ocean proposes Grant and Blaine for the Republican Presidential ticket. Those two men harnessed together on the same ticket, would make a strong team.

The Republican State Central Committee meets in Detroit on the 19th, to determine the time and place for holding a State Convention to elect delegates to the National Convention in Chicago.

Grant is 58 years old; Sherman, 57; Blaine, 50, and Garfield, 49.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

XLVIth Congress.

In the Senate on the 3d Mr. Bayard, from the Finance Committee, reported the Warner Silver bill adversely, and Mr. Beck stated that the report was not unanimous and the minority hoped to be heard in support of the bill at some future time. The bill was placed on the calendar. A resolution was submitted to the effect that the Senate the Board with profound sorrow of the death of Representative Clark, of Iowa, and, after remarks by Messrs. of Iowa, and Hereford, the resolution was agreed to. Some time the message of the House was received in Pennoyer and Hilton, Judiciary Committee, providing that no person shall serve on a petit jury in any United States court more than three weeks during any one year, was passed. Mr. Cockrell (Mo.) introduced a bill declaring confederate cruin bonds granted conditionally to certain railroads in consideration of certain services to the United States and bearing interest in lieu of coupons. The bill was referred to the Committee on the Whole. The Senate then went into executive session and soon after adjourned.

A RESOLUTION was adopted in the Senate on the 4th directing the Secretary of the Treasury to communicate to the Senate the reasons for the order issued by the Department to Collectors of Customs, dated December 15, 1878, directing them, in all cases of invoices of wool, to require the affidavit of the owner, agent or consignee, to be attached to the invoice, stating that the wool has been actually purchased by him, and that no part of the consideration for the purchase has been returned to him, directly or indirectly, by any person, company or corporation. Mr. Kirkwood introduced a bill to provide for the payment of additional bounty to the soldiers of the army of the United States during the war of the rebellion. The bill authorizing the conversion of National Gold Banks into National Banks was passed. A joint resolution was adopted in the House on the 4th appropriating $10,000 to enable the Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries to participate in the United States at the International Fishery Exhibition in Berlin in April next.

The bill to amend the act to provide for coining the trade and exchange dollars, approved March 3, 1876, was taken up in the Senate on the 5th, and, on motion of Mr. Pendleton, a substitute, reported by the Finance Committee, was considered instead and passed. The bill, as passed, provides, among other things, for the free transportation of mail matter weighing one ounce or less, and for commencing on and after June 1, 1880, and that the redemption in silver having ceased in the United States shall be taken within two weeks from that date, and appropriates $250,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to pay immediately the additional sum here required by this act. Adjourned to the 8th. The Senate bill for the conversion of National Gold Bonds was passed in the House, and bills were introduced and referred—making silver certificates receivable at the United States Treasury for the redemption of outstanding notes of the issue of the National Banks; relating to the authority of the Treasury to pay current interest on all registered bonds presented for payment without requiring them to be stamped; to prevent the assignment of certificates of deposit issued by the Treasurer or any of the assistants or depositaries of the United States; providing that no person shall serve on a petit jury in any United States court more than three weeks during any one year, was passed. Mr. Cox (Miss.) introduced a bill declaring confederate cruin bonds granted conditionally to certain railroads in consideration of certain services to the United States and bearing interest in lieu of coupons. The bill was referred to the Committee of the Whole. The Senate then went into executive session and soon after adjourned.

Personal and Political.

THE Connecticut Republican State Convention for electing delegates to the National Convention has been called to meet at New Haven, April 7. The New Jersey Convention will be held on the 6th of May.

PRESIDENT HAYES on the 3d nominated James Q. Howard, of Columbus, Ohio, to be Appraiser of the Port of New York.

ACCORDING to a Washington special of the 3d to the Chicago Evening Journal the first rendition of the alleged "confession" of General J. H. Hammond was altogether wrong. General Hammond says that he at first thought the letter was counterfeit, because it did not appear in his press copy-book. Afterwards he recollected writing it, but, upon reading it over, he observed certain omissions and laid it aside and wrote another one. That first and imperfect letter he supposed was destroyed at the time, as it was never handed by him to Hart, the agent to whom it was addressed. This discarded letter fell into Hart's hands who placed it in the hands of General Fisk. The dispatch adds: "General Hammond's friends here have the strongest faith in his integrity and honesty, and believe that he will come out of the present investigation with a clear record."

THE Republican State Convention of Pennsylvania was held at Harrisburg on the 4th. Delegates-at-Large to the National Republican Convention were chosen and instructed, by a vote of 120 to 113, to vote for U. S. Grant, and to cast their votes as a unit. John A. Lemon was nominated for Auditor-General; Hon. Henry Greene, for Judge of the Supreme Court, and E. L. Benson and Henry W. Oliver, for Electors-at-Large. Resolutions were adopted, deprecating further national legislation, advocating continued adherence to the tariff policy of the last twenty years; opposing the establishment of new tariffs through commercial treaties; reaffirming adherence to the following principles: the Union of the States, protection to person and property in every portion of the country, the strict performance of all obligations, security and freedom of thought, speech and press, a free and pure ballot, honesty in elections, and an honest count of ballots; congratulating the Maine Republicans on their late victory; deprecating the growing tendency to set aside elections on technicality and informalities; etc., etc.

THE Massachusetts Republican State Convention to choose delegates-at-large to the National convention is to meet at Worcester on the 15th of April.

GOVERNOR DAVIS, of Maine, delivered a lengthy but very good message before the State Legislature on the 5th. Referring to the action of ex-Governor Garcelon, he characterized it as a great public wrong, which should receive the condemnation of all honest citizens. He recommends a thorough revision of the modes of ascertaining and assessing taxes, and thinks the present method of taking the returns of elections, and congratulates the people on the maintenance of law and order during the late protracted contest at the State Capital.

ADOLPHE E. BORIE, ex-Secretary of the Navy, died in Philadelphia, on the 4th, aged seventy-seven years. He had been in ill-health for a long time.

AT NEW ORLEANS on the 5th J. N. Galtatzer was consecrated Episcopal Bishop of Louisiana.

THE United States Senate, in executive session on the 6th, rejected, by a vote of 45 to 9, the nomination of John M. Morton to be Collector of Internal Revenue for the First District of California.

THE record of the Rencontri-martial was presented at the Cabinet meeting in Washington on the 5th, and, after a short discussion, it was decided that the sentence of dismissal from the army should be approved.

THE Board of Indian Commissioners, at their session in New York on the 5th accepted the report of the Special Committee appointed to investigate the charges against ex-Commissioner Hast, and adopted a resolution approving the action of the Secretary of the Interior in removing him from the office of Commissioner of Indian Affairs.

THE Tennessee Republican State Convention to nominate candidates for State officers and appoint delegates to the National Convention will meet at Nashville on the 5th of May.

Foreign.

THE proprietor of the New York Herald has given $10,000 for the relief of the Famine in Ireland. In announcing this donation the Herald, of the 4th says: "The multitude of people who are starving are relatives of our own citizens, and it would be a disgrace to look on coldly while they perish by the most piteous of all deaths." It engages to see that this donation and every dollar added thereto goes to the relief of actual want.

THE Secretary of War has recently submitted a report to Congress, from which it appears that the organized strength of the militia force of the different States consists of 745 general officers, 1,965 regimental, field and staff officers, 8,198 company officers and 117,397 non-commissioned officers, musicians and privates. The unorganized force of a number of men available for military duty is put down at 6,816,788.

A FEW mornings ago ten Chinamen were burned to death in a San Francisco washhouse. They were all on the first floor of the burning building, and could have escaped if they had not been stupefied by opium.

A SEVERE cabin near Columbia, S. C., was burned a few nights ago, and two men, a woman and six children perished in the flames.

FIFTY-FOUR colored emigrants from the South arrived at Indianapolis on the 8th.

GENERAL ADAMS and party arrived at Los Pinos on the 5th, and Captain Jack and Schonchin left immediately thereafter for Grand River, at which point the White River Indians were said to be encamped, for the purpose of making another attempt to secure the surrender of the twelve guilty Utes. Jack made no promises and would set no time for his return, but said he would do his best to bring about the surrender of those wanted.

A RAILWAY collision occurred at Argentueil, France, on the 4th, and seven persons were killed and over forty others more or less seriously injured.

HEAVY snows have recently fallen in the mountains of Afghanistan, and military operations are entirely suspended.

ARMY twenty murders men entered the dwelling of a family named Donnelly, at Lucan, Ont., on the night of the 3d, and murdered the father, mother, one son and a niece, and then set fire to the premises. The neighborhood had suffered severely from thieves and incendiaries, and as the Donnellys were supposed to be the guilty parties, the wrath of the mob fell on them. A boy named Connors, belonging to the village, was staying in the house over night. When the attack was made he crept under the bed without being discovered. When the murders were committed, the house fired, and the gang decamped, the boy escaped from his hiding-place, started for the village and informed the authorities. Another son, residing about three miles from the homestead, was called to his door about the same hour and shot dead.

THE reception to General Grant at the Vice Royal Palace, Havana, on the night of the 3d, is said to have been a splendidly arranged affair, for which the Captain-General and many resident and foreign officials were present. The palace was elegantly decorated throughout. Mr. Rankin told one of the burglars that he recognized him by his voice. The burglar, in reply, assumed that he was a woman. "Come to think of it," said Mr. Rankin as a measure of safety for another member of the gang interfered.

A RECENT special from South Charleston, Ohio, to the Cincinnati Gazette says: John Carpenter, aged seventy-six, and his sister Hulda, aged seventy-seven accidentally. He was standing six feet from her in the kitchen, in the presence of another sister, when he playfully pointed a pistol at her, demanding her money or her life. She answered, "Neither," when the pistol went off and the ball pierced her heart. The boy said he did not know it was loaded.

ADVICES received at Denver on the 5th from Las Pinos state that on the night a runner arrived at the agency with a message from Jack to General Adams' effect that thirteen days must elapse before his return. From this it was inferred that Douglass had information of Adams' coming, and left for his former camp on Grand River. Chief Shawano had accepted the invitation of General Adams to accompany him to Washington. Shawano favors the policy of Secretary Schurz—that the Indians must settle down on 90 acres and go to work. RELIGIOUS AND EDUCATIONAL.

—Twenty years ago the Presbyterian Church of Geneseo, N. Y., split in twain. Recently the two bodies reunited.

—Bishop Smith, of Kentucky, the Presiding Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church, gives some interesting particulars concerning his predecessors in that office. Bishop White was Presiding Bishop for forty-six years, and took order for twenty-nine consecrations; Bishop Griswold seven years, taking order nine times; Bishop Chase for nine years, taking order fifteen times; Bishop Brownell thirteen years, taking order nineteen times; Bishop Hopkins three years, taking order eleven times, and the writer ten years, taking order thirty-nine times.

—The English Presbyterians are greatly concerned over the heavy losses they are subject to every year. A recent writer estimates the loss at two thousand a year. He adds: "It is an alarming confession for a church to make, which numbers only some fifty thousand members; and there is as an annual leakage of a twenty-fifth part of the whole body. The above statement concerns only the communion-roll of the churches. What proportion of our adherents, who form the bulk of our congregations, are similarly lost to us year by year we have no accurate means of knowing."

—It having been stated that the revised edition of the New Testament, soon to appear, will be, as far as authorized matters to cover the expenses of revision, thereby is made on authority to say that the entire profits of the English revisers have been assumed by the University Presses, in return for the latter having the privilege of publishing the issue. The expenses of the American revisers are paid by voluntary subscriptions, and none of the revisers expect any compensation. Therefore, it will be unnecessary to raise the price of the received edition for the reimbursement of the revisers. There will be no copyright of the book in this country.

—It troubles Colonel Ingersoll that ten less than 50,000,000 of the people's money goes every year to maintain the preachers; albeit, the Colonel himself is said to make a round $20,000 a year spouting his entire preaching. To the United Baptist replies that the lawyers annually cost the people about $70,000,000, and the criminals $25,000,000, and intolerating liquors $975,000,000. "If," adds the Baptist, "Colonel Ingersoll regards the preachers merely as a luxury, it seems to us he ought to have the candor to admit that they are a good deal less costly and do a good deal less harm than the luxury of lawyers, criminals and strong drink."

—That teachers do not sufficiently discuss practical school room questions in their meetings is the complaint of the Journal of Education. It mentions as some of the subjects which they would talk about whether there is the feasible way of stopping the enormous change of teachers which occurs every spring, and whether any better method which has grown up of late years and is fostered by the Normal School, is not killing such teachers the acquisition of learning; whether the new craze teaching knees of touching are not only blinding the people as to his lack of things, but whether the period of the beautiful reading through which most children go cannot be avoided.

—The Archdeacon of Meehlin's definition of Papal infallibility, as given in his defense of the Belgian Bishops against the charge of disobedience to the Pope in the ecclesiastical controversy, is as follows: "Infallibility is not what is alleged by the editors or certain papers, the mandates of certain Parliaments, the Professors of certain universities, and sometimes also by lawyers and soldiers. No, for the Pope is not infallible when he expresses only his own opinion; but he is infallible when, as the head of the Church, he defines truths contained in the deposit of faith by revelation, the Scripture and tradition. The Pope is not infallible when he judges purely personal questions, but he is so when he judges doctrinal questions affecting faith and morals—that is to say, revealed truth or revealed law, the Pope being infallible only when he rests on the testimony of the God of revelation. The Pope is not infallible when he treats as a private doctor questions even of doctrine; but when he judges by virtue of his apostolic authority that a doctrine affecting revealed truth and revealed law ought to be held by the Universal Church."

The last rays of the setting sun were flooding the earth with a golden glow, as in Mr. Seagrave's private observatory, the telescope was turned toward that part of the sky where Jupiter was pursuing his westward course, though as yet invisible to the naked eye. Our giant brother made a lovely picture on his back-ground with brilliant with the light of parting day, the disc looking like a circle of white cloud marked with shadowy belts. As the twilight faded, and darkness began to set in, the disc of Jupiter grew larger, became a sphere of golden hue, greatly flattened at the poles, and glittered with a brilliant purple belt around the equator, and with belts of softer tone near the poles. Ten may not equal this panoramic picture of this grand planet as it hung projected from the heavens, a huge golden ball, large as the full moon, and marked with wavy belts harmoniously inked, while two moons far apart on the right, and two close together on the left, added to the completeness of the scene.

The telescope was next turned toward Saturn, and a flow of surpassing beauty enhanced the eye, for the rings are opening and exulting the planet in their concentric circles of golden light. There is no object in the heavens, with the exception of the sun, that so impresses the beholder as the telescopic Saturn. An artist might outline its form, but the effects of a life-time could never imprison on canvas the clearness, softness and brilliancy of the celestial coloring. The faint and dimly-colored star that shines in our nightly firmament undergoes a wondrous transformation in the far-seeing eye of the instrument that annihilates distance, as in the entrancing view that rewarded our observation. The planet, with its shadowy bands, was sharply and clearly defined, and the rings encompassed the great sphere like gemdrons to ward off danger. The definition was so fine, and the atmosphere so still, that the opening between the inner and outer ring, the dark ring, the shadow of the planet on the ring, and the shadow of the rings on the planet, were easily discerned, while the sweep of the planet's orb right and one on the left, completed the brilliant sight. Words may describe the elements of the scene, but they can give no idea of the feelings of awe and amazement, the keen enjoyment of the magnificent panorama, the deep impression of infinite wisdom and power inspired by the view. Saturn, though many times my delight in mass and volume, far surpasses his gigantic brother in the magnificence of his system, and in the superb sight afforded by his rings. Mars was a mere point of light in the movements of his complex and incomprehensible structure.

Mercury was the object of observation, but his lesser glory paled after the brilliant show made by his Britannic Majesty, a globe of reddish light in glitbous phase appeared upon the field of view, and nothing more. He is traveling from us, and too far away to be a matter of telescopic interest. Faint markings on his surface gave indication of the wonderful continents, islands and seas that engineered astronomers have mapped much his surface. His tiny moons have become invisible, and even the sun will not be taken as a matter of course. Long gathered statistics about them, once, and found that out of a thousand sons of ministers, there were very few who did not grow up useful and industrious men.

"But what is your story?" I asked, setting back in my seat.

"Why," said he, "it begins with a class-supper in Boston, a few years ago. A number of old college friends had gathered in the evening for their annual reunion. Among them was the rich merchant, J. E. Williston—perhaps you have heard of him—and a poor pastor of a country church in Elmbank village, out in Western Massachusetts, whose name was Blake. A good deal of the talk had died, and the dozen or so elderly men who were left felt more tender than ever toward each other, as they thought of the bright old days at Harvard, and how soon no one would be left on earth who shared in that happy time.

"The dishes came and went, the lights glowed brightly, and at last the friends grew quite gay. But the elder feeling I have spoken of would come uppermost, now and then; and in one of these musing moments Williston's eye was attracted by something glistening about the coat which his friend Blake, who sat next to him, had on.

"He looked closer, and saw that the black cloth of which every coat was made had been worn so thin and smooth that it was very shiny.

"Well, Blake," said he, suddenly, taking hold of his friend's arm carefully (which he somehow hadn't thought of doing before), "how has the world gone with you, lately?"

"Blake had a naturally sad and thoughtful face; but he looked around quickly, with a warm smile.

"No need to ask," he said, laughingly. "You can read the whole story on my back. This old coat is a sort of ledger-sheet, which shows my financial condition to a T."

"Then he spoke more seriously, adding: "It is a pretty hard life, Williston, that of a country parson. I don't complain of my lot, though sometimes I'm distressed for my family. The fact is, this coat I've got on is nearly as much of my profession to appear in; but I'm going to send my boy Sam to Harvard this year, and must pinch here and there to do it. I really ought to be thankful, though, that I can get such advantages for him; for I've had my full share of personal appearance and convenience."

"Don't you give a thought to your coat, old fellow," returned Williston. "Nobody who knows you will ever imagine that the heart inside of it is threadbare, however the garment may look."

"Blake was pleased with this kindly expression, and both men, after that exchange of confidence, felt happier. But, among the various incidents of the evening, this one closely passed out of the minister's mind for the next day, when he started for Elmbank.

"Scarcely as his return was, however, something meant for him took part of his destination before him. It was a letter. Taking it up, he broke open the envelope, and found inside a few words from Williston, with a check for five hundred dollars to defray the first year's college expenses of his old classmate's son.

"You are a stranger to me, sir," said my traveling-companion, at this point; "but I think you will appreciate the feeling with which poor Mr. Blake stood in his bare and dingy study in the old farm parsonage, holding that letter in his hand, and lifting his faithful eyes in thankfulness to God."

"Yes," I replied. "Williston did feel the right thing to do. And how was it? Did the son show that he deserved the help?"

My acquaintance looked away from me at the rich country through which we were passing. Then he said:

"Sam Blake was a good-natured, obedient fellow enough, and was greatly pleased to have the expense of his first college year taken off his father's shoulders; but his sense of duty didn't go very far. The Rev. Mr. Blake bought a new coat, and Sam entered Harvard that fall, and there matters stopped for a while.

"A freshman has a great deal to learn, as you know; but I think the chief thing Sam learned that term was the great difference there is between Harvard and a little village like Elmbank, and the great difficulty of working and playing at the same time.

"In the best society meetings to attend, and rooms of his own, with a chum, where a good deal of entertaining was done by himself and his friends. And then there was base-ball, into the excitement of which Sam entered with the honor of the class that he should enter actively, on account of his young legs, wonderful wind and ground fielding.

"He could not refuse to go to the theater sometimes with his richer companions. Sam took a natural interest in the society of young ladies, too, and had to give up some time to its cultivation. He also thought a moderate amount of practice in the gymnasium was desirable to prevent his health from suffering, and he joined a department of study. So, on the whole, the actual work that he did in the college course was not very extensive.

"This didn't seem to have any bad effect till well along in the winter, when the habit of shirking work had grown so strong, without his noticing it, that he fell easily into reading novels when he ought to have been in the recitation-room. Gymnasium, theater, billiards, smoking—and I am afraid I must say a little drinking—fritted away his time.

"He really was very much surprised when he had got up to his last examination, the postman brought him a note from Mr. Williston—an 'admonition.'

"He dropped the pipe he was just lighting and bolted off to recitation. But he 'doubled' immediately and that afternoon 'ran.'

"He soon began to make light of the warning and did himself or his credit in no way. Though he managed to squeeze through the examinations at the end of the freshman year, he came out far down toward the foot of his class.

"He wasn't quite contented with himself and thought he would try to do better the next year. But during the journey home he recovered his usual spirits.

"When he walked up the village towards the parsonage farm, he was thinking that now he was a sophomore now—he would buy the knottiest and biggest-headed cane in Cambridge when he should go back there. And what do you suppose was the first sight that met him at home?

"Sam was his father out in the field, digging for potatoes, his coat off, and his spectacles face perspiring!

"The sight struck shame into the boy. He vaulted the fence, and running up with hardly a pause for greeting, cried:

"O, father! let me do that! I don't like to see you at such work."

"Mr. Blake stopped and looked earnestly, and rather sadly at him.

"Well, Sam, I think that's about as good a "How-do-you-do?" as you could have offered me. There's something right about you after all."

"It hadn't occurred to Sam that there was any doubt on that point before. He blushed and laughed.

"Where's the hired man?'

"I've discharged him. I can't afford one at present, my son,' was the answer.

"Sam was rather puzzled, and began to reflect.

"They went into the house, and there, when the minister reappeared after making his toilet, his son noticed that he wore with his richer parishioners. Sam took a natural interest in the society of young ladies, too, and had to give up some time to its cultivation. He also thought a moderate amount of practice in the gymnasium was desirable to prevent his health from suffering, and he joined a department of study. So, on the whole, the actual work that he did in the college course was not very extensive.

"They went into the house, and there, when the minister reappeared after making his toilet, his son noticed that he wore with his richer parishioners. At this he was more than ever astonished.

"The supper, also, notwithstanding that it was the first night of the prodigal's return, was very meager. Not a single extra luxury was on the table, and Sam observed that his father and mother took no sugar nor butter. His own appetite began to fail at seeing this, and the question was sharpened accordingly. He was now aware that his father looked very thin, as well as sad. Suddenly he laid down his knife, and exclaimed to his sister Katy—

"Sis, what does all this mean?—this going without the hired man and starving yourselves?"

"He sister looked at him, then glanced at Mr. Blake and her mother, and seemed for a moment at a loss for an answer.

"I thought,' said Sam, petulantly, 'that Williston's money was going to make it easy for you, father; and here the whole is going on five times worse than ever.'

"I don't own my friend Williston's money,' said the minister, quietly.

"Of course not. But the five hundred dol'——Sam stopped abruptly on an entreating gesture from his sister.

"The subject was not resumed. But before he went to bed, Sam obtained an interview with his sister alone. He felt, secretly, that he was responsible for the depression and trouble which seemed to fill the household, but that only made him speak more impetuously. 'Now, sis,' he began, 'can I get two words of sense out of you?'

"Not until you ask politely,' she replied.

"Well, then, please tell me what the mystery is.'

"It oughtn't to be a mystery to you, Sam, that you haven't done well at college. Papa is terribly disappointed.'

"I don't see why he should commit suicide, if he is,' Sam retorted. 'I haven't hurt him much this year.'

"Oh, yes, you have. Do you know you actually said the new coat?'

"Why?' Sam frowned.

"Because he's been trying every way to save money since he began to get reports of how you were casting your time.'

"What for?' asked Sam, though he began to suspect.

"Well, he—boys should I know? Don't you see? He's ashamed to have had that money from his old classmate, and he's nearly saved enough, and he's going to pay it all back. There, I was to keep it secret, and now I've told you!' And his sister burst into tears. 'You've nearly broken his heart, Sam—poor papa!'

"The next day Mr. Blake's son went off directly after breakfast, and was not seen again till afternoon.

"Coming back, he overtook his father returning from the post-office.

"I know all about it!' he exclaimed, in his earnestness. 'Katy told me last night. I wish, though, you'd held on to the new coat a while.'

"Why?' asked Mr. Blake, imperturbably.

"Because,' said Sam, 'I'm going to pay you back my way now. I've been to-day and hired out for the season to Farmer Hedgehairton. You won't send me money to Williston, will you, father?'

"You are too late,' was the minister's answer. 'I've just mailed the letter to him.'

"In fact, next day the kind merchant's eyes were dimmed as he read these words:

"DEAR WILLISTON—My boy—I almost weaken my heart to say so—has proved worthy of your kindness. I have decided to retain the sum which you sent me for him last year, and you will not need another remittance.

"Here I interrupted the narrative.

"Doesn't this story prove what I said at the beginning?" I asked.

"No, sir; that is not the end of it. Sam went down to Boston in the autumn with a few dollars of earnings in his pocket. He had decided to give up college, and so applied to Mr. Williston for a clerkship.

"He told him—

"I proved myself unworthy, as my father said. Now give me a chance to show myself worthy.'

"Williston gave him a position, and he worked there two years. Then an opportunity offered to go West and take a partnership in—what do you suppose? A clothing business! Sam jumped at it; and you may believe he sent his father, next Christmas, the finest coat that country could produce.

"I am a well-to-do man now, sir,' continued my acquaintance, suddenly speaking in the first person, 'and when he got to Chicago. If you will come to my establishment, I will show you my father, the minister's old shiny coat, which I preserve because it was the beginning of my fortune, and made a man of me.'

"Then," I exclaimed, taking him by the hand, "it is yourself you have been talking about all this time! You are!"

"Sam," concluded my new friend, nodding and smiling—S. T. Lothrop, in Youths' Companion.

A Returned Deadbeader Tells a Little Story.

"Deadwood," said the stranger, putting down his half-eater slice of lemon pie and taking a long pull at the milk, "I was there when the first rush was made for the hills. Rather a rough crowd, the first lot, you bet; more wholesome now. When I got there I was dead-broke—didn't have a dollar, didn't have a revolver, which a man'll often need out there worse'n a meal's vittles. I was prob'ly the only man in the hills who didn't carry firearms, an' I was some lonesome, I tell you. The only weapon I had—I'm a blacksmith—was a rasp, a heavy file, you know, 'bout eighteen inches long, which I carried down my back, the handle in easy reach just below my coat collar. Gradd'reased like the Arkansaw man carries his bowie-knife. I'm not exactly a temperance man, I just don't drink an' don't meddle with any other man's drinkin' that's all. One day—I locate a claim in Deadwood gulch more'n a week—I was settin' in a 'loon—only place a man kin set to see any society—when a feller come in, a reg'lar hustler, with his can full and a cigar over. Had a revolver on each side of his belt, an' looked vicious. Nothin' mean about him though. Ast me to drink. 'You any, thank you,' see I. 'Not drink with me! Me! Bill Feathergill! When I ast a tender-foot to drink, I expect him to prance right up, an' no monkeyin'! You hear me!'

"Well, when his hand went down for his revolver, I whipped out my old file quicker'n lightnin', an' swiped him one right across the face. When he fell I thought I'd killed him, an' the 'sloon fillin' up with miners, I sorter skinned out, not knowin' what might happen. Forty-seven a clog in a red shirt come up to me. See he, 'You the man as ke-urved Bill Feathergill? 'Cos, if so be as you are, if you don't want, ev'ry man in the hills is clean ag'in you, don't you try to hide yourself—the boys is a-askin' for you now.'

"It struck me that my friend had the idee, so I waltzed back and went up a'l'down before that p'leon for right three hours. I'm found out Bill wasn't dead an' was bad nuckuse, but it wouldn't do to let down. Party seem I see my man a-shoulin' for me. His face had been patched up till it looked like the closing-out display of a retail dry-goods store. There was so little countenance exposed that I couldn't guess what in was a-sinin' at, so I brought my hand back of my collar an' grabbed my file.

"'Hold on, there; hold on,' sez he, 'gimme yer hand, fin friendly. I've got nothin' agin you, not a thing, but—you'll pardon my curiosity—what sort of a feel weapon was that, stranger?'"—Indianapolis Journal.

—To destroy burrs in wool, M. Rendu Lehman recommends, first, that the wool be thoroughly dried before it is freed from the grease; second, that the wool be passed beneath heavy rollers, so that the burrs are crushed, and, third, that the wool be then treated in the usual way.

—According to the New York Medical Journal Dr. Thomas A. Emmet, in his recent work on the "Principles and Practice of Gynecology," recommends the fat of pork, properly prepared, as a substitute for cod liver oil. A portion of the fat, free from tissa, is boiled slowly (the water being often changed) until the meat is thoroughly cooked. To be eaten cold in the form of sandwiches.

—Lamarre has stated, in a communication to the French Academy of Sciences, that at the beginning of a violent storm he saw small tufts of light at the end of the steel ribs of his umbrella, and heard at the same time a sort of humming sound. When he brought his hand near one of the luminous points he received a slight shock, and the light then disappeared. This electrical display is rather exceptional.

—The long-lost calculating machine has been recovered. Leibnitz invented and constructed it during his stay in Paris in 1672. It could add, substract, divide and multiply. As it was the wonder of the time. This machine became the property of the Hanover Public Library, but long ago disappeared from among its treasures. All that was known about its disappearance was that it had once been sent to an instrument maker at Gottingen to be repaired. It has now turned up again in the Gottingen Library.

—Dr. J. M. Fothergill gives this serious description of the advance of gout from generation to generation: The consequences of the afflux of wealth in Britain have become very common in the third generation of the successful merchant. The grandfather lived well and died old, without ever having had a touch of gout, unless it was in the muscular pains he called "rheumatics." The father lived well, probably knew nothing of doctors, swore at his rheumatism occasionally, had winter bronchitis, and died of aortic disease. The present representative of the family has attack of articulate gout, a great toe that occupies a good deal of his attention, and thickened knuckles—indeed, a full-blown gout.

—A patent lawyer residing in Pittsburgh, Pa., has invented and patented a machine called the "Automatic Telephone Exchange," and, if it does all its owner claims, the utility and importance of the telephone to the public and private service will be enhanced to the last degree. The telephone system as it now exists comprises a main or central office, from which radiate wires to all the subscribers' offices. When a subscriber wants to talk to another he must be connected through the central office. The Automatic Telephone Exchange remedies the delays caused thereby by giving the subscribers themselves full and direct control of the central office switch-board in such a manner that each can, from his office or the other end of his line at the central office to be placed in contact with any other line of the exchange. This is done at once without any delay or the assistance of an operator at the central office. Besides, all communications are strictly private and audible only to the person for whom they are intended, and while two or three are talking it will be impossible for another to interrupt them in any shape.

The English journals give the following synopsis of a paper read by Robert Mallet, F. R. S., at the first meeting of the present session of the Geological Society, London: According to the latest hypothesis as to the quantity of water on the globe, its presence if evenly distributed would be equal to a barometric pressure of 204.7 atmospheres. Accordingly, water, when in first began to condense on the face of the globe, would condense at a much higher temperature than the present boiling point, under ordinary circumstances. The first drops of water formed on the cooling surface of the globe may not improbably have been at the temperature of molten iron. As the water was precipitated, condensation of the rema

"Once more into the breech dear friends once more." Really, never a very newsy article now-a-days, but thanks, Miss Idella M. Cole has been in town visiting with friends. Miss Cole has been attending the Charlevoix school and speaks with praise of both teachers and school.

Laurens Cole wishes to inform the public, he is ready to translate all ancient writers and dead languages, and receive a specimen of rowing valentines. Over $50 a week.

The Rev. Thomas Ellis has been appointed pastor of the M. E. church of this place, and will preach at different points in the South Arm circuit. He will commence his pastoral work about the first of March. As Ellis is a young man, and as we were school mates in the old district school house, and the people general love to hear a sermon, Ellis on their pay for.

Quarterly meeting with the M. E. church will be held on the 28th and 29th of February, at the Hipp school house. The Presiding Elder will be present, and Sunday evening will preach at the Lansway school house. We hope there will be a good turn out, such as may be remembered by the Elder on account of good order on his first visit to South Arm.

We are advised of several sales and exchanges of real estate in our Township, and as a few are looking forward to spring, with expectant hope that our population will be quite materially augmented by an influx of immigration as has not been ever before been known in these parts. Most assuredly "mistakes" of all "Seasons and Climates" can do better than to locate in Northern Michigan. Do they seek good farming lands? they can find it here in great abundance. Is their health injured by the damp unwholesome atmosphere of their Chicago lots? any place on the continent of America they can find a panacea in our climate which is sufficient to make them forget they were ever ailing. It will loosen the tightening grip of age, and set the sluggish blood to coursing with redoubled celerity through their veins.

At present there is a dearth of local news. Our peaceful neighborhood is enjoying a good quiet.

Mr. Horton, from whom Horton Bay takes name, has just returned from a six weeks visit to friends in Elk Rapids. The old man is nearly 80 years of age, and his children, grand children, and great grand children number 80 or so. Unfortunately, on his way from church on Sunday, the sole he had and injured his hip and wrist.

From Boyne Falls.

There was a donation supper at the 6th at the Hotel, for the benefit of Rev Swem. Pastor of the M. E. Church in this circuit, which was by no means a failure, for, although it was not largely attended, the receipts were as large as could be expected. The tables were loaded with goodies and any amount of oysters. We noticed two very large cakes very nicely coated with sugar and turned with mottoes and fancy candies, the work of Mrs. Emma Barnes and Mrs. Nowland. Besides quite a number of rather good bought in by other ladies, nice enough for the table of a King. All passed off very pleasantly and the young folk had a good time playing rag-pand-ketch-em. The receipts of the evening, clear of all expenses, amounted to $20 which the Elder received with many thanks to the people of Boyne Falls.

Archie Carpenter has just returned home from Grand Rapids, where he has been taking one of the highest degrees in Masonry. He added considerable to his already large stock of goods, and says he don't want to be undersold in Northern Michigan.

The taxes are nearly all collected in, and Earnest Anson will then be done with that job and ready for another.

Mr. James Scippio died one day recently.

Our school under the management of D. K. Leach, is in first class in all respects. Leach is a success in the Boyne Falls school.

William Myers started south on the 9th to his old home to sell his old lumbering sleighs, chains etc. he will be gone a week.

Geo. Gilbert is the father of a girl baby 10 days old. We all had a cigar, and hope he will get another. TOMMY.

Boyne Items.

Sleighing gone again. More coming.

The planing mill have commenced to harvest the ice crop. It is found to be eleven inches thick.

J. Powers, Esq., of Petoskey, spent a day here a short time since. He has commenced hauling hardwood lumber to this place to shipment to Chicago and Milwaukee. He has a commodious dock and all necessary facilities for carrying on his extensive business, which, of course, requires his large water power, mill at Boyne Falls where, among the various articles turned out, are house and barn trimmings, table tops, and many other articles of the turned work, also shoe boats for farmers' use, of which he ships large quantities to different parts of the U. S. But Mr. Powers is subject to one disadvantage. He has to send all his stuff to this place, six miles, for shipment by water. Better never come and live near Mr. P.

Tom Thompson is busy building a new planing mill house, ready for the spring saw season. And becoming, many of stirring have become attended to this place as a leading ground, and to change as their guide and lead.

A. J. Hall is also busy selling improvements.

The "White House" is now well finished and furnished and will accommodate a large number. But when Frank gets his house done which he expects to do early in the spring, then they can all come and "Enjoy the children."

H. D. Ible of Shoreham, Mont. county, has bought R. B. Kenney's homestead, 120 acres, and also 40 acres of A. Hunt. He will move here soon.

E. C. Sutton, son of Timothy H., and brother of Mrs. P. Olson all of J. C. Mc Pellin, our "merchant and builder," has bought a lot in South Boyne. I expect he will soon commence building.

The G. T. Lodge of this place, now numbers 41 members. The following are the present officers:

W. C. T.—Mrs. McPellin.
W. S.—F. M. Abraham.
W. A. S.—Miss Ella Dean.
W. M.—L. W. Hall.
W. D. M.—Miss Linda Thompson.
W. P. S.—O. B. Sage.
W. A. S.—A. S. Thompson.
W. I. G.—Miss Lizzie Mills.
W. D. G.—Willard Brooks.
W. R. S.—Miss Florence Brooks.
W. L. H. S.—H. D. L. D. Odell.
W. C.—R. R. Evans.

James Scippio, of whom I wrote in my last, as being sick, is now dead. He died Wednesday the 11th inst.

L. W. Hall is reported sick.

ED. SENTINEL:

SIR.—The SENTINEL has become a well come weekly visitor and a fast friend, although I have never visited your section of the country, or had any personal acquaintance with you, yet it seems I am acquainted with every body, and have many times and corner in your town, and the country around it, and believe I could walk into your store and wait on any of its proprietors. Why, the sentiments of your paper are almost every body and every thing and what every one is doing, from a counter jumper to a steam boat captain, and coon hunters as well as belt out. I noticed a few weeks ago in your paper that one of your Boomers wanted to breakfast. T. or M. by mother told him many a time, that the patient would get well or die before I would get out of bed, and I think if we believe the SENTINEL which we are bound to, his mammy was pretty near the mark. As some of your readers may have never been Canadians and may not have seen us in the old sod, I would there that I am the whole go for backwoods to a certain extent, although there is not the house you have in your country, we look for better times, and we do not attribute it to the National Policy but to a good harvest and good prices, although our present government came into power with great trumpets, yet I think the next meeting of parliament will compel them to make fairly fair to fiscal policy, as the farmers are beginning to see that they were sold, and that they are heavily taxed for the benefit of the manufacturing interests, and that the price of the products of their farms has to be regulated by a foreign market, not by the National policy.

Some of the old fossil Tories have formed themselves into an annexation society, advocating annexation to our great Republic. Their numbers are few and far between. I don't think they will make much headway at present. The only annexation society in my opinion that is likely to possess any material advantage to either this or your country is the matrimonial society, and I don't think that would produce the sensible measure of thirty or sixty fold. Even Doctor Charley says he would not object to annexing himself to some young lady that had a cash balance in the bank of fifty thousand dollars. I think it would be the cash balance he would prefer.

Yours,
THOMAS PURDIN.

LACK OF KNOWLEDGE.—We last week declared a preference for Gov. McCreery, "the present State Treasurer for next Governor. The facts are R. B. Pritchard succeeded the next Governor in that office at the last general State election. We did it, you know, just to test the intelligence of our Jacksonian neighbors and it has demonstrated an ignorance of State matters, which puzzles us. The only paper that shows a ray of intelligence on the subject is the Grand Traverse Herald, which answers up promptly, as it always does. Boys, read up your Michigan Almanacs.

FROM MACKINAC.—J. B. Barrell has finished lumbering, having got out ten thousand feet of pine logs, and over thousand cubic feet of board timber.

Mr. M. Mercier, of Mackinaw, has been getting lumber in his place with which to build a frame house in the spring.

There was a Meeting A hop at the Cedars House at Petoskey on the 14th, at which a large number of the settlers of Melvina Springvale, and Bear Lake were present. The occasion was enjoyed much.

There are signs of good times even here in the south, at least everybody is choosing more this winter than ever before.

COMMON COUNCIL.—At the meeting of the Common Council last Saturday evening a provision was made for the village election, which occurs the second Monday in March at which time are to be elected a President, three Trustees in place of Trustees Clark, Miller and Nicholson, a Clerk, Treasurer and Street Commissioner.

The committee on streets and sidewalks were instructed to investigate and report on the question of protecting the trees on Bridge street against injury from grading.

Mess Smith and Elston, of the same committee reported adversely on the petition for a street from the state road to Pine lake, on the north side. Mr. Nesbitt was allowed two weeks in which to prepare a minority report.

The question of the validity of the Boyne liquor bond was tabled indefinitely.

THE FINANCE.—J. W. McClelahan, an agent and employe of the Pine Lake Iron Co. arrived in town Thursday and swore out his intention to remain permanently. After the furnace is in operation Mr. McClelahan will have charge of the Company's books. The first duty to be performed by him will be to pay every locality in the Pine Lake and South Arm region, and secure the co-operation of the people in the work of opening the upper channel. After that is definitely settled he will see to the purchase of next season's supply of wood, and make the preliminary arrangements for the construction of the Company's buildings. Upon the question of the supply of ore, the Company are in earnest. The people pledged themselves to open it, and they are expected to do it. But, and an iron furnace must been thought of in Pine Lake, and the Pine come from Colorado only a dream. The question would have no less force and importance than it now has. A thousand men employed per month in the furnace interest is but one. We shall keep our [illegible]

It is now some months since Miss Phebe Avery was afflicted with a paralysis of the vocal organs, and became unable to speak above a whisper. Within the last few weeks the use of the voice has gradually returned, but a recent hard cold has again deprived her of audible articulation.

It is hoped it is necessary to say the cold will prove the extinction of her voice.

We regret also to report that Miss Almeda Harris is troubled with a distressing cough. The results of severe cold. Others we might mention who have not escaped the epidemic which has caused to prevail largely over the country during the last two months.

Mr. Burroughs who lives on the state roads in Banks, has united his farm with a gentleman near Hastings in Barry Co., and will remove to that part of the county.

Mrs. Pinn who always lives on the state road south of Ironton Postoffice, has been troubled for some days with a sobriety of the throat, so that her life has been despaired of. Dr. Kinney was called, and removed from her throat what was supposed as to a piece of a stick, or silver, but how it came there, we can explain. Discussion has taken place and her recovery is held doubtful.

The donation for Rev. S. G. Blanchard at the Bixby neighborhood was not very successful, but was quite up, the ladies having taken great pains in preparing the supper. It was held at the residence of Mr. Geo. Cross. All passed off pleasantly and $22 in cash was realized, for which the parties expressed thanks to the ladies and all present.

A dance was held at the Russell Hotel the same evening.

VISITOR.

Arrested for Perjury.

The following we clip from the Detroit Post and Tribune concerning our old and much believed friend, Charles R. Ford, well known to people throughout this region:

The case of Charles R. Ford against Rosen, Newman & Co., which has been of local interest here in the superior court, came to a sudden and unexpected termination on Saturday afternoon. The suit was brought to recover damages for an alleged breach of contract. Plaintiff claimed a verbal contract to manufacture certain cigars or cigares of his own design. Defendants denied the existence of such contract, and sought to impeach the credibility of the plaintiff, who saw the team witness on his side of the case. When upon the stand he was asked if he had ever been arrested on a criminal charge or sentenced to the state prison, and he swore that he had not. The defense then put upon the stand Robert E. Fraser, formerly prosecuting attorney of Wexford county, who testified that under his administration, Ford was convicted of forgery and sentenced to the state prison for three years. It was also shown that he had been several times arrested on other charges.

When the court was ready to proceed with the trial yesterday morning Ford was not on hand. Judge Swift, who is presiding during this trial, ordered his arrest on a charge of perjury. Deputy Sheriff Siebert Thomas started out in search of him. He was finally found near the corner of Bates and Atwater streets, headed for Canada. After a lively chase he was captured and taken to the court room, when Judge Swift ordered him to be committed to jail to await trial for perjury.

Ford's attorneys then stated to the court that they had been directed in the character of their client, and that they would have nothing further to do with the case. A judgment of nonsuit was then entered.

—About six years ago, Ford entered suit against the editor of this paper for libel [illegible] his damages at $10,000. The alleged libel was in stating, among other things, that he, (Ford) had served three years in State Prison. How the suit would have terminated had it come to trial we do not know, but when the day of trial arrived Ford was in jail for violating the revenue law, and the Judge dismissed the suit. Ford will probably now serve another term.

PERSONAL.—Andrew and Bessie Dougherty, of Elk Rapids, are visiting in town.

—Andrew Schaefles, of Kenosha, Wis., is here, looking up his interests in Evelyne, where he has a quantity of land.

The Detroit News gathers reports purporting to give the preferences of "representative Republicans" in some sixty towns of Michigan, footing up 1,000 for Blaine, 627 for Grant, 611 for Sherman, and none for Washburne. The Grand Traverse Herald does not give credence to the Republicans of Grand Traverse Region favor Blaine as their first choice.

FARM DRAINAGE.

Address on the Benefits of Draining Land—Effect Produced on the Soil and on the Crops—A Suggestion for the Benefit of Young Men.

[Extracts from an address to J. J. W. Hill (lately delivered before the annual convention of the Delaware and State Board of the Indiana Agricultural Society, held at Indianapolis in January, 1880.]

In the past few years very much has been said and written upon the subject of farm drainage; in fact, much has been done, and the interest is now aroused for the purpose of increasing, claiming the attention and thought of our most progressive farmers and economists.

The work done, though much of it great in bone, has, in the results, given satisfaction and greatly encouraged the prosecution of the work. While it is true that our State has been blessed with a bounteous harvest for improvement, yet the States of Illinois, Ohio and Michigan are now reaping the fruits in the impoverishment of the soil.

The question is frequently asked, "Does it pay?" To the farmer it affords the only position through which he can be induced to put the soil in a condition of his plants; air, light and heat are needed to nourish, but even these will not make sufficient his interests to a limited extent through the agency of the soil.

The roots of plants penetrate the soil in very direct lines, sideways and downward, if the conditions are such as to admit the capacity for the roots to search out the food the plant feeds.

While it is true that sometimes to ninety-nine per cent of the weight of plants is derived from the atmosphere, it is equally true that the soil is the medium through which the greater portion of the fertilizing elements in most poor remedies to plant growth, and in which they are carried to the plant. It is to be assimilated in the growing crops. It follows, then, that that condition of the soil most favorable to the taking up and preparation of the necessary supplies of plant food from the atmosphere and soil is of paramount importance in agriculture.

By nature the soils of our State are usually rich in mineral plant food, and contain also phosphoric acid, magnesia, sulphuric acid and lime.

That our soils need improving so that the conditions may be most favorable to plant growth, except a few favored spots, all will agree, and the question of how to secure the best agricultural improvement of these important to the farmer; that the improvement of the soil which must be effected by increasing its depth, by chemical action, by supplying where there is a deficiency, the necessary substances, by the use of manures and fertilizers, by removing the excess or supplying the deficiency of water, are questions the answer to which in the soil is as important to plant growth as the sun's rays is beneficial.

With the foregoing statements we are prepared to consider the effects of drainage upon the soil.

Drainage is effected by removing the surplus water from the spaces between the particles of soil. In the division of the soil, filling the air, the oxygen of which prepares the mineral matter of the soil for plant food, also sets in the gases of vegetation. The drained soil at once becomes the theater of chemical changes of the utmost importance to plant life, the elements of the atmosphere come in contact with those of the soil, rendering soluble substances of insoluble. The water, in its percolations through the soil, cleans the passages way through it, dissolves the plant food, carries it to the roots of plants. In the future rainfalls find a more ready descent to the drains, by the most recently (say, after one or three years of drainage), will pass easily to the depth of the drain if it be four or five feet, as readily as limit loam soil.

Minerals of a calcareous nature found in the most impervious clays as deep as we dig our wells. Clay which we have, when dried, will absorb upon the surface and exposed to the action of the atmosphere and crumbling, in a year or two becomes productive.

The cutting of a deep soil over a shallow soil is apparent. A soil should be as deep as the roots of the growing crops descend. In drained soils the roots of corn, wheat and other crops have been found at the depth of five and six feet, and every observer can see the advantages of a deep soil is that it furnishes a more extensive feeding ground for the roots of growing crops, that it broadens and deepens the theater of chemical changes hereby increasing the supply of fertilizing substances absorbed from the atmosphere, that the water in the increased surfaces in the soil which are exposed to the action of the gases. The roots of the deep indicated in dry weather bring the moisture from below, and with the moisture comes streaming along from the lowest point reached by the roots of plants in their descent the soluble matters of the soil. Thus the roots of plants are stimulated in a stream of their appropriate food. If a heavy rainfall occurs the capillary action ceases until the excess of water is removed, which very readily follows in a porous or well-drained soil, and then the capillary action is restored and the work goes on. It is estimated that every additional inch of soil in depth gives 80 tons weight of active soil to the acre. Are not 320 tons better than 80 tons?

Sufficient drainage not only gives increased fertility, but also changes the texture of the soil. Soil is said to be heavy or light, in proportion as it is difficult or easy to work. Clay soils are composed of fine particles of matter which adhere very closely together when wet, and when dried to a certain point become very hard, requiring a great deal of force to pulverize them. Repeated rolling and harrowing is often necessary. By thorough drainage such soil will become porous, the water in passing through readily to the drain below, leaving the surface in a condition to be easily pulverized.

The advantages of a deep soil easily cultivated as mentioned to every practical farmer. Wherever wet places and land run often occur in farts, across which teams are driven in haste, the water will be in the furrow of spring plowing. The same land when dry is hard and difficult to work. Changes in the texture of the soil, by drainage, in the lake bed of brick. Softened drainage will exchange the texture of sands and the render it more compact and easily worked.

In the application of manures to the surface they are more or less leached by the rainfalls. But in thorough drainage carrying by the strength or fertilizing properties, passing into the subsoil streams, occasionally rise to the open, or pass still, unite so by underdraining, will pass from the drains into the soil, the fertilizing substances being taken up and held as plant-food, the water flowing off freely through the drains; thus drainage lends a helping hand in the application of manures. Drainage also supplies moisture in time of droughts; the deeper the soil the more available it is for supplying moisture to the surface from below; the manure by the increased capacity to hold moisture is attractive. This truth is well attested by the brighter verdure of the fields of fairness by pastures made with the feed the top of well-drained fields, compared with those not very little below the surface moisture is seen to exist by the eye.

Besides, moisture is supplied to porous soil by the atmosphere. There is at all times more or less watery vapor in the air which is rendered by the heat of the day after sunrise and in the night-time by the cooler earth made to the condensation of heat and vapor. We might refer to the statements of Joseph Harris, John Johnston and others, attesting the truth by practical experience. If necessary, that thirteen acres are for less affected in drought than undrained; so marked is the difference that fences have become the boundary lines to crops suffering and not suffering from the effects of drought, the one to the undrained and the other drained. These workers in the improvement of the soil, in the points before named as necessary to will the "benefiting of the land, the change of texture the application of manures, the removal of surplus water, the supply of moisture prevailed for largely in its drainage.

The increased warmth resulting from sufficient drainage is an important point gained in the improvement of the soil. The removal of the water-line from to the depth of three or four feet is a pretty sure protection against the chilling effects of evaporation, giving to the soil an increase of temperature averaging about ten degrees, which added heat often proves to be everything to the germination of the seed and speedy growth of the plant, while ten degrees below would prove destructive to germination, if the season is not speedily sufficient to admit of the germination. The soil surface soil is chilled all day by the growth of the plant that it is frozen and nipped by a failing frost in a season of unseasonable purity.

This increased warmth not only has not only increases to the germination and growth of crops, but also ripening as well, it is not unfrequent that the early frosts of the fall season damage greatly the corn crop, which are thus cause the past fall. It is the testimony of all with whom we have conversed, who have observed carefully the effect of the frost, that corn on the driest lands or along the line of ditching has been fully protected against damage in this respect. A gentleman who resides in Hamilton county, in this State, makes the statement that he could locate the line of his drains by the corn not being affected by the frost, while upon his undrained land the crop was badly damaged. He further stated that he had been enough in this way to drain his undrained land in three or four years to thoroughly drain his farm. The truth of the latter statement has been experienced by very many farmers in this State. A light frost upon the tassels of corn, as I call it (Speaker Axtell, while in Illinois, was blasted not only the tassels but the ears, rendering it worthless.

The saving of orchards. Fruit trees planted over or near drains which produce are the finest and most perfect specimens of their kind. It is very common to see orchards drained in the fall grow so rapidly that they are so good to fill apparatus as when first put in the ground. In all possible care in grading the bottom of the drain, giving the water an even and regular flow, by the title to exist sine, so as to give the least possible obstruction to the flow. The slowest enemy to the success of drainage is the sediment that will accumulate in the drain. The water should have a rapid flow if two or three feet below or near the main; this is done by giving greater fall.

In the laying of the tile they should make a close joint; there will be plenty of room for the water to enter, and close joints will have the effect to prevent sand silt. The depth of drains should depend upon the outlet and character of the soil or clay to be drained. We should prefer from three to four feet, or even a greater depth if necessary to bring out the water by the shortest way practicable.

The wide apart of the laterals in the drain work depends upon the character of the land to be drained and also upon the depth of the drains—retentive clay requiring them closer together than more open soil or clay.

Wherever it is necessary to stop in the progress of the work, never leave a gap with a tile, and be opportunity offers take it up as last point, and so go on to its full completion.

Yes, gentlemen of the State Board of Agriculture are expected to give encouragement to advancement in agriculture. The last twenty years has marked a great improvement in the agricultural machinery, also in the improvement of live stock. Our State boasts some noted herds of short-horns, Jerseys and other breeds of cattle, blooded horses of sheep and swine, and high-bred poultry.

It occurred to me in preparing this address on drainage as a means of improving the soil that it might not be untimely to direct attention to the practicability of offering premiums to give encouragement to the improvement of the soil, and the subject of draining was one to be rewarding premiums to young men under the age of, the beginning of twenty years; those who will drain thoroughly and cultivate for five years, the premium to be [illegible] 24 [illegible] five acres [illegible] 10 acres to be under cultivation. The awards to be made annually for the best reports, all things considered, the committee [illegible] for the premium being entitled to a seat annually at the State Fair a member of their [illegible] for the year, together with a detailed statement as to the cost and manner of draining the land, the kind of crops and the quantity of manures and fertilizers used, the mode of cultivation and cost of production. The award of the last year to embrace the best results for the five years. The premium is not meant to be large, but graded so as to give encouragement for more than one to enter the prize.

We believe a hundred young men would be found in this State to compete for the awards. Think of it, gentlemen—a hundred young men exhibiting samples of products, comparing notes, etc., at the annual meeting of the State—some women go abroad through the country, and report the best farms and the best States noted as having produced a hundred or more bushels of corn to the acre, or forty bushels of wheat, or [illegible] to the acre, together with a statement as to how they produced the results.

There is a seemingly interesting feature I would make in the forgoing premiums for the [illegible] of the [illegible] of the [illegible] of

FOR PRESIDENT IN 1880

ULYSSES S. GRANT.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT

HENRY WARD BEECHER

He Declares Himself in Favor of Gen. Grant for President—His Opinions of Hayes, Sherman and Blaine—An Eloquent and Witty Speech.

The Lincoln Club of New York Thursday evening held its annual dinner at Delmonico's, Abraham Lincoln's birthday. Nearly all the distinguished Republicans at New York city and vicinity were in attendance, and letters were read from Senator Conkling and many others. Henry Ward Beecher was called upon to respond to the toast, "The Pioneers." He spoke as follows:

I congratulate you, Gentlemen, that we have a whole and undivided country at which we may be glad. We are united. We are united by the very instrument that threatened to divide us—the sword. It has not been given up. The spring so much as against that which was destroying the nation; for although the war, which it was urged would engender implacable hate in its first effect destroyed property and human life, yet by and by, when we had ceased to fight down into the factory had changed it in the paper mill, we found that it was a benefit to industry, to commerce and to civil government. And now we have a country, north, south, east and west, undivided and united upon a glorious future. I can say on this occasion, that the period from the death of Lincoln to the present has been one even more trying to its interests, and often than was the war itself. When nations are not building and breaking bones in the body, that is a catastrophe; but the suffering is not so great nor the trouble so long as it is getting well. [Laughter.] This country was broken in every particular in its industrial and its financial action; in all its commercial relations, and in all the great engines of public prosperity surrendered. Then came a period of shutting together of the fragments that had been in ultimately more solidly than any other period in the history of this nation. We have caught by one mean, and another men, and another, to remedy this and to remedy that. We have brought to bear upon them the existence of a cause for fast meeting, or currency unprecedented, and emergency or that emergency. But it was not in the power of any man that ever lived to have created this country. It pertained to a greater period than has elapsed since the inauguration of General Grant. [Loud applause.]

I think so remarkable a recovery after war has not been recorded in the national life of any country. We have in that short period rapidly progressed toward monarchy, sound industry and wholesome finance. That we have come so far back again, and so far restored ourselves, is not due simply to the good sense of the people themselves, but to the essential wisdom of the great statesman who then led us, and whose name must necessarily have been held in honor by succeeding generations who would unite themselves with the Union cause. It is alleged that General Grant had almost him on just as wise as he himself. [Laughter.] I only wonder, gentlemen, that there were not more of them. This case of affairs was produced by the war, by the blasting of the whole country; and the act and corruption that had entered the whole community was such, that I marvel that he, with all his integrity and strong practical sense, was able to do as well as he did. He was able to come out from eight years of experimental administration without a spot on his personal integrity; with a record in which there are no mistakes and no stitches let down. From the time of his inauguration down to the close of his administration, the affairs of the nation were steadily creeping back to a sound foundation; and to speak of that part of his record is as great a compliment as can be paid to any man.

Then came the inauguration of our President Hayes. It could be struck out no new and startling career; that he has not shown the qualities of statesmen. Gentlemen, when the physician meets with a patient, and after diagnosing his case, finds that he needs rest and reputation only, is he not an skillful as the physician who keeps drugging the patient, beyond the possibility of his getting well? It was so in regard to the prosperity of our country. Much had been done to further this prosperity, and we stand now on the eve of one step further. Allow me to say in the first place, that if I could have my own way, I would vote for Gen. Grant to come back. [Loud applause.] I should vote for him partly because I wish to treat ingratitude against that horse concerning the third term. I refuse to allow any party or any political faction to take away from me the right to call again to office that officer who has fulfilled the functions of his office to the satisfaction of the majority of his countrymen; because I believe that I have the right to do so again by again. [Laughter.] I don't believe in going into an election lamb-crippled. If a horse has won a race he ought not to be so overweighted that he has no chance to run against other competitors. [Loud applause.] I should select him not merely as a testimony of my objection to the heresy mentioned, but also as a protest in behalf of the right of the people to choose one man here again. In case we want up our government is stability and continuity. It is a point of weakness that our present President holds office only four years, and it occasions unnecessary disturbance of affairs throughout the whole country. And yet to have our officer elected for life would be going to the other extreme. The best thing, therefore, is to select the man found competent for the office, and who commands the respect and confidence of our citizens. Therefore I hold that a third term is in proper order, and may it be a nine thing—my own, a fourth term. [Loud applause.] And even then, if you want him, if he still has your confidence, you might give him a fifth term. I don't know why a judge who has sat upon the bench for seven years should be put aside for a young man and a new man who has nothing of his experience. It has taken four years to learn how to do a problem and four years more how to do it with any considerable degree of success. But no man knows anything until he forgets it. No man, for instance, as a rule, is a artist who has to think where to put the line or color; these acts are automatic if he has thoroughly accomplished his business. We can use government in the hands of a man who is an experience. In the next nine years he will be only a governor. Four years after that he is was only better; but four years more than he will know his business; he will be able to go by instinct.

If I had the whole vote to give myself I should certainly cast it for Grant. I think Gen. Grant is, perhaps, the most colossal man that our age has produced in America—a man that it very little understands. He never cackles, and don't think he never lays an egg. A man who never says anything which he is sorry in vapor or rainbow hues; who never allows fancy to sweep with jest. A man who says what he says, and says it exactly, and truly; this, and neither more nor less. He is one of peace, one for national, to the right or left. He is a homespun, simple man. Honest man, first means honesty every time and wrapped in one. And such a man is an appropriate type of what a great practical nation like ours, should produce.

Well suppose you don't want Gen. Grant? Suppose I am not to be allowed to give that whole vote? Suppose it is Mr. Blaine? Well, my country is not going to perish if we do not have Gen. Grant. The strength and intelligence of 50,000,000 of men, organized upon such free and liberal institutions as we have, cannot be materially disturbed by the or any particular administration. I am not going to say anything against Mr. Blaine. He is a brilliant man so far as the can ve understand. After he is in, he will be like nobody else if he does not quickly learn the duties of his place.

I think Mr. Washburne would make a good, and substantial President. Some of the presidents has made him. But you might prefer Secretary Sherman. I think Secretary Sherman would be an admirable candidate if he would only run well. [Laughter.] I don't know that he would. I think he would in New York and where. I never men know much about commerce and about finance. But there is only about one man here in 500 who knows anything about finance, and not one in a million of ordinary people who know much about it. Therefore, it is hardly possible that through men's ignorance so may pose the best candidate that can be presented to us. Mr. Sherman is one of those men who will adorn private life and create. I might mention other men that would make admirable Presidents. But who knows what a man is or what a man may do so much as himself? I therefore leave this to the candidates themselves. I mean to say that this country is not likely to be ruined by the mere guilt of party or the temporary ascendency of any particular political faction.

THE VEIL OF ISIS.

The Masonic Emblems Found While Removing Cleopatra's Needle.

The Herald correspondent at Alexandria, Egypt, says that Lieutenant Commander Honinge, while removing the foundation of Cleopatra's Needle, made a most interesting and highly discovery, which will serve as a starting point for new researches and cannot fail to throw light, not only upon the origin of Freemasonry, but upon the ancient mysteries of Isis and Osiris.

For the first time there has been discovered under a public monument, and, moreover, one erected 32 years before the Christian era, a foundation arranged according to the customs of Freemasonry in such cases. This foundation proves the antiquity of the organization of Masonic Lodges, and discloses emblems, principles and customs identical with those which prevail to-day throughout the four quarters of the globe. Commander Honinge is a Freemason, and his attention was first drawn to a masonic square cut out of an immense block of granite. The square, borne upon the interior base three degrees, corresponding to the three first Masonic grades.

Under the square are three steps, corresponding to the degrees of apprentice, companion and master. The three steps are disposed as follows: That corresponding to the apprentice degree is made of one stone; the other two steps, corresponding to degrees of companion and master, are formed of a single stone, indicating the intimate union between the two degrees. The step typifying the companion degree is much smaller than the one corresponding to apprentice degree in consideration of the greater labor and time necessarily acquired than that emblematic of the master degree, as it is merely acquired less time to attain science than to serve apprenticeship.

Outside of the square a block was found having four faces, most beautifully and accurately dressed. The block is Masonic beyond doubt. It is the smooth ashlar. It is marked "Osiris," which in Sanscrit means the world. The ancients believed the world to be regular in form. A block was found inscribed toward the west, thereof as if by design. This is a rough ashlar. Instead of being situated toward the east, whence the light comes, which is the symbol of intelligence, the rough stone is placed toward the west, where darkness, the symbol of ignorance, reigns.

The stone represent apprenticeship, and is emblematic of human imperfection. There are also further proofs in the Masonic arrangement of the base of the needle, showing that the ancients possessed degrees higher than those of apprentice. The lower step is formed of 18 blocks, and among these was found the cubic stone and another of peculiar formation and of the purest and most brilliant whiteness. No one who has been this stone remembers to have seen a smaller one. The stone is evidently an emblem of purity.

The stones of the foundation are, with a solitary exception, laid in white mortar and finely dressed. The smooth ashlar is laid in beautiful yellow cement. The stones are of different colors, and are joined with cement, indicating the unity of all Masons. The ancient monuments of Egypt have never been carefully examined from a Masonic standpoint, and it is most likely that if excavations were made about the base of some of the fallen obelisks, such excavations would be crowned with most important results, and additional light and further proofs would be obtained which, in connection with Commander Gorringe's discovery, would lead to the solution of many questions.

Politic and Impolitic.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

XLVIth Congress.

THE House joint resolution appropriating $20,000 to enable the United States to be represented at the International Fish Exhibition at Berlin next April was passed in the Senate on the 10th. The bill authorizing the purchase of the Interior building for a post office and for the Treasury of the United States and to draw the interest stipulated by treaty or prescribed by law in lieu of investment was passed. Mr. Burnside, from the Committee on Education and Labor, reported a bill to establish an educational fund and apply the proceeds of the public lands to public education, and to provide for the more complete endowment and support of National colleges for the advancement of scientific and industrial education. Mr. Hoar spoke for considerable length against Mr. Davis' (W. Va.) resolution to reconsider the vote by which a committee was appointed to consider the subject, on an investigation basis. Burnside, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported favorably the bill to provide for the removal of Jordan Porter, accompanied by an amendment providing that, when the application of General Porter, the President is authorized to grant him a new trial by court-martial upon the charges and specifications upon which he was tried and found guilty by the court-martial convened November 27, 1862. In the House Mr. Springer, from the Committee on Ways and Means, reported a bill to repeal all taxes, past, present and future, which were, or may be, levied for the relief of refugees, providing that all charitable contributions reported for the relief of indigent persons who have suffered from Indian hostilities in other States shall be admitted free of duty, the act to remain in force until January 1, 1883. The bill to establish the title of settlers on the first section reservation was further considered and finally passed 125 to 121. A resolution was agreed to calling the President of the Senate to all correspondence in regard to the Interference by China which may have been between the Government and foreign Governments, and between this Government and its representatives, abroad and individuals interested in the controversy, and to send to the House any information not previously published. The bill for the arrest of Fitz John Porter, following the regular order, Mr. Blight raised a question of order against it, and the House refused—ayes, 41; noes not counted—to consider the bill. Adjourned, the session on the 14th to be for debate only.

THE CZAR'S NARROW ESCAPE.

The Paris correspondent of the New York Herald telegraphed to that paper on the 18th as follows:

Private dispatches that have been received here this morning give a connected story of the attempt on the Czar's life, probably made on the Winter Palace on the 17th instant. It appears that when the Czar is in the Capital he is accustomed to dine at 5 o'clock. Since his return to the Capital the hour has generally been put back half an hour, and at 5:30 o'clock, as is the Emperor's custom, he left his private apartments to dine as he has done during the past month. Only the ordinary members of the household were sitting at the dinner table, the Empress, owing to some indisposition, having remained in her own apartments. He has had little appetite for a long time, and at twenty minutes after five on the evening referred to he was the victim of the most terrible explosion that has ever been known in the Winter Palace. Palace after the explosion. As soon as the news got abroad, the corridors were filled with an excited crowd, each member of it giving a different version of the affair. From all the private apartments in the direction of the dining room chamberlains, in court dress, covered with rich gold embroideries, hurried down from the Hall of St. George, and an army of Cossacks occupied the debris from the subterranean kitchens. Court ladies, with sweeping trains and sparkling jewels, issued from their dressing-rooms, and the watchmen, with their wives and families, came from their huts upon the roof, heard the statute of Alexander gathered a motley throng of officers in full uniform, ladies in court costumes, grooms, scullions and hundreds of inmates of the palace whose names are supposed to be registered by the Minister of the Imperial house, but who are really so little noticed by him as the colonists who settle in Russian Asia are noticed by the proprietors of the estate. The first impression of these people can be learned to offer their congratulations to the Emperor. Their second was to return thanks for the preservation of the palace itself. In their eyes the building is sacred. The gilt cross on the cupola of the private church, which survived the fire of 1837, was thought to have been placed there by saints. It was this feeling which animated the workmen on those pillaging occasions to so considerable proportions. It was this feeling that caused the soldiers and Cossacks of the guard to suffer their overzealousness, and the police had the orders to let no looters pass the gates. At early morning the Emperor drove to and fro in the streets, and received thanks for the Virgin for his safe preservation.

Warm Sleeping Rooms.

THE foolishness of the old-fashioned prejudice against warm sleeping rooms is very strongly shown by a correspondent of the Queen. Says the writer: "It surely requires very little common sense to see that it must be thoroughly bad for nine people out of ten to spend their evenings in warm, comfortable rooms, with the thermometer at sixty degrees, and then to take their departure for chilly bedrooms, along cold passages, and to undress in a temperature of thirty degrees or thirty-five degrees. Even the strongest constitution must suffer more or less by such an insane proceeding. As well might one expect to escape injury to health by standing for half an hour in the street with no extra clothing than what we have just been wearing in the heated room. Any man or woman deserving to be credited with common sense would before doing anything so rash as to expose themselves to the cold of the street take the precaution of putting on a hat and cloak, in preserving, whatever, to chilly bedrooms, with the thermometer twenty degrees lower than that of the room we have just emerged from; we actually stand about for ten or twenty minutes, leisurely divesting ourselves even of the garments that were deemed necessary as a covering in our warm sitting room. What is the consequence? Obviously the immediate effect is that the heat of the body flies off and leaves us with so much less vitality. It is true we are expected to jump into bed with extreme promptitude, and get warm between the cold sheets; but this is a mockery, and only one more evidence of the utterly unscientific way in which we arrange everything in our households. It is but another instance of the absurd fervor of habit and custom. Whatever is very good thing in summer, when the cool contact of clean linen sheets helps to cool the heated body, is the reverse of pleasant or sensible in winter, for linen being a better conductor of heat than woolen coverings of course rapidly abstracts more heat from the already half-chilled body, and leaves the poor victim of custom actually colder than before. Now, the unwritten order of going to bed is midwinter is best-warm which are not warmed is in the highest degree dangerous to the weakly and feeble. In health, its bite is very rarely fatal. To those popular Anglo-Indian traditions, also, we owe the deadly fear of snakes, in the shape of the cobra, the chief species, the carpet snake, the whip snake, the eye snake, etc. The last named is, we assume, according to Dr. E. Nicholson, to an Irishman about as much caught in exposure of this kind: and even in our houses, safe and comfortable, we are constantly imagining ourselves, it is quite possible—nay, it is quite certain that many children, delicate women and old people are actually killed through the ignorance and thoughtlessness of those who have charge of them. It should be a maxim with all who value their health, that they can never lose bodily warmth without at the same time losing vitality. Whenever they feel chilly they have but to take their first duty should be to restore the body. This brings us to an illustration which, perhaps, more than anything else, will convince the housewife of the truth of the foregoing remarks. Whenever a child or other inmate of a house is suffering from cold the first indulgence the patient is allowed is a fire in his or her bed-room, and this is looked upon as the first and first essential to a cure by the medical man sufficiently proves that warmth is essential to a cure, and that warmth is a good thing as a cure, it would be much wiser to use it as a preventive, if there be any truth in the old saying that 'prevention is better than cure.' The favorite argument against warm bed-rooms is that it is weakening; but, like all other bad truisms, it is only true in extremes. Sleeping in badly ventilated hot rooms may be weakening, but sleeping in a temperature of fifty degrees, or even sixty degrees, can not possibly be so. If it were, then healthy sleep in the summer would be impossible. The usual prejudice examines that warm air cannot be fresh—another absurd notion which one would think it hardly worth while to rebut. It is, of course, essential that the heating apparatus—be it a stove, a fireplace, hot-water pipes, hot air ducts or gas stoves—should not consume the oxygen from the room without at the same time providing being made for the admission of fresh air from without. This fresh air from without need not, however, come into the room in a cold state. It may be first warmed by passing near to the fire or heating apparatus. Providing the above precautions be taken, there is no fear of warm rooms being injurious to health, while there is not the least doubt that cold rooms and cold passages, into which delicate women and children are constantly passing out of warm rooms, are fatal to health and are everywhere causing deadly havoc in our midst."—Exchange.

To Keep Belts Soft and Pliable.

"To keep belts soft and pliable so that the cure is generally needed, but a little attention on this point would be well worth the while of many mill owners. When a belt is dry and hardy, but still whole, a little blood-warm tallow, dried in by the fire or the heat of the sun, is all that is needed. Belts which have become hard and dry should have an application of neat's foot oil mixed with a small quantity of resin.—American Manufacturer.

INDIA'S SNAKES.

Where There Are 1 000 Cobras to the Square Mile. A Remedy Worse Than the Bite.

The statistics show that during the last year the amount of rewards paid for the destruction of wild beasts and venomous snakes in British India was 29,189 rupees. As far as regards the destruction of wild beasts, the money was, no doubt, well spent, though the rewards are sometimes but easily earned. We have, for instance, heard of a young wolf, which had been brought up domesticably until it was as tame as a lady's lapdog, killing a human for a greedy servant in the cook-room for the sake of the head-money. But, after all, wolves are not very pleasant pets, and there can be little doubt that the offer of rewards for the destruction of really dangerous animals is in the main useful. Tempted by this, an ailing shikaree, though he may have no baby of his own, will sit up for the wolf that grows about the premises of the village or plantation, and will not stop to look at it, but rushed headlong home, implored his friends to look after his children, and relied even on the first. In a few minutes the whole neighborhood had gathered together, determined not to be taken by surprise a second time, and in an attempt at rescue. A dozen chickens were at once procured, and the wolf was put into closest operation. It is, by the way, one of the commonest native specifics. Then some bright man passing by was called in. They were practical men, and at once sucked the wound. They sucked and chewed the man in half a dozen other places besides, but this might have been designed to act on his faith and cheer him up, and by this time he needed cheering. Next some local surgeon suggested that the poison should be got out of the man's stomach, and a good handful of salt was given him, with an immediate result. After this a decoction of neem leaves was administered, both internally and externally, plenty of it being rubbed on the crown of his head. Some other decoction was smeared under the roof of his tongue. Two men, well versed in charms, then came on the scene, and cutting some twigs from a tree of very great potency in such cases, belabored the man for an hour or two over the head and face, muttering charms the while.

All this was, we are told, only the beginning of sorrows. For four or five hours the wretched man was piled with drugs, and decoctions, and charms, every new comer putting some fresh absolution down his throat. At the end of that time he was quite sensible and not a symptom of snake poison had shown itself. There was no pain in the bitten part, nor any swelling as far as could be ascertained, considering how the place had been plastered and blistered and bandaged. Two or three hours later, however, some fresh dose, prescribed by a new arrival, gave the coup de grace. The man succumbed, became insensible, and soon died. There was a Government dispensary in the neighborhood, with an apothecary in charge, but no one ever dreamt of consulting him until it was too late. In this case there was not a particle of evidence to show that the snake was poisonous, and it, all probability the man was simply scared to death. The victim was unfortunately a popular man and much respected, and but for had fewer friends he might have been permitted to recover. If the blame of half the snake-bite cases in the Government returns is to be taken into account, the reptile has probably had its due, and after all the annual returns give one death only in each 10,000 of the population.—Times of India.

The Vatican.

THE Vatican, then, is an immense and irregular pile of buildings, erected at different times, and with little attempt at architectural unity. It contains thirteen courts, and the streets that these surround courts with colonnades and fountains. Many of them are lighted, but others, though not concealed, in the library, look out on sunny garden spaces where are clustering hedges, tall pines, date palms, orange and lemon trees laden with golden fruit. The halls given up to statues and paintings are vast, and, despite a sombre here and there, are full of light and flower designs of a white or gold ground. These are all you see, the books being invisible. Rare marble tables hold presents made the popes by Kings and Queens of the last century; Sevres vases from the King of Prussia, malachite from Petersburg, candelabra and chandeliers from Napoleon I.; little Prince Louis's baptismal font sent by Eugenie so long ago; rare illuminated manuscripts from Spain are adorned with embroideries of gold and gems; a wonderful fald-stool from Russia, studded with cameos carvings in light brown wood, all ferns and wandering vines and bell-flowers, and lacelike cascades over ivory saints six inches high; these, and the like, are the curious articles, and get from every window glimpses of garden green or silvery fountain. You look back from the last hall and see a vista so long that you cannot distinguish objects at the other end. The whole effect is of glittering splendor and beauty. But all these museums are much alike, I suppose, to ignorant eyes. The first one always dazzles in your memory as biggest and best.—Emily F. Wheeler, in Good Company.

Large or Small Farms.

It is fashionable to decry large farms. "Praise a large farm, purchase a small one," is an old Roman maxim which is as sound now as in the days of Columella, but it is more dogmatical than profound. There is no question but that it is better for society at large that land should be divided among many holders. The Southern system of large plantations is not conducive to the greatest development or the greatest number of men. On the plantation system there can be few villages, few churches, and no public schools supported by taxation and free to all. Hence, while the planter and his family were well educated, the blacks and the poor whites were kept in a state of degradation. In New England, and at the North generally, the land being divided mostly among small proprietors, a farm-house dots the highway every furlong or two, and every mile or two sets up a village, with its church, its school, its concentration of farm products and the sale of merchandise, and its merchants ships for furnishing all the conveniences of life. Who can doubt that this state of things is more conducive to the development of manhood in the masses? Would that every man might be a landlord, the owner in fee simple of more or less real estate. This possession of fixed property not only conduces to permanency of abode, but makes a man part and parcel of the country, gives him an interest in all that concerns the public weal, and adds dignity and stability to his character. No arbitrary rule can be laid down as to just how much land a man should own. This must depend upon his capital and capacity to take care of it. A farmer with a small purse, little energy, and less enterprise, may feel burdened with the care of forty acres; another, full of life and of great executive ability, may easily manage a thousand acres. Must he confine his energies to a fifth of this amount? By no means. If he is a public benefactor, who makes two blades of grass grow where one grew before, much more is the world benefited by him who underdrains and fertilizes a thousand acres where only a hundred were formerly productive.

It should not be forgotten in considering this question that there are some advantages in running a large farm, as there are in running a large factory. The small manufacturers are always complaining of the ruinous competition they encounter from the large establishments. And why? It is because the large operators can manufacture more economically, can buy and sell on better advantage, can run their factory more systematically, with a better division of labor, and hence can produce a better article at less expense. In this case there was not a particle of evidence to show that the snake was poisonous, and it, all probability the man was simply scared to death. The victim was unfortunately a popular man and much respected, and but for had fewer friends he might have been permitted to recover. If the blame of half the snake-bite cases in the Government returns is to be taken into account, the reptile has probably had its due, and after all the annual returns give one death only in each 10,000 of the population.—Times of India.

—Lotteries under Louis XIV. were abominable and of five classes. "Lotteries of liberality," of particular ajiecies, of the state, of charity and commercial lotteries. An example of the first-class was the lottery given by the King to the ladies of the court in May, 1685. There were three thousand tickets, all free.

INDUSTRIAL.

THE large transatlantic steamers consume ninety tons of coal every time they cross the ocean.

CATTLE RAISES at the present time are worth fifty dollars per ton. These hoofs are now made into hair brush buttons.

THE results are not all due to land or capital. Enterprise, energy and executive ability have had much to do with his success, and these are things in which farmers may find a large margin for improvement. The question may be asked whether Mr. Smith makes his large farm pay? We cannot give the exact figures in answer to this, but to all appearances he does. Possibly the cash outgoings may have exceeded the incomings as the result of much money been invested in permanent improvements. The farm has been doubled, if not quadrupled, in actual value, and now is in a condition to turn off large crops at much less expense. Investments in permanent improvements farmers are wont to underestimate, but these are pretty sure to make good returns in the long run.—Alta Hyde, in N. Y. Times.

A RUSSIAN nobleman recently lay on his deathbed. One of his curious fancies was to have his wife robe herself in her wedding-dress and stand by his bedside. It was a very natural bit of sentiment that the sight of the manufacture of paper, and is still at the head of a company which turns out over one hundred tons of paper per week. Leaving the care of his mills to his nephews, he has, for a few years past, been given his attention to building the land, of which he has bought one land after another till he now owns four hundred tons. Grain and roots are raised in proportionate quantity, and the sale of the produce of hay and milk are the chief salable products. He had recently been to Kentucky and purchased there two of the best horses he could find with which to improve his own stock in this line and that of his neighbors. Such a man is a public benefactor. True, his example must be followed at a respectful distance by the average farmer, as few have the capital for such extensive, but all can take hints from him which can be of great service.

The Proposed New Funding Bill.

WASHINGTON, February 18.

The following is the text of the bill to facilitate the refunding of the National debt, agreed upon by the Committee on Ways and Means:

Be it enacted, etc., That all existing provisions of law authorizing the refunding of the National debt shall apply to any bonds of the United States bearing a higher rate of interest than five per centum per annum, which may hereafter be due and payable pursuant to the terms of the bonds authorized to be issued by the act of July 14, 1870, entitled "An act to authorize the refunding of the National debt," and the acts amendatory thereto, and to the act entitled "An act to amend section 3 of an act entitled 'An act to authorize the refunding of the National debt,' approved July 14, 1870, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1871

THE SENTINEL

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor and Proprietor.

TUESDAY, MARCH 2, 1880.

FOR PRESIDENT IN 1880.

ULYSSES S. GRANT.

FOR GOVERNOR

Col. Wm. B. McCreery.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

NEW YORK, FEB. 24 1880.

The Elevated Railroads are destined to become as famous in connection with the Herald's Irish relief fund as perhaps were the geese which, it is related, once saved Rome. A foreign visitor had three beautiful Bedlam fowls, with the choicest points, always hungry and always stuffing, so large that the roaster habitually reeds from the top of a barrel, has given them to help the starving poor of Ireland. They are to be auctioned off by the Sheriff of New York in person, on the plan of the cotton bale auctions for the yellow fever sufferers, or Rose Terry's ring in Plymouth Church for the Subject Populations during the war. Enthusiastic visitors by the thousand have copied these birds and vowed to bid fabulous amounts for their temporary possession. The sale is looked forward to as something in the best possible style of ponies. Every feather will be likely to represent at least a week's board and lodging to some poor family. Meantime, the usual work generally goes on bravely.

Raids among the petty gambling house have been started again and some lively scenes are enacted where the Philistines swoop on the unlucky frequenters. Plain young clerks and steady and esteemed mechanics have somehow or other managed with exceeding frequency to have been unfortunate enough to drop into their dens during their half hour for dinner, just to see the way to the next block, or some other equally important errand, and have been captured with the wicked ones, who take shameless fighting the tiger. They are sad when caught, and no doubt many of them will be "shaken up" out of good situations on account of the accident of their presence where it is not generally considered good for pious young men to be. Perhaps the most persistent and most unlucky gamblers are our respected colored brethren, and that their rather many Christianity has a pretty solid foundation of superstition and heathenism, has just come to light by the arrest in a policy shop, and examination in court of a full fledged Voodoo Doctor, reporting in the suggestive and awe-inspiring name of "Snake George," who appears to have made quite a comfortable thing of it by furnishing lucky ammunition to his numerous clients, besides foretelling events, providing love charms, etc.

Two deaths of persons living with as gods asunder, so far as their social surroundings were concerned, bring up reflections about the mutability of human affairs, and all that sort of thing. In the noisome precincts of a low tenement house, in condition the side of a less Irish laborer, died Jennie Collins, a granddaughter of President Tyler, once the petted child of proud, wealthy and influential Southern family, and the brightest belle of her time in Washington society, a cultivated beauty. What imprudence on her own part, or injudicious harshness on the part of others, led to this sad ending need not now be examined. She is at last at peace. In a magnificent mansion in fifth avenue, died James Lenox, the founder of the Lenox Library. Out superb stone casket of choicest treasures of literature and art, which overlooks Central Park, and the Presbyterian hospital. His generous hand was ever open with princely liberality tempered by the soundest judgement. His family has always, on the side of its water, held a foremost position among the most prominent citizens, and is by blood related to several of the noble houses of Scotland, but the founder of the immense fortunes which in successive hands have been so wisely administrate, was by no means wealthy enough to lead any one to suppose his descendants would be million aires. An upright, shrewd and industrious merchant, his best investment was a piece of unproductive farming land, which lay far out of the city, and chiefly produced thistles from a soil which mainly consisted of rocks, and which he bought at considerably above its then value in order to accommodate a friend. In his will he desired it might be kept in the family, as he thought it might possibly some day, be the sight of a flourishing village. That land now is worth about a dime for a square inch. Central Park is built upon it, and the surrounding residential palaces for many blocks. Large parcels were sold at enormous prices from time to time, as New York expanded itself, and still a large portion of the original property is in the Lenox family. The late head of it held a life of learned leisure, and was rarely seen but a few intimate friends. He was eighty years of age.

If Lent happens to come early, quite a large number of our fellow citizens seem to think it is so much the worse for Lent. They are bound to have their fun out. The grandest of all balls that ever was held on this planet, eclipsing in jewelers and gaiety, if not in style, diamonds or rank, the most superb entertainments at European Courts, was the Arion ball at Madison Square Garden. The vast expanse of covered space, whereupon palace trains have trampled their weary miles on six days' goes too please champion courts, where Mosels and Sankey have chanted and sung of salvation, and Offenbach hauled Gilmore's hand in his own fantastic and pernicious music, was a bloom of beauty and more or less fashion. Fifteen thousand men and women, in gorgeous unsurpassable attire, battered the floor in measures wild, and then took goblets of wine and smiled. They danced, they pranced, they glanced and flirted, and gay was the scene till the place they departed. I am actually dropping into rhyme at thoughts of it. It was a grand time, and grand even the headaches that followed the festivity.

The Rev. Shepard Cowley, our representative Sumero, has been convicted of the offence of shooting the miserable children of the "Field" which he ran for a living, the contributions he begged for which, chiefly going to nourish his own unctuous frame. He will probably get the sentence though wretchedly inadequate penalty provided for such cases, namely, one year's imprisonment and $250 fine, to stand committed till paid. Nobody pities the waif in sheep's clothing, though many people seem to think he was no worse than many other bosses of so-called charitable enterprises, though he was unlucky enough to be caught, and they have so escaped. The Herald some years ago gathered some interesting facts about, and showed up the nepotism, greed and lack of conscience displayed in many of these institutions, but it did apparent good. We live in a busy world and forget disagreeable things too readily, perhaps. We are shocked when we hear of them, do care they ought to be remedied, and then turn off to something more immediately interesting, and the abuses go on comfortably enough till the next exposure. War, in one prominent affair alone, to which large bequests are made perhaps every week by some dying friend, and which is widely known all over the land, the Herald, I am not mistaken, proved that the superintendent, with his brother and his wife and sisters, cousins and aunts, and his wife's relations, all in official positions under him, managed to get somewhere about $24,000 in salaries, besides free lodgings in handsomely furnished apartments, light, heat, provisions, traveling expenses, and other "perquisites." This loosing charitable institutions has grown to be a lucrative profession, and in many cases there is no doubt it costs ninety-five cents of every dollar to reach the parties supposed to be benefitted.

Dr. Benjamin Brandreth, the famous pill manufacturer, died very suddenly at his factory in Sing Sing. He was a zealous and generous member of the Episcopal Church, and a liberal giver generally. His fortune ran well up into the millions.

Rover.

The loss of 42 steamships, 45 ships, 145 barks, 48 brigs, and 277 schooners bound to and from the United States during 1879 involving a loss of $15,000,000, for $6,000,000 in excess of that of 1878, and over $3,000,000 more than in any previous year, is naturally drawing attention to the causes of so remarkable an increase in marine losses. As fifteen of the steamers were grain carriers, the presumption is that the chief difficulty lies in the storage.

That branch of the Mormon "Church of Latter Day Saints" which has its center at Plano, Ill., is in harmony with the general sentiment of the country, demanding the enforcement of the law for the punishment and suppression of polygamy in Utah. In a memorial to Congress they set forth the history and faith of the Mormon Church, showing that polygamy was explicitly condemned by the founders of the sect; that polygamy was subsequently injected into the creed by ecclesiastical authority that those guilty of this vile and scandalous practice may be treated as criminals, being violators alike of the true Mormon faith, of common decency and of the laws of the country.

The pope is very sick. Not alarmingly so, perhaps, but still, very ill.

The Rev. Geo. Vosburgh, of Jersey City fame, has gone to the Lawndale Baptist church in Chicago.

Kearney says Mr. Bennett has gone to England to marry the Princess Beatrice. Kearney's a funny man.

Brehm, the artist has already completed the model of the prince imperial's statue for Westminster Abbey.

All the Gladstone family oppose him in politics, and his Liverpool brother never goes to see him when in London.

The Hon Reuben Stone, of New Jersey, which has been hovering over Trenton and Newark, has finally lit at Newark.

A San Francisco merchant at New York says the coast greatly exaggerates the reinstated Kearney's influence on the naval list mobs.

Bull Run Russell having changed the British army in Zululand with drunken ness and ragging, is in turn charged by Sir Garnet Wolseley with lying.

Dr. Benjamin Brandreth, whose pills have for 45 years been a leading feature of the internal economy of the United States, died at Sing Sing, Friday, aged 74.

The Rev. Dr. Cuthert of Oshkosh, and the Rev. Dr. Haddock, having charged each other with much that is unseemly, aim to lay tales before an ecclesiastic court.

Rankin says his well nigh fatal illness two years ago was caused by grief at the course of public affairs in England and his own private and public affairs in Venice.

Prince Rudolph of Austria went to see the princess of Saxony, who had been assigned as his wife but didn't like her and went home without popping the question.

The engineers in charge of M. De Lesseps have completed the survey of the route of the proposed ship canal across the Isthmus of Panama, and the estimate of the cost of the canal when completed is $40,000,000 francs or about $16,000,000. It will take eight years to construct the canal.

Rev. Edward Cowley, late manager of the Shepard's Field, on trial in New York city during the past eight days, on an indictment for starving and cruelly ill treating children under his care, was convicted yesterday. The clerical old wretch is reported to have wept bitterly when the jury rendered its verdict of guilty. He will be sentenced next Saturday.

The Lansing Republican says: "Presidential canvassing among the Republicans of this State by several newspapers seems to show a preponderance in favor of the nomination of James G. Blaine. We have figured up so far as reported, about 1780 for Blaine, 900 for Grant, 200 for Sherman, and less than 200 for all others, Washburne receiving a respectable general support."

The senate Committee on Public lands will shortly report Senator Paddock's bill for the equalization of homesteads. The bill provides that every person entitled to enter a homestead, who has entered less than 160 acres of land, shall be permitted to enter enough to make up that amount. When such additional entry cannot be made of lands contiguous to his original entry, he may select other lands elsewhere but he shall not be entitled to a patent therefore without satisfactory proof to the General Land Office of having made certain improvements on the land, as set forth in the bill.

The Lansing Republican, in commenting briefly on the forthcoming campaign, says that Republicans should bear in mind the following points as vitally necessary in any man who is to win the election this year: 1st, stalwart Republicanism, which has gone through the fire and never weakened—that devotion to liberty, equal rights, and honest elections, which alone will harmonize our country; 2d, public service and experience in stations sufficiently high to prove the capacity and fidelity of the man selected; 3d, good judgment of and considerable acquaintance with men, in order that suitable subordinates may be selected, 4th, spotless integrity and faithfulness to every trust, with no stains, real or believed in, to be covered up or explained away; 5th, honorable methods of political work; 6th, personal strength and popularity to hold our entire party vote, and particularly to strengthen and solidify the party in the four or five doubtful States, wherein the contest will hinge. Let all the candidates be looked over for these cardinal points, as intelligent horsemen look over the steeds entered for a grand race."

The Ohio, Cumberland, Tennessee, and other Southern rivers are having a regular Fourth of July about these days, and great damage is reported from overflows. The Cumberland is reported six feet higher than ever before known. The freshet has been caused by heavy rains.

In the convention at Cincinnati in 1876, Mr. Blaine received the 22 votes of Iowa on every ballot, and he is likely to have the same support at Chicago. At the same time, while leaning strongly toward Blaine, the Republicans have a stronger leaning toward the Republican party; and their delegates will go to Chicago prepared to take the action which will be for the highest interest of the country and the party. And that is precisely the position of genuine Republicans everywhere. They will have a first choice for the Presidency; but if some other man be nominated, they will give the ticket the same enthusiastic support that they would if their favorite's name adorned its head.

XLVIth CONGRESS.

MANY petitions from railroad companies against the reduction of the duties on steel rails were presented in the Senate on the 18th. Mr. Sunderland offered an amendment to part of the Committee on Privileges and Elections in the Ingalls case, to the effect that before any corrupt practices charged against Ingalls can be considered, bail bonds must be given to ensure their appearance at the bar of the Senate at the proper time or that they, in fact, secured the bribery. Mr. Conover, of Florida, introduced a resolution, which was agreed to, instructing the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads to inquire into the expediency of the immediate repeal of the act of June 8th, 1872, which provides that when the reports of the Postmaster-General shall be printed, the number of copies shall not exceed 1,000. Mr. Hoar, from the Committee on Privileges and Elections, reported back the resolution relative to the Ingalls case, and asked that it be indefinitely postponed. Mr. Hoar said that the Committee had come to the conclusion that the charges were not sufficiently specific to justify the Senate in taking any action. The resolution was postponed indefinitely. Mr. Ingalls then addressed the Senate in his own behalf, and said that he had been charged with bribery, but that the charge was false. He had been charged with receiving $5,000 from Jay Gould, but he had never received a dollar from Gould or any of his associates. He had been charged with receiving $5,000 from Sidney Dillon, but he had never received a dollar from Dillon or any of his associates. He had been charged with receiving $5,000 from Russell Sage, but he had never received a dollar from Sage or any of his associates. He had been charged with receiving $5,000 from Wilbur F. We shall endeavor hereafter to chip in the news from Hayes in weekly instalments.—By Gus."

Mr. G. F. Scott is making arrangements to build a barn on his homestead in the spring.

Stanley Howe Jr., and Levi Howe have been drawn as petit jurors from our town, to serve for the March term of Circuit.

Clarence Hewitt will build a dwelling on his farm in the spring.

Several of our young people in the vicinity of Ross' school house have been enjoying the moonlight nights skating on Susan lake.

The new saw mill being erected at "Shoepenilla's" out to the east of our town, line will be a great aid in developing our eastern frontier. Several of our citizens are engaged in getting out logs preparatory to running same.

The important feature of this spring's elections will be the conditional amendment to be voted for in regard to increasing Governor's salary. Every voter in the state should favor the amendment. It was a shame to see so many of Michigan's best citizens [illegible] last year [illegible] who so nobly supported its cause. EDS. SENTINEL:

Seeing other Townships represented in your valuable paper, I thought, perhaps a few words from the extreme east part of the county would not come amiss.

This Township is receiving [illegible] ...ch. Acres find annual meeting it had only fifteen voters and about fifty inhabitants, and like a numbers closely connected voters and about five hundred inhabitants. I think it is keeps increasing in the same ratio for the next five years as it has for the last three years, most of the ...ral land will be occupied, and will have the appearance of an old settled country. There are indeed many inducements for emigrants to settle in the Township, for the land can scarcely be surpassed in the State, and there are now large openings in the Township, of which I will speak in my next. The only drawback that we have to contend with is the marketing. But with the certain prospect of the Traverse, Petoskey, Boyne and Springvale Air Roads, Everybody thinks they are just in the very best part of the world.

I think the Board of Supervisors at their last session have shown by their action in appropriating $500 to this and Melrose Township for the Highway purposes, their kindly feelings toward the east part of the county, and we hope these feelings will continue.

There is now considerable wheat sown in this Township, and will be more than doubled next year if [illegible] ...ers can be gotten in here to thresh out what we raise. There is a good chance in this town for a saw-mill, and I hope some one will soon locate one.

Say I will ramble on good nature.

CORRESPONDENCE.

What a Chicago Gentleman Thinks of Some of the Ideas in Democracy.

EDITOR SENTINEL:

Your editorial on the article in the New York Sun, in your issue of [illegible] ...quires think. The effect of the ambition of the democratic social relations, now [illegible] ...reading the richest class in America, must necessarily be propitious to the preservation of our free and equal Republican institutions. I need not quote further; it will be remembered. This question it is now getting the attention of the press all over this country, and even in other countries, where our common tongue is spoken. The leaders of the conservative element of the country would do well to turn to America at the present time. When one party will attempt to exact a State, and [illegible] ...rwhelme 1,000 voters in another State, they are wandering if this is the effect of universal suffrage. We are passing through a crisis in our history, that will either add new lustre to the fame of our [illegible] ...bright Republic, or will be but the beginning of a course that will bring [illegible] ...disgrace, and shame, and ruin in countless and bloodshed.

The press ever in the vanguard of [illegible] ...moderate thought—feels the heating of the public pulse; its influence is ever formative, its opinions are absorbed into the very life of a people. Gradually men imbibe one idea after another that the other pass forth, until you can almost tell what [illegible] ...opinion a man reads by the political complexion of his mind. It must be so. The press has an influence beyond the powers of Congress, or even the Executive himself, and when wisely exerted, becomes "the watchman on the walls of Zion." "Ye have set me as a watchman; if ye blow not the trumpet, and the sounds are taken and slain, their blood will I demand at your hands." Thus, Mr. Editor, we regard the leaders of public opinion in these times.

It is a fact that the opinions expressed by the Sun are also promulgated by other leading papers. The ebb is gaining ground that we are not living under the form of Republican government best suited to the wants of our people. Errors are creeping in under the influence of political supremacy.

The growing wealth of the people of United States is slowly creating a moneyed aristocracy, powerful in its cogency, subtle in its forces, it is surely accomplishing its ends. Wealth has its rights. No body of men can make laws to control the laws of a nation. The capital of a nation must be protected, as well as its industries.

One of the Rothschild Kings says: "The wealth of the country demands a strong government. Without capital and its capitalists our government would not last a day. The capital of the country is [illegible] ...economic production; its rights are as sacred as the rights of the paupers who are continually prating upon the oppression [illegible] ...most of capital and against centralization".

The New York Herald says: "Our people prefer them—free with the fancy that they are free because they have a right to meddle a little with politics now and then. In conventions, in legislatures, and in similar places, they chatter, and twaddle and scream like so many monkeys on a jag, over the eternal principles of freedom as secured in the political future, and no wonder the great economic and political questions of the day [illegible] ...always somewhat vaguely understood. The people are becoming educated up to the [illegible] ...ability of the times, and [illegible] ...to recognize in the one side and [illegible] ...the lies of it will be forever [illegible] ...and when [illegible] ...it [illegible] ...is [illegible] ...here will be no [illegible] ...chance of [illegible] ...error. The unsound notions of the country are [illegible] ...controversies going on in Congress [illegible] ...from party. The [illegible] ...manufacturers [illegible] ...the [illegible] ...labor [illegible] ...millions all over the land, will sustain the supremacy of the Republican party. [illegible] ...the Republican party, [illegible] ...success would be looked upon to them."

[illegible] ...Richmond (Va.) Conservative: "The defeat of Butler in Massachusetts was entirely due to the bulldozing of the workingmen of that State by the employers and capitalists, and on the battle ground of shutting the best people of Massachusetts for resorting to this means of protecting the best interests of society from the irresponsible rabble.

There are defects in our institutions which can only be remedied by irregular means, and the most decisive portions of the machinery of our government is the elective. The best men govern in every state, and will regardless of any attempts to deprive them of that right.

The Indianapolis Journal says: "There is no such [illegible] ...in this country, either due or [illegible] ...

There are only a few questions [illegible] ...the many issues constantly arising in our country. Let us look for the causes of these [illegible] ...expressions. It must come [illegible] ...From the political power of the people. From the various classes of people, and ideas of a certain class of people, either right or wrong, [illegible] ...foreign to the best interests of the State. They are almost the sources [illegible] ...terests of our country. [illegible] ...They are the [illegible] ...classes of men who have spent a lifetime in plotting against the government under which they have lived, and then take country for their country's good." They are unfortunately breeding over some imaginary wrongs. Believing that [illegible] ...every man against the rich. Call them what you will. They are the curse of the country they live in. We may be a cosmopolitan people, but these men do not conform on the issue of the times as they find them, but must [illegible] ...their ideas into our constitutions and laws. Their aim is to subvert everything American to their own sweet will. Their crusade is against the wealth and intelligence of the country, and the masses of the people. Murder is no sin in their eyes so long as it assists their purposes and aims.

They form the nucleus of a return and corrupt party. They foster crime, increase mendicity. By their votes [illegible] ...they vote it into responsibility they heap on the backs of the cities. They put taxes on property and capital, encourage [illegible] ...ing fielding paddies [illegible] ...The interests is common spoil to them. These men hold the balance of power to-day. They claim that [illegible] ...eight to ten million voters, who are [illegible] ...to the [illegible] ...they have. They [illegible] ...have gathered to them never [illegible] ...$1,000 in cash [illegible] ...

Can we wonder [illegible] ...a prominent Western Senator says [illegible] ...the burdens of the government, and it should control it. The people are becoming educated up to the [illegible] ...ability of the times, and [illegible] ...to recognize in the one side and [illegible] ...the lies of it will be forever [illegible] ...and when [illegible] ...it [illegible] ...is [illegible] ...here will be no [illegible] ...chance of [illegible] ...error. The unsound notions of the country are [illegible] ...controversies going on in Congress [illegible] ...from party. The [illegible] ...manufacturers [illegible] ...the [illegible] ...labor [illegible] ...millions all over the land, will sustain the supremacy of the Republican party. Or if a summer breeze that stirred
Whiever you was doing,
I think perhaps I might be heard,
And make some speed in wooing.

"O Jessie, if I only knew
The ways of Love's wiling,
What bonnie bird or flower might do
In Love's most secret beguiling,
Perhaps then when I came to woo
I, too, might find you smiling."

A SHORT time ago a little boy went with his father to see a colt. He patted the colt's head, and made quite a fuss over it, until finally the stable man told him to be careful that the colt did not turn round and kick him. A DAY or two since a quiet and dignified gentleman was walking through the street when he was startled by a woman who rushed up to him, all out of breath, and seizing him by the arm gesticulated wildly and panted out: "Whistle, sir, whistle!" He looked at her in amazement, and while he stared she again urged him: "Whistle! whistle!" He finally found breath to tell her that he wasn't much of a whistler, but if she would nominate the tune he would do the best he could. Her eyes flashed and she showed decided anger. With one arm stretched out toward a retreating street car she shook him, off and on something, which sounded to him like: "Confound a fool that can't whistle for a horse-car to accommodate a lady."—Boston Bulletin.

Something About Fiji.

THE receipt of the first discovery of Fiji, published 1873, suggests some remarks about that group, which is destined to occupy a prominent place in the future of the Pacific half of our globe. The islands are situated in latitude 15 degrees south, nearly in a direct line between San Francisco and Sydney, 1,400 miles from the latter port, and about the same distance from New Zealand, Tahiti, Honolulu, the Marshall Islands, Caroline Islands and New Guinea, and half as far from New Caledonia and the New Hebrides, colonies, Samoan and Friendly groups. Amid all those, Fiji, is a central point, with the prospect of great commercial facilities when Micronesia—a name including those small islands of the South Pacific—is well supplied with steam-vessels. Five years ago Fiji became a British colony, but the civilized authority was so weak in some of the smaller islands, or districts remote from the seaports, that cannibalism did not cease till two years later. There is an orderly government, with police, courts of justice, public records, and last, but not least, a regular system of taxation. The group has an area of 7,000,000 acres, much of which belongs to the Colonial Government, and is offered for sale at five dollars an acre for first-class, and less for poorer qualities. The area cultivated by white settlers is 15,000 acres, and no mention is made of the acres sold to white men, belonging to mixed races, or of unsold of the first quality. The group has eighty islands, making an archipelago 370 miles long by 260 wide. There are 120,000 natives, including 20,000 available for work, but, when employed as laborers, they idle away their time, unless closely watched. Their wages are twenty dollars a year, besides food, clothing and tobacco, costing twenty dollars more, making the total expense less than four dollars a month. Natives of New-Britain and New-Ireland, hired by terms of three years at twenty dollars a year, are more industrious. With such wages there is no chance for a white man to make anything as a laborer, and there is little opportunity to make much as an employer unless he has $10,000 capital to begin with. The chief exports are cocoanuts, cotton and sugar, and it is supposed that coffee will be largely cultivated. The dried cocoanut, called copra, makes up nearly two-thirds of the exports; and of the 15,000 acres planted by white settlers, 6,000 are in cocoanuts, 2,600 in cotton, 1,600 in sugar-cane, 1,600 in coffee, and 250 in arrow-root. We are told that all these can be cultivated profitably. January, the hottest month, has a mean temperature of 84 degrees, with a maximum of 99 degrees in the shade and 160 degrees in the sun; and July has a mean of 77 degrees, with a minimum of 67 degrees three feet from the ground, 55 degrees in the grass and a maximum of 85 degrees in the shade and 140 degrees in the sun. There is never a month when the heat does not go to 140 degrees in the sun. The coldest month of Fiji is about twenty degrees hotter than the warmest weather in San Francisco, if the adjective cold can be applied to any month in the former place, or warm to any in the latter. Though Fiji has 100 inches of rain in the average year, it has only 150 rainy days, and the climate is generally considered a very pleasant one for those accustomed to the torrid zone. There are no malignant fevers or malarial diseases, and the vegetation is most luxuriant and beautiful. Taken altogether, Fiji will always be considered a tropical paradise.—San Francisco Alta.

French Statistics.

ACCORDING to the "Annuaire Statistique," recently published by the Minister of Agriculture and Commerce, the total population of France, a little under 37,000,000 in round numbers, is divided into 12,000,000 inhabitants of towns and 25,000,000 inhabitants of the country. On eliminating from the general total 860,690 individuals (who are soldiers, sailors, students in schools, infirm and diseased, prisoners, or monks not giving instruction), the total of a little over 35,000,000 persons participating fully in social life comprises, with regard to means of existence and professions, 210,200 persons without known professions, 71,300 rentiers and capitalists, 2,151,900 stockholders (including 195,000 pensioners of the Government); 1,531,400 persons exercising liberal professions or living by them; 3,827,200 persons engaged in trade, transport and navigation, or living on their products; 9,374,500 persons engaged in various industries or living by them (6,000,000 in small industries, 3,000,000 in mining and manufactures); 12,568,600 persons practicing agriculture or living by it (of whom 10,500,000 are proprietors of their land, nearly 6,000,000 are tenant farmers, 2,500,000 are agricultural specialists, comprising vine-growers). On entering into detail of each of the great branches of the National production, it is found that 4,000,000 of proprietors of agricultural tenants (of whom 400,000 are women) employ—as clerks, 82,000 men and 54,000 women; as work-people, 850,000 men and 378,000 women; as day laborers, 922,000 men and 704,000 women; as domestics, 661,000 men and 663,000 women; and, on the other hand, that the families maintained by the landed property of agricultural work consist of 3,800,000 persons of masculine sex, and 7,200,000 of feminine; 1,240,500 industrial patrons (of whom 966,000 are women) have for clerks 149,000 men and 50,000 women; 1,355,000 workmen and 1,060,000 workwomen; 305,000 male day laborers, and 924,000 female. The families living by industrial operations embrace nearly 1,500,000 persons of masculine sex and 3,000,000 of feminine; 784,000 employers in trade and carriage (of whom 221,000 are women) have 247,000 male employes and 71,500 female; 198,000 workmen and 56,000 workwomen; 140,000 male day laborers and 80,000 female; 95,000 male domestics and 188,000 cooks or nursery maids. They report families amounting to 661,000 boys and 1,846,000 girls.

Three Women in Court.

THERE was a jury trial in Justice Alley the other day, in which nearly a dozen people living in the Western suburbs were mixed up as plaintiffs, defendants and witnesses. It appeared that Mrs. Blank borrowed a wash-tub of Mrs. Brown, and while in possession of the borrower a cow knocked the bottom out. After a neighborhood quarrel, suit was brought to recover the amount. Mrs. Blank thereupon put in as an offset that she had nursed the plaintiff for three days and received no pay.

"Nurse me!" echoed the defendant, "why she did nothing while she was there but hog down custard-pie and tattle about the neighbors."

Custard pie! and who lent you the sugar, and eggs, an' I had to make it?" shrieked the other.

His Honor put his foot down and pushed up a temporary truce, and the plaintiff took the stand to testify about lending the tub and what it was worth. She established the value at seventy-five cents, and here the defendant broke over and exclaimed:

"Seventy-five cents! Why, both ears and the top hoop were off! It was the only tub she had since her marriage, and that was ten years ago!"

"And I've had to lend it to you every Tuesday all that time!" retorted the plaintiff.

His Honor received silence in the court, and the defendant took the stand, and said that her services as nurse were worth at least two dollars.

"What ailed the plaintiff?" asked the lawyer.

"Well, I don't know as I ought to say that her husband struck her with a——"

"Don't you dare say that!" interrupted the plaintiff, "you know that I fell down the cellar stairs! If my husband hit me on the head with a meat-plaster, as yours did, I——"

"I object!" exclaimed both lawyers in chorus.

"So do we!" added both females in a breath.

His Honor pounded the desk until everything rattled, and then a witness was put on the stand to testify that she saw the tub when it was lent, and again when it was damaged. She had scarcely got started when the defendant, who was a witness also was, called out:

"You are not a-wearing as you agreed to!"

"Ah! let I make a note of that!" chuckled one of the lawyers.

"Your Honor, I object," added the other.

"And I wouldn't believe the witness under oath!" put in the defendant.

"Who wants you to!" squalked the witness. "If I couldn't come into court with anything better than a calico dress and a ten-cent lace collar I wouldn't hold my nose so high!"

"This is too much for mine brain much, and I want this court-room cleared right out!" said his Honor, and he turned the crowd into the alley.—Detroit Free Press.

It Snowed Sheep.

YESTERDAY afternoon we took a ride across the Stark Street Ferry, to meet the incoming train and pick up what of news was floating about on the west. The train came in, and brought among the load of human freight a "sheepman," as the wool-growers are called. He had been indulging in Willamette River water, and felt buoyant in coming across the ferry. He entertained everybody in the cars for ten minutes, on the manner in which he showed sheep in his neighborhood last Friday, and "six tarnal blazes of fire" he would not see such a storm as that again if he had to make a journey across the Atlantic in the hope of once more seeing her. Feeble as he was, and his funds being exhausted, he shipped before the mast in a sailing vessel, and in due time arrived in New York. From there he wrote three times to his wife, but received no answer. Almost frenzied at the thought that she might be dead, and being without money and no friends to help him, he made his way clear to Kentucky, and shortly afterward arrived at Paris. Here he met no less than faces, and as the possibilities required for faces letters. They had been forwarded to the Dead Letter Office months before.

Industries throughout the town informed him that his wife had disappeared a year or so before, but no one knew whither. Some said she had gone in search of her husband, others that she might be dead, and others that she had gone to California. He sought the old family physician, but he had left the town some time before. Mr. G. then went to work at Louisville, and made enough to bring him to California a year after his arrival in Kentucky. He searched for his absent wife, but without success, and gave her up as lost, and she also mourned for his death. Neither, however, had married again, and last evening on board the Corinthian Costa was the first intimation either had that the other was in existence. The now happy couple arrived here last night, and to the surprise of the friends of the lady she introduced her husband from whom she had been separated twenty years. But imagine his surprise, while surprise and joy when the mother led into the room a beautiful young lady, his own daughter, whom he had not seen since a babe. But let us draw the curtain over this beautiful incident. Enough to state that yesterday were pledges to each other as the poles are now basking in the sublimity of united affection, and father, mother and child will begin anew the pilgrimage of life. They will leave to-morrow for San Francisco, where Mr. G., who is now a comparatively wealthy man, has his business, and where they will henceforth reside.—Vallejo (Cal.) Chronicle.

An Unexpected Meeting.

ONE of those strange episodes in human life, which makes us sometimes wonder at "the eternal fitness of things," occurred last night at the Vallejo Junction. The tide being low on the arrival of the Contra Costa, passengers for Vallejo were compelled to make quite a descent from the wharf to the boat, and the ladies required the assistance of the gentlemen present. A Mr. G——, a grain speculator, was doing the agreeable in this respect, and one of the last ladies to descend was quite embarrassed with her feminine facilities, which he gallantly took charge of, and accompanied the lady to the cabin, where they sat and engaged in conversation. The subject finally touched upon the nativity of each, when it was found they were both from the same town in Kentucky. This fact made each other more communicative, when he inquired her name, which was given as Mrs. G——, immediately the gentleman grew pale and excited, and asked:

"You had a daughter, did you not?"

"I did," she responded. "Pray, how did you know that?"

"Is that daughter living?"

"She is, and at present on a visit to friends in Vallejo, where I am now going."

"Merciful heavens!" he gasped. "My child!"

"Sir," said the lady, rising, "what do you mean?"

"Mean?" he lastly replied. "Mean? Why, I mean that that daughter is my own child, and you are my wife!"

Almost overpowered at this confession, and in doubt as to whether he was not dreaming, the lady was advised. She plied him with questions—to every one of which he returned a correct answer, when she was convinced that the man was really her husband, from whom she had been separated twenty years. It seems some time after the parting from a party familiar with the event of last evening, that the twain were married at Paris, Ky., in 1858, and thirteen months afterward he went to Liverpool on business. The vessel on which he took passage was wrecked, and all on board were supposed to have perished. The news coming to the young wife's ears, she was utterly prostrated, and was carried to California by her physicians. Arriving here, she took up her residence in Los Angeles. The husband was picked up from the wreck by a passing smack, and taken to some remote foreign port, where he was thrown upon a bed of sickness, which lasted some months. In the meantime he had written repeatedly to his wife, but received no answer.

Believing the report of the risk a journey across the Atlantic in the hope of once more seeing her. Feeble as he was, and his funds being exhausted, he shipped before the mast in a sailing vessel, and in due time arrived in New York. From there he wrote three times to his wife, but received no answer. Almost frenzied at the thought that she might be dead, and being without money and no friends to help him, he made his way clear to Kentucky, and shortly afterward arrived at Paris. Growing Plants in Living Rooms.

To those you that I have some right to speak on the subject, as well as to win your confidence, I will state that I have grown plants in rooms ever since I was a boy. In this way I have grown, of species and varieties, several thousands. Indeed, I have more rooms once had upward of six hundred in the house at the same time, nearly every window being ornamented in this way. You, therefore, are supposed to know what kinds of plants succeed best in rooms. I will add that I have had no inconsiderable experience in growing plants in the greenhouse, and I am compelled to admit that to grow a plant well in a room requires more skill and knowledge than to grow the same plant well in a greenhouse. There is, therefore, no comparison in the merits that we have since I last heard growing plants in rooms.

Some of you may ask whether plants in rooms are detrimental to health. Speaking from my own experience, I answer by saying they are not. I have even had my bed-room windows crowded with plants during the whole winter. It must be observed, however, that some persons have very delicate and susceptible nervous systems, and cannot endure even the delicate fragrance of the rose. Such persons may be injured by, or suffer great inconvenience from, fragrant flowers. I have known some such persons, however, to receive much pleasure from the cultivation of inodorless flowers. Aside from such cases, I know of no injury likely to arise from growing plants in rooms; but I know of a great deal of solid comfort and pleasure.

Time much on the score of injury to the health of the grower. I will turn next to the conditions best adapted to the health of the plants. Since the general use of hot-air furnaces and base-burning stoves, the difficulties of growing plants in rooms have been much increased. In parting with the fire on the hearth and the wood-burning stove we parted with a good deal of pure, healthy air. But we must make the best of it, and have recourse to ventilation and pure windows and doors in connection with some expedients, to be hereafter noted.

In regard to exposure, a room facing the south is the best; next, east; next, west; and last, north. There are some plants that are very well adapted to either of these exposures, which will be mentioned in their turn. There are some "accessories" which are almost indispensable. A barrel or two of good soil should be put in the cellar, and left there to mellow. The best soil for general purposes is rotted sod. A good outfit would consist of rotted sod, leaf mold from the woods, soil, well-rotted manure, and sharp sand or any kind, used with a couple of rows of different degrees of fineness. It is a very convenient thing for a lady to handle. The face of the rose should be fed and made of copper. One rose should have very fine holes. The common handle is an awkward thing. Instead of being placed at the top, and at right angles with the spout, it should start at the edge nearest the spout and pass over the top to near the bottom of the pot, in a line with the spout.

In placing the plants in position on the table do not crowd them. No two plants should touch each other. No matter what your knowledge and skill, or how painstaking you may be, you cannot grow good plants if you crowd them; not at least, what I call good plants. You cannot do it in a greenhouse, much less in a room. It is much more satisfactory to have a few well-grown plants than to have many poorly grown. Place the plants, therefore, in a proper position, and so that each may have a due share of sunshine and light. The spaces between the pots may be very prettily filled in with selaginellas, ferns, festuca glauca, coleuses and similar plants that like a little shade. Syringe or vaporize the plants frequently overhead. Open the windows at top or bottom when the weather is mild. On very cold nights pull down the shade and roll up table a little back from the window. If you have but little fire-heat, you can on cold nights, spread some papers or a sheet over the plants. Do not keep the room too warm. In brief, be thoughtful and observant, and these and many other things will naturally suggest themselves.

HOME, FARM AND GARDEN.

MEAT that has been frozen should be thawed out before being put into the barrel, as the hard-frozen meat does not absorb the salt as it ought and otherwise would do.

A DIET bed (hot mull) is good for hogs, and if dusty there is little danger of vermin. A warm, dry hog-pen, with a tight floor, and banked up so as to keep out the wind, is a comparatively safe place for hogs, and can be cleanly constructed.

WHATEVER variety of potatoes are planted, select the best tubers for seed. Plant large, well-formed, smooth potatoes, as it is evidence of a large, well-formed variety, evidence of soundness and health, evidence of perfection; and in order to produce the best of anything the surest way is to select the best to grow from.

THE Washington County (Pa.) farmers, as a general thing, seed down the ground from which a crop of corn has been gathered, which, where it can be done, is heavily manured in the spring for the corn crop, and then in the fall, with the application of some fertilizer, the field is seeded down and generally produces a good crop of wheat the year following.

GINGER ICE CREAM.—Make a custard of a pint of cream and four eggs put to it. Cut up in small pieces two ounces of preserved ginger, add sufficient ground ginger to flavor it pretty well, and sweeten to taste. Stir occasionally until cold, and put it into the freezing-pot. Care should be taken to use fresh and good ground ginger, as otherwise it is apt to impart a moldy kind of flavor.

POTATOES SALAD.—Never make it of cold potatoes. Boil six large potatoes; peel them while still hot and slice them thin, no matter if they break; make your dressing of the best sweet oil, pepper and salt, to taste; an onion chopped very fine, a large spoonful of capers, vinegar enough to lay it properly all through; mix this well through your potatoes, and you will have a very plain but palatable dish.—Cincinnati Times.

THOSE frosty mornings and chilling winds are laden with rheumatic pains which are apparently lavished without stint on aged people. In absence of a better remedy, it will be found that equal quantities of kerosene oil and turpentine applied warm to the affected part will do much toward relieving pain. All rheumatic people should wear flannels not only in winter, but all summer, too, if they are then afflicted.—Exchange.

FARMERS who spread on a thin coat of twelve or fifteen loads of manure to the acre, and expect to raise a good crop, would be astonished to see it. If quantities of the best kinds of manure will not make good crops, what can? How much manure to a single acre? Two or three hundred dollars' worth of manure per acre is a common thing among market gardeners, and they find their account in so doing, too.

SAUER-KRAUT.—To the many recipes that are given for this favored dish, I will add one I consider the best I have given yet. For a family of six, take one quart of sauer-kraut, three pounds of brisket of beef, two large green apples (apples), these must be peeled and cut up, a few cloves and one capful of vinegar or cider. Put everything in a saucepan, and give it four hours slow but constant boiling or stewing; when the meat is tender take it out, stir the whole lightly, add a small cupful of brown sugar, and let it simmer twenty minutes longer; put the meat then on a platter, the kraut all around it, and send it to the table. Mashed potatoes eaten with it are quite palatable.—German Cor.

AGRICULTURAL societies, if guided by reflection instead of precedent, would offer to farmers, by perseveringly experiment establish new and valuable varieties of fruits and vegetables, ten times as much as they now offer for sleek stallions and pampered gelding and heavy crops from patches of corn. A new variety of the potato, for example, is generally conceived to continue in perfection not more than fourteen years. Fresh varieties must continue to be introduced, or we must take the trouble to do it. He who sows the seed and rears the tree to the first bearing, and succeeds in supplying the place of a despising peach or apple, or potato, is a real benefactor of his country, and deserves higher reward than the inventor of a new shell for dealing death and destruction to the human race, which, by the by, rarely fails upon the real authors of the mischief that plunges nations into war.—Cincinnati Times.

THE following rule for compiling interest is recommended: Multiply the principal by the number of days in the entire time, considering thirty days a month, and three hundred and sixty days a year (as is used by interest rules). Multiply this product by the number expressing the rate per cent. Divide this product by thirty-six and from the right of the result point off five places. The dollars will be found at the left of the point. This rule is always correct, and it involves no fractions except when the rate is fractional, as three and a half per cent. Fractional rates are inconvenient, however. A remark is necessary in explanation of the pointing off. If the principal contains cents, follow the rule; but if the principal contains dollars alone, point off three places from the final result. Although the above rule is, in general, as good as any, it is particularly useful to such as have an elementary knowledge of arithmetic.—Educational Weekly.

Children's Fashions.

CHILDREN'S hosiery differs little in style from that of grown people. Cardinal, seal brown, old gold and gendarme blue are furnished, handsomely embroidered in colors, to match the prevailing shades of the dress, while tartan plaids and broken stripes combine many bright hues.

Many boys are wearing handsome fur-trimmed sacque overcoats, one of which is of dark brown diagonal cloth, bordered with sealskin fur, with wide collar, and furnished with horn buttons. Walking jackets in various jaunty styles are common for young girls, while for smaller children sacques reaching to the bottom of the dress are worn.

Kilting for children up to six or eight years of age are still made in one piece—a fashion both comfortable for the child and convenient for the mother. Wool and silk, and silk and velvet, are the materials used in these dresses, which may be very simple, or elaborately and gracefully studded to simulate a vest and jacket. Satin bands and lace serve as garniture.

Kilt suits, which are still popular, come in Scotch plaids, and are worn with stockings to match.

For boys' school suits plain cloths and cassimeres in checks, and small and large broken plaids, are used.

Plainer suits for girls of from ten to twelve years of age are of wool and silk mixtures, and are frequently made full in princess style, with a deep pleated flounce at the bottom of the skirt, with scarcely the drapery. Shirring is also a great favor on girls' suits.

A new spring suit of light gray delaine for a little girl is in one piece, with a front composed of alternate diagonal pleats of its bege and silk of a similar shade, and is finished at the bottom by a wide fine pleated flounce. A very unique Parisian design, also new and attractive for a young girl's spring dress, consists of two pieces, a plain robe in princess style, pleated at the back, and an overdress. The waist of the latter is in Redingote shape at the back, and in front extends down to form a long polonaise which reaches over the skirt, and is launched together at the back in graceful drapery. Plain goods of solid color form the under robe, and the polonaise is of figured goods in the same or an harmoniously contrasting shade.

Favorite country and seaside costumes will be made, as heretofore, in blue, brown and mixed flannels of fine light quality, and will consist of blouse and kilt skirt. Very prominent among new patterns for girls' spring suits is one consisting of a skirt formed by overlapping rows of deep pleating and a panier basque. This costume is completed by a sacque in Vandyck style, which will probably prove popular as a spring wrap. In spring goods, both for wraps and dresses, light tan, cream ceru and similar shades will be very popular in cashmeres, de beges and light cloths.

Among new things for children's wear suggesting in dry-goods houses are fancy little dresses of fine muslin, cambric or muscelles, with elaborate fronts composed of fine trailing, inserting and embroidery. Hamburg Swiss, or Portuguese machine-work embroideries are employed on these garments.

A very pretty costume for a little girl's house wear is an over-dress composed entirely of Italian or Breton lace and inserting, with a garniture of graceful ribbon bows, and designed to be worn over a bright-colored silk or satin under-dress.

Included among spring and summer goods suitable for children's use are momie cloths figured in Japanese style on soft, cream-tinted grounds, or dotted with tiny flowers and leaves on plain pink, blue or other colors, also, a kind of crape so rich and soft that it has almost the appearance of silk. Both of these materials are entirely of cotton.—N. Y. Evening Post.

SPRING CLOTHING.—The reappearance of green lawns, bright sunshine and singing birds is quite calculated to allure one to adopt light flannels and less protecting coverings. Bear constantly in mind, that air in motion is colder than air at rest. With March winds, the thermometer above the freezing point may entirely misrepresent the effective temperature. We have before illustrated this proposition by referring to the habit of eating a fan in summer. When the thermometer is in the nineties and the face is bathed with perspiration, one is able to keep comfortably cool by air set in motion by that little device we call a fan. It is questionable if in the New England, Middle and Western States the clothing should not be thicker and warmer in March than in January.—Dr. Foote's Health Monthly for March.

MISS CORSON says: "Both poultry and game are less nutritious than other kinds of meat, but they are more digestible, and consequently are better food for people of weak digestive organs and sedentary habits. They are both excellent for persons who think or write much."

COMMON-SENSE and the science of chemistry, when applied to butter making, reduce the time of churning one-half, increase the product 6 per cent, the quality of the product 20 per cent, and give a rich, golden color to the butter the year round. All these happy results, together with many others, result from the use of Dandelion Butter Color sold by druggists, grocers and general storekeepers.

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

TUESDAY, MARCH 9, 1880.

For President in 1880,

ULYSSES S. GRANT.

For Governor,

Col. Wm. B. McCreery.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20 1880.

Count Ferdinand de Lesseps, the indefatigable digger, whose remarking Africa into an island by means of cutting the Suez Canal, has immortalized him, and who is indentified with the new scheme to disarm North and South America, for the best of commercial reasons it here, and being hounded to the greatest extent. If the dogs don't kill the poor man before they get through with him, it will be lucky for him and his family. The very first day after the arrival he was pounced on by innumerous editors of more or less distinction, who, in many cases, gave him just about as hard a day's work as ever any man went through. They took him from one extreme end of Manhattan Island to the other, carried him to inspect everything from the Brooklyn Bridge and the elevated railroad to the sweeping machines of Captain Williams. They gave him a view of the shanties and the goats in the upper wards of the city and then of the superb buildings which ornamented it all over. The fire brigade was turned out to do him honor, and they wound up by taking him over an American house with "all the improvements," not only those advertised by every smart real estate agent, but all the gimcracks adopted by a clever lawyer with a whole stud farm of hobbies which he diligently rides. De Lesseps has expressed himself in almost extravagant admiration for everything shown him, but if he can get through the engagements chalked out for him for the next few days without swallowing Americ can cigar-coated pills by the gross and American cocktails by the gallon, it will be a marvel.

Comstock, the noser of moral, or immoral smells, whose fastidious delicacy revolted at the exhibition in a confectioners' store window of a copy of a famous painting, wherein were depicted some scantily clad damsels, has captured a big bird in his latest raid. A wealthy banker and ship owner is the last captive of his peculiar methods, and he is accused of having mailed objectionably anonymous letters to a number of other well-known citizens. All the stereotyped dirty dodges of decoy letters, &c., were restored to, and a web of circumstantial evidence carefully wound round the unsuspecting victim or culprit, whichever he may be, which it is difficult enough to get out of. Whether innocent or guilty, there is but one opinion among decent people generally, excluding a small and fanatical party who support him, who think Comstock considerable of a nuisance.

The firemen have been having a hard time of it lately. A great fire broke out in Broadway in the dry goods store lately occupied by the well-known firm of Ewan, Peake & Co., and while bravely battling the flames, two of the most gallant fellows in the department, one of those being decorated for conspicuous bravery with the Bennett medal, that annual contribution of the public spirited owner of the Herald, fell with the roof, in the presence of thousands, into the raging furnace which the store, filled with highly inflammable materials, had become. In Brooklyn, another fine fellow lost his life in a similar way. The Broadway fire was not fully extinguished for four days, and when the engines had returned to their quarters, like ships after a very long and tempestuous voyage, all grimy and tired-looking, inanimate though they were, with the men completely exhausted, another general alarm rang out. This time it was a factory in the heart of a dense tenement-house district, and again six firemen escaped a shocking death by the very skin of their teeth.

When a man wants to go to sleep, it is the part of prudence for him to be a little careful as to where he shall slumber. It is true some men, after sitting under the juniper tree, may sleep sweetly in a gutter, till yanked out by a policeman after the devil's tattoo has been played on their heels with a club, but a man must have a very quiet conscience to be able to sleep while holes are being bored through him. This is what occurred to a machinist in Jersey City. He fell asleep on the beach where a steam auger was being worked. When he woke up the auger had bored a hole through his leg pinning him fast to the beach and was pegging away with undiminished speed till help came and the machinery was stopped.

Perhaps it is the full diet of Lent, but with the balmy days gloomily promising spring the average workman lightly turns his thoughts of strikes. There are strikes in several trades with dire threatenings of others. The cabinet makers, piano makers, plasterers and fresco painters are all in a fever, and while iron, crude and manufactured, and in fact everything else, except subscriptions to newspapers, are going up, bankers and real estate owners are beginning to look pretty blue over their future prospects. The bloom seems to be hoaning a little too much for comfort.

An example of the kindness of some folks for the police, has been furnished by a bold young Bathing man recently a sojourner here. It appears that he was engaged two years ago to a young lady, who, as she afterwards explained, in order to find out whether he'd make up to some other girl, disappeared in New York after carefully placing articles of clothing near the river to convey the impression she was drowned. The case has been an unsolved police mystery ever since. The young fellow turned up in a state of excitement to explain it. It was good of him, for it may be taken as an axiom that the police didn't care a rap about it, or any other mystery, except as baffling their conceit. He is married to her now.

A fat but cunning detective a determined dog, a prisoner discharged from serving out one sentence, but "wanted" to serve for other unnatural misdeeds, a crowd of sympathizing ruffians, and a larger crowd of honest German brewers, got up a little impromptu scene the other day, which took about five minutes in action, and was worthy of Pinafore. A ruffian, after a sojourn in the country quarries for other unnatural misdeeds, a crowd of sympathizing ruffians, and a larger crowd of honest German brewers, got up a little impromptu scene the other day, which took about five minutes in action, and was worthy of Pinafore. A ruffian, after a sojourn in the country quarries, was conveyed to temporary liberty by the guard boat, in company with several other ex prisoners similarly situated. Watching for him from behind a big rock was detective Von Gerichten, a large and short-winded officer, who, in accordance with the enlightened police system of New York, is well known to every thief in the city. When Joseph Hoeckman, the ex-prisoner, landed, Von G. went for him. There was a tussle and the officer was left sprawling, while Joseph ran like his namesake from Potiphar's wife, while the sympathizing ruffians as aforesaid strove to detain the officer from the pursuit. In the nick of time a Newfoundland dog with sporting instincts took in the situation and charging out from an adjacent brewery, in a few bounds or two took in a piece of Joseph's garments with a tender piece of flesh inside them. Joseph cried out, the dog howled and the officer swore, while the sympathizing ruffians pounded away indiscriminately at the writhing trio. Then poured forth like angry bees the honest brewers who loved the dog, and they pounded that sympathizing mob of ruffians till they yelled for quarter. The officer picked himself up and took his prisoner under his arm, under escort of the brewers, to the nearest horse car. The dog was presented immediately with a substantial testimonial from the nearest meat market. RADIX.

THE NIHILISTS.

There are many persons, misled by reports and statements which emanate largely from the British press, which is at present badly Russophobic, who suppose that the Nihilist outrages in Russia are the effect of a general discontent of the Russian people with the rule of the Czar, and who regard the Nihilist movements as a natural protest on the part of the people against the supposed despotism and oppression of the Russian government. This, however, is a mistake. The present czar of Russia is, next to Abraham Lincoln, the most illustrious of all the rulers of modern times for his great services to human liberty, and for his gentleness and kindness of character. It was he who emancipated the Russian serfs; who established the freedom of education and set up a free school system in Russia; who has checked the insolence and corruption of the Russian official system; who has lately given the Poles the full privileges and liberties of Russian citizenship; who has liberated the oppressed Christians in Turkey; who is more beloved by the Russian people generally than any of his predecessors who ever sat upon the Russian throne. At his approaching anniversary, the Poles have resolved to send a National address of congratulation—a thing unprecedented.

It is a mistake also to suppose that the Nihilists comprise any large portion of the Russian population. They are, like the communists, composed of the dangerous classes who own nothing, and have nothing to lose, but everything to gain by any sort of upheaval or revolution—the scum of the empire. It is true that Russia, being still behind other countries in progress, has a larger scum in proportion to the whole population than other great powers. Ignorance, which is still dense in Russia, though now being dissipated with commendable rapidity, is there, as elsewhere, the fruitful parent of crime. Among the Nihilists there are educated leaders, as among the communists who were the wild beasts of Paris, but they are of the same sort as those who committed the crimes in Paris which shocked the civilized world. A knowledge of what the Nihilists are already attempting to do will convince any unprejudiced person that they are the enemies of the human race, and that the property owners of Russia, the good citizens, the whole great mass of intelligence, and thrift, and industry, and religion, are, and must always be, in deadly hostility to the Nihilists and their doctrines. The following is from a recent address made at Geneva, by Michael Bakunin, a noted Nihilist leader, explaining clearly want the Nihilist doctrines and programme are:

I come to announce a new gospel which must penetrate to the very ends of the world. This gospel admits of no half measures or transactions. The old world must be destroyed and replaced by a new one. The lie must be stamped out and give way to truth. Now, the beginning of all these lies which have ground down this poor world to slavery is God, who is nothing but the personification of absolute tyranny, and has been invented with a view of either frightening or alluring nineteenths of the human race into submission to the remaining tenth. The first lie is God. The second lie is Right. Might invented the fiction of Right in order to insure and strengthen her reign; that Right which, she herself does not heed, and which only serves as a barrier against any attacks which may be made by the trembling and stupid masses of mankind. Might forms the sole ground-work of society. It should be in the possession of those mine-works of the human race whose immense power has been rendered subservient to the remaining tenth. When you have freed your mind from the fear of a God, and from the childish respect for the fiction of Right, then all the remaining chains which bind you, and which are called science, civilization, property, marriage, morality and justice, will snap asunder like thistle. One first work must be destruction and annihilation of every thing as it now exists. You must accustom yourself to destroy everything, the good with the bad; for if but an atom of this old world remains the new will never be created.

The Nihilists take their name from the word "nihil," signifying "nothing," or annihilation. Their plan is to annihilate all existing forms, laws, governments, property, rights, and order of society. They denounce marriage, religion, and especially all property rights of individuals. They propose to take from every landowner and peasant of Russia his land, his house, his property; from every business man his business; to dissolve all marriages, to destroy all churches and religions; to overwhelm all forms of government; to sweep away all laws; to reclaim the nation to chaos. They say it is not their mission to build up, but to tear down. They have no plan to replace the existing order of things with any better, but they say the process of building up must be the work of succeeding generations, who will evolve out of their necessities, when the ground has been cleared of all existing rubbish, as they call it, whatsoever will then be needed. Their methods are murder and terror. They are unquestionably the most savagely cruel and the most formidable secret association known in history. Their success would inaugurate a bloody and horrible anarchy, compared with which the reign of terror in Paris would be a peaceful paradise.

It is time that the people of this country were disabused of their false impressions concerning this terrible secret order of the enemies of human society, and of all religion and all government, and were enabled to see it as it really is. With all its faults, the Russian government is infinitely preferable to Nihilism, or even Communism. And it should also be known that the Nihilist government in Russia is no longer growing, but diminishing, as the national effect of its fearful crimes in the effort to carry its principles into practice. It will undoubtedly be stamped out, if it does not suffocate in its own horrible sure. While it lives, moreover, it stands in the way of many reforms projecting in Russia, and favored by the Czar, and it hinders the social, educational, business, industrial, and religious progress of that great nation toward the freedom, prosperity, and intelligence already enjoyed by more happily situated peoples.—Post and Tribune.

CHARLEVOIX. - - MICHIGAN

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

BY TELEGRAPH AND MAIL.

XLVIth Congress.

A NUMBER of petitions were presented in the Senate on the 26th asking a reduction or duty on chemicals used in the manufacture of paper. Mr. Booth, from the Committee on Public Lands, reported, with an amendment, the Senate bill to reduce the price of public lands within railroad limits. Mr. Burnside, from the Committee on Civil Service and Retrenchment, to whom was referred the judicial relation to alleged violations of the law and the Revenue rules in connection with the Bell Providence Custom-Houses, reported a bill prohibiting officers and employés to, and claimants against, or purchasers of property forfeited to the United States, and contractors under the United States, from contributing money for any political purpose. Mr. Booher also announced that there would be a minority report on the matter. The House resolution in regard to the adjournment of the 4th of March was received, and eulogies were pronounced by Messrs. Mitchell, Kirkwood and Voorhees. In the House, Mr. Springer, Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, reported a majority report of that Committee relative to the Pennsylvania contested election case of Curtin against Kerr, declaring the election null and void, and recommending that the people of the Twenty-second district be allowed to proceed to the election of a successor. Mr. Cox, of New York, presented a minority report, submitted by Mr. Calkins, declaring Vickers entitled to the seat. Mr. Randall, from the Appropriations Committee, reported the "Star Service" Deficiency bill, which was ordered printed and recommitted. A message was received from the Senate announcing a communication from the Attorney-General relative to the appropriation for United States Marshals in the recent Appropriation bill. A letter was also received from the Secretary of War, calling attention to the fact that the Sheriff, and their deputies had served since last June without compensation, and had advanced sums necessary to be expended in order that processes of courts should not fail; he had been informed, however, that his estimate had been stricken out

COMMON COUNCIL.—The village council met Saturday evening at J. Mile Eaton's office.

A. G. Smith, as the street committee, made a minority report recommending the laying out of a street through Nichols's mill yard to Pine Lake. A vote to adopt it was cast.

A motion was carried to postpone the consideration of the minority report for four weeks.

The committee on fires and their protection was instructed to examine into the condition of chimneys and stovepipes in the village.

The Treasurer made his annual report which accepted the following condition of the Treasury, to wit as follows:

Receipts for year.....$17955
Orders paid.....$16833.22
Cash on hand.....630
$16758.76

PERSONAL.—Mr. N. H. Cook, formerly of Muskegon, has located at Boyne, in this county, and will the present month commence the publication of a paper to be called the Boyne City Standard. This newly county has arrived at such a state of development that another paper of the eastern portion seems to be a feasible enterprise. We extend to Brother Cook our fraternal and hearty good wishes, and hope he may find a generous support. As far as the SENTINEL is concerned we shall endeavor to cultivate a spirit of generosity and fairness toward our brother, and from our close acquaintance with Mr. Cook, we have reason to believe that the desire is mutual. Bro. Cook, you have our right hand of fellowship. The paper we understand is to be Republican. Mr. Cook is an attorney of standing in the place he came from, and will practice his profession at Boyne. We shall place the Standard upon our ex change list with pleasure.

From Banks.

LITTLE SCANTICAL:

Banks has had a "boom" and she enjoys it. She enjoys anything, that is food for gossip, same as all other communities, that are composed of human beings, endowed with human nature. It was a population boom, out of the kind that brings wealth and enterprise with it into the place honored by its presence, for when it came nameless, naked and helpless, but neither the town nor the county will be called on to support her. Mr. C. B. Merchant, who is now postmaster here, will shall assume that responsibility, and the "Bankers" congratulate themselves that it is responsibly and not be choked.

The flight-snow fall of last week has assisted how fit into business generally. The plan of construction of R. R. has job of up at the western plains along the high water, sledging, are busy hurrying down to the docks but the rapid yesterday left piles and piles of it on the road. The floor and coal bags were replenished, and the butchers weights, with sunken full of hungry cattle, were off in search of forage.

The question uppermost in the minds of the average voters now is, who is talked of for supervisor. It is pretty generally understood by the political magicians here, that is to be opposed to the renewal of the County Seat, will have any more chance to bring about than a grasshopper of old times. The incipient autocracy or aristocrat of Elk Rapids, spoken of by the political oracles of Banks and the county, as the "one man power," whoever he or they may be, must be ingloriously crushed. By some unexplained and inhuman cause, pass of lodgeclamum, he has frustrated the will of the people, suggested the boom given to Bellaire, and the safe settlement of the swamp lands in that vicinity, and worst of all, he has frustrated the people in their long cherished desire to revenge themselves on him, for years and years of cruel oppression of all kinds, and at the moment wanted. It is also possible and possible in the course of human events, that our self-sacrificing supervisors, after making expensive journeys to Chicago on business for the county, and after many weary tramps to and from Bellaire, in search of the people will be permitted to pay their own expenses, all through the internal machination of this incipient autocracy down at Elk Rapids. Banks is "on its ear," and will join hands with the put-nose crushers.

The hum of Banks are putting on business airs, and we shall have and reap in the near future.

South Arm Items.

We are having beautiful weather, and business seems to be depressing.

Benj. Smith, of this place, met with a sad accident the other day. He was splitting wood, when the axe glanced, striking him on the foot, injuring one of his toes. He bled for two hours before the blood was stopped. Poor Benny how sorry we feel for him. We hope he will not split those wood for him again, but remember that wood and a toes were made to split.

THE FAR WEST.

The Journey of Rev. Geo. W. Wood to His New Field of Labor.

GREENWOOD, Dakota, Feb. 27, 1880.

W. A. SMITH, Esq.

DEAR SIR:—I have wanted to write you ever since I came here, but for the very matter to find time for writing letters, other than those on necessary business. The journey did not interest us much, for contact to my family as we feared, the weather being mild. We crossed the Mississippi River at Prairie du Lac a small town on the morning of the Sunday after we left Charlevoix, and before we had gone far from the river it became light enough to see the transition from forest to prairie. For many miles the country presented to our eyes nothing but bare earth, small undergrowth, growing amid grass. Their sickly appearance seemed in contradiction the rich claim back of the mill where it was easy and by digging to be stricken of water. Here and there was to be seen a lonely dugout in the early winter, or dead grass, barely redeeming it from the appearance of utter desolation, as the rush of the continental train upon the scene of wretchedness is savage that there it is not even upon the great and wide sea, and towards middle continental he is not utterly cut off from the fellowmen. The high bluffing round every house told of the scarcity, and was in that connection among recently. At once the spacious, as we advanced, the sandhills would become scarcer and scarcer, and finally disappear altogether, and we found ourselves fairly upon the prairie when once in longer to be seen. We never became in reality, as for as our experience is concerned, in the north was as level and straight as the ocean when a flood, and as much as in both destroyed the view over the eye to the far off horizon.

It was really very pleasant through a village of considerable houses, but in the country only broad outspans of the Dakota soil land. The settlers generally did not appear to be growing rich, and we did not see that people outside the city were better off than those on the frontier places of our great lakes. But the appearance of prosperity in the cities and large towns, Brookings, Watertown, Huron and Aberdeen had left a favorable impression on a country never leaving the impression of the sea, and we knew what a country to the prairie.

After reaching Dakota we were more favorably surprised with the country. The land, however, is not diversified with point of vantage by number, of the railroad stations and scarce chattels about them, provided that the country through which we were passing was a wilderness a little while ago, but nevertheless is to be inhabited and cultivated. We were nearly out of sight of land, for in this open country the hills along the Missouri and Dakota can be seen at a great distance. The river put down on the maps as the Dakota or James is practically known as the "Jim" River. Here and there we saw a piece of land which had been taken under the Timber Act, and some pre-emption. Cultivation is used chiefly for the purpose in the region, because it grows rapidly from a to z, is hardy, and easily tilled. The fence that we saw looked well. They consisted a common enough to native woods, is being put in now, as in an orchard, but much closer together, and with much closer top-rail.

The name of the president at this A grower is singularly appropriate. There are no green woods here—except a tree, except a few cottonwood and plum trees on the mission premises. Across the river is a strip of low land about a mile long and a mile wide, covered with timber which perhaps forms a green weed in summer, but the heaviest tree standing apart from another like soldiers in skirmish order, look brown enough now.

Within a few miles, though not in sight, is timber enough to cut, ash and cottonwood, to furnish stove wood and saw logs. The logs are hauled to the mill by Indians on great high trucks, drawn by three ponies abreast. They also make that many more from their region is country would suit him if he had an idea that this part of the state is about it is. These gentlemen were astonished to find so good an agricultural region and the advancement that has been made in so short a time since the settlement of the country.

Ministerial Association.

The interdenominational Ministerial Association of Northern Michigan, held in the M. E. Church at Petoskey, Round Up session on last week on Thursday evening, having occupied two days and three evenings.

Its reception and entertainment by the pastor and people of Petoskey, was of the most hearty and generous character.

The Rev. W. S. Porter, Pastor of the Presbyterian church was chosen President Rev. S. J. Hillard of Traverse City, 1st Vice President, and Rev. A. M. Parmenter of Charlevoix, 2d vice President. The attendance was large, the discussions animated and interesting, and the utmost harmony and fraternal spirit prevailing in every session.

A permanent organization was effected, and it was decided to hold the next meeting at Traverse City.

CHARLEVOIX COUNTY.

Statistics Showing Farm Improvements and Yield of Products.

The report of the Secretary of State for 1879 is before us. It is mainly devoted to an exhibit of the agricultural status of the State, and is based upon the reports of the Supervisors of the several Township.

Two Townships in Charlevoix county are omitted in the report, one of which is a leading agricultural Township.

The total number of acres in farms in the county in 1879, was 34,175, with an average of 101.24 acres to a farm. Of this, 9,426 acres were under improvement.

The number of acres improved in each Township was as follows: Bear Lake, 246; Boyne Valley, 567; Charlevoix, 300; Evangeline, 465; Eveline, 675; Hayes, 473; Hudson, 85; Marion, 1,023; Melrose, 132; South Arm, 4,960. Charlevoix Township being fractional, has, in all, but 4,500 acres of territory. A full Township has 23,040 acres.

The report furnishes most satisfactory evidence of the superior adaptability of Northern Michigan, as a grain producing region, in showing as it does the rapid strides it has made in the production of the cereal. Ten years ago the flour consumed in Charlevoix county was imported from Chicago by our dealers, scarcely a settler having enough to keep his family through the winter. Now we have the following satisfactory exhibit.

There were last year 19,503 bushels of wheat harvested from 1,353 acres; an average of 14½ bushels to the acre. Corn, 17,905 bushels from 493 acres; oats, 16,493 bushels from 641 acres; potatoes, 26,679 bushels, from 283 acres; hay, 1256 tons from 1,091 acres.

In fall of 1879, there were 1800 acres of wheat in the ground, and 230 acres of orchards.

As we have remarked, two Townships are not included in this report, and after inquiry, we find that reports from these Townships would have swollen the amount of crops harvested to fully 25,000 bushels, and acreage and other products proportionately.

Only to those who have resided in the county during the past ten years, can these statements receive the consideration which they deserve. From a forest we have made a garden. From a section dependent upon the products of other soil for the bulk of the necessaries of life, we have changed it into communities of thrifty husbandmen, who feed themselves and help to feed others.

Looking upon the past, we have ample to encourage us for the future. New impetus is being given to every industry, the cumbrous timber disappears, and the plow and scythe follows the axe as day follows night. As the farmers fill their graineries, our villages are becoming markets for their comforts and progress and development is the order of the day.

There is yet plenty of room for those desirous of securing good homes.

Although the smallest of the peninsular counties, Charlevoix is one of the best.

Boyne Items.

SON OF MT. MEIGS, I perceive his name is Boyne, was seriously hurt by a falling tree last Saturday. But, under the care of Dr. Hood of Boyne Falls, is doing well.

Mr. J. P. Dyer, of Evangeline, has contracted with Messrs. Nicholls, Moore & Dutcher, and P. B. Newton, for the delivery, on the beach, of 47,000 feet of logs, 400 cords of shingle wood 3000 posts and 4000 ties. He employs 25 men.

Please allow us to say thanks to the kind friends of Boyne, who gathered at White's hotel, on Monday evening, in a pound social for our benefit. The evening passed off pleasantly with music, select readings, and speeches; the programme being conducted by Mr. Clink, editor of the Boyne City Standard. They left us happier by the influence of their good wishes, and considerably richer in cash and groceries.

We thank you kind friends, and we would not forget our obligation to Mr. and Mrs. White, who kindly opened their house and discovered beautiful music for the occasion.

New England and the West in Olden Times.

IN the third number of his "Discovery and Conquest of the Northwest," published at Wheaton, Ill., Rufus Blanchard indulges in the following reminiscence of the old-fashioned New England cottage and the then existing impressions among the New Englanders concerning the boundless and unexplored Western states.

There are yet many persons living throughout the Northwest, but little past middle age, who were born in the old-fashioned New England cottage. It stood upon a level sward of green, but scanty in extent, among the diversified hills and valleys around. Near its side door was the well, with its "old oaken bucket" suspended from the elevated cross-timbers of the well-sweep by means of a slender pole cut from the adjacent woods. The kitchen was the largest and most important room in the house. One door led from it directly into a parlor half its size, but this door was seldom opened except when distinguished company came to occupy the room sacred to their entertainment. Two other doors opened into bedrooms below, and a stairway led directly to apartments above, used for sleeping rooms or chamber lofts. The fire-place was large enough to accommodate a large baking stove, reached through an aperture in the jamb on the right hand side, where the "crane-hook" stood and pots and beans were baked. All provident households kept on hand a stock of fine-split dry wood to heat the oven—hence the old familiar couplet:

"Pat night, and you must be good,
And keep your wood in nice wood."

The fuel used for heating the room in the winter was a green rock-maple back log, in front of which small dry wood, laid upon two iron "fire-dogs," burned brightly, and in the long winter evenings pine knots were used, that blazed with such brilliancy as to send a glaring light into the remotest part of the kitchen. By their light a bashful suitor to one of the daughters would lose a few games of checkers with her brother, who had nothing to distract his attention. While this was going on the fair one sits nearer the fire, busy with her slate-pencil and arithmetic. When nine o'clock comes all retire but the two lovers, but before doing this the father assures the young man by inviting him nearer the fire. The invitation is accepted, not without some reserve on the part of the young man as he draws up to the fire, and consequently nearer the object of his affections. All these old-fashioned ways are changed now, but yet some of the cottages are still standing that have witnessed them; and let us look into one of their garrets and see if we can find something to freshen our memories of early days. The garret is lighted by a six-light window in each gable end, fitted with seven-by-nine glass, and by their light we will look for what we wish to find. Here are the trundle-bed of the old loom, that "mother's" feet have pressed with measured round as she twilled the web she was weaving; the spinning-wheel, and the "linger" with which she turned it into a sonorous hum. Here is the old hand-reel, two feet long, and a counter-reel on each end like a V. Here is the flax-wheel and its distaff, with some of the tow still clinging to it. Next comes the old "foot stove." It is a skeleton box set in a wooden frame, in which a small sheet-iron dish of live coals is placed, on which "mother's" feet rest while she sits in church in the winter, before the introduction of stoves. All here comes something that would make the tears channel down the crow-tracks of age, if these original tenants of this piece of furniture could see it. It is the old wooden cradle, from the sides of which the hands of "mother" have worn off the paint in her efforts to rock to sleep her rollicking babies. It is full of a medley of cast-off relics—hand-cards, old newspapers, old copy-books filled up with straight marks, notebooks and curves. At the bottom are the old school-books; among which are Webb's old "spelling-book, the English Reader, the Columbian Orator, Murray's Grammar, and lastly, Woodbridge's Geography. Just a what we have been looking for all this time, for on it the name "Chicago" first made its appearance in our school-book literature.

It was suggestive of reckless adventure far beyond the restraints of civilization; a place around which clustered Indian lore, ornamented with scalps hung out to dry as we boys stretched our coon skins on boards, and he who would dare to go there must be a prodigy of pluck. Beyond this place on our school maps interposed a vast plain between Lake Michigan and the Mississippi River, on which were names of Indian tribes whose pronunciation set our stammering tongues at defiance. St. Anthony's Falls, Prairie du Chien, Ft. Armstrong, on Rock Island, and Ft. Madison, at the Des Moines Rapids, were the only names on the Upper Mississippi above St. Louis, except the inevitable Salem, Jaluzic of Indian names, which were always such a puzzle to us.

The Mississippi River was as far west as our maps of the United States went; but on the map of North America the immense void between this river and the Pacific coast was filled up with large spaces lettered unexplored; and on its extreme western verges was a still range of mountains, studding the Pacific coast like the bold headlands of a river. Here the majestic forces of nature crowned the mountain tops with everlasting snow, and warmed the valleys with perennial spring. Here were tenantless deserts and basins below tide water, having no connection with the sea—so our geographies said. Whatever else was there was left to conjecture, and our timid imaginations would paint the sublimest grandeurs of savage life, basking in the assurance of a perpetual lease among their mysterious and impregnable fastnesses.

Our fathers, from whose fanciful imagery the wire edge had been taken off by the adaptation of maps and charts to mills, looked more practically upon the matter, and saw a glorious future for the boundless opening before the world in the subjugation of this valuable region of supply, though now beyond the limits of civilization. They beheld the vast chain of lakes on the map extending into the interior of a continent aimed to the dividing ridge of the Mississippi Valley, with an eye to the useful. Here immeasured plains must be intersected by the plow, farm houses erected, churches, school houses and villages must be built, cities laid out, and all the ornamentation which belongs to them must be introduced. Where were to be the central metropolis of these productions of man's handiwork in the great plateau of North America—the high salubrious plain from whence the Mississippi found its courses, where the great inland seas secreted their waters, like reservoirs for the use of a Nation? The solution of this was yet a sealed book whose seventh seal were to be revealed in their own fortuitous way.

Surface Drainage.

WE predict that the time is not far distant when a thorough system of drainage shall be inaugurated, that our low prairie lands will produce fourfold what they now do. Not that they will produce that much in excess of what they now do in favorable seasons, but that the production will become more uniform, and will amount in a series of years to four times what it now is. This result we predict, in connection with a more reasonable treatment of the soil, which will be hereafter considered.

Farmers who own forty, eighty and one-hundred-and-sixty-acre tracts of these lands will then see that they have enough land to make farming profitable, and if they have accumulated some surplus means they will see that it can be profitably employed as working capital. Many of these farmers own a good mine at home that only requires to be developed.

John Johnston, a Scotch gentleman, many years since settled in New York State. He purchased a tract of low, wet land, which was considered by his neighbors as nearly worthless for cultivation. He had his own convictions of what the land would become by underdraining, and went about it, laying many miles of tile drain with his own hands. The result was that his crops astonished his neighbors. His farm proved to be one of the most valuable in the neighborhood, and he said he have accumulated by legitimate farming the handsome sum of $100,000.

We wish at this time more particularly to call the attention of farmers of limited means, who occupy low lands, to the great importance to them of thorough surface drainage, which is within their reach. Without doubt many of these farmers feel the importance of draining their land in order to secure a more uniform productiveness, and yet they do not seem to consider that very much might be accomplished with the means at their command. There is a great deal of time during the year that could be very profitably spent in this direction.

It is well known that those farms under consideration produce, in favorable seasons, large crops of corn, but an unusual rainfall reduces very much, if it does not entirely destroy, the crop. We would here say that if the land had been drained the seasons would, instead of grumbling over the bad weather and the loss of crops, go over the farm and find out where ditches would be of benefit, and then take a sharp spasm and go to work and make them, they would find it done many times before the next performed on their land.

In looking over many of these farms one will see that feeble attempts have in many instances been made to accomplish this object. A faint outline of some little ditch may be seen which was intended to be deeper in the first trial was left to again fill up. In other instances we see where a farmer imagined about this work with a will, and has cut many acres available for cultivation, which before were entirely useless. This man will tell you that draining pays.

The present is a good time to look into this matter. If individual farmers will make a careful survey of their land many of them will find a natural channel, where a good ditch were made along it, of course, it would take all the water from sloughs, and thus add much land for cultivation, which before was only useless.

In many cases it may not be found practicable to do much of the work except by the combined efforts of several farmers in one neighborhood. In this case they should get together, look the ground carefully over, and if found practicable, accomplish this object by their united efforts. One thing is certain, they will not regret any labor and expense in this direction. If the work is thoroughly done. In many towns it may be a work of considerable magnitude, as a large ditch may be required, for drainage is conducive to the health of a neighborhood, as well as the other advantages.

On many farms there are depressions on the surface of the land which retain the water for a long time before it evaporates, thus doing great damage to the crops, and this fact suggests another plan which diminishes most, we do not consider. It is the, that the last rendered useless, or nearly so, by water, is not the last actually cropped with it, but a large amount that is on the borders of these sloughs and depressions. The water may be out of sight, yet it is doing it work all the same. Whenever these places are filled with water and the surface of the soil remaining land to but little higher the subsoil is of course completely filled, thus preventing the roots of plants from penetrating the soil a sufficient depth to secure good crops.

As we have before intimated, this work to be satisfactory must be thoroughly done. Determined where the ditch is needed, take a team and where practicable plow the line of it, taking a land as wide as you wish for top of it to be, remembering that it should be much wider when it requires to be of considerable depth than where it is shallow. The success of open ditches depends on their being wide at the top, thus giving a good slope to the sides, so they will not easily fill up. After plowing take a good road scraper and remove all the dirt you can to a good distance either side, then repeat the process until you have removed all that is practicable in this way. Two good men and a team will do this work very fast. In many places where the ditch requires to be of considerable depth the finishing work must be done with the spade. We have said that this work can be done at a time when little else can be done on the farm. There will be places to be worked with the scraper, but by commencing at the outlet, thus allowing the water to pass readily off, one having a good pair of rubber boots and a spade can always be doing something in this line in wet weather. Let your ditch be not more than one foot in depth, and at least four feet wide at the top, that giving a good slope to the sides and keeping it the whole distance. After the main ditch has been completed, then every slough and depression on the farm should be looked after, and if possible connected with the main drain. Many will find it within their power, by the expenditure of a not very large amount of labor, to drain every one of these unsightly sloughs entirely dry. In many cases where there is a good fall, if the ditch is well made, the force of the water will keep it clear, but when the fall is slight it will require more or less attention every fall.

After completing your ditches, take a good breaking-plow and run one furrow on each side of the ditch which was before too wet for cultivation. It will in many cases be a "rough job," but it can be done. After the plowing is completed, take an ax and plant the land with corn. Your crop the first year may likely more than pay for the expenses of plowing and planting. The following spring it will be rather rough plowing, but if you will go over it several times with a drag, plant again and you will have a still better crop. Now, after this crop is off, drag again in the fall, and the spring following you will have as good a seed-bed as you could ask for.

It is, of course, better in many cases, where one can afford it, to lay tile at once, and then fill in your ditch, as in that case your land is in much better shape for cultivation. But unless that is done with great care, it is better to leave your ditch open for a time, as you can then see by its operation whether it is of sufficient depth.

There is a large amount of land in the State of Illinois, formerly considered almost worthless, which by draining has become very valuable for farming purposes. This change has been accomplished largely by grading roads through it.—Cor. Chicago Times.

A Large Sow Spoil.

A LARGE spot, which, a very keen eye might be able to distinguish without other assistance than a telescope, of about one-hundredth visible near the eastern edge of the sun's disk. Any good spy-glass will show it well, but care must be taken to protect the eye with a deeply-colored glass held firmly against the eye-piece. A smoked-glass screen gives a pleasant view, but is dangerous because the sooty deposit is apt to get rubbed off. The combination of a green glass and a piece of red will allow a little heat to reach the eye, and shows the sun's disk free from any coloration. An astronomical eyepiece is also good for the purpose, and in addition to the great spot, a scattered, double cluster of small spots between it and the edge. The disk is marked, by the neighborhood of the spots, with the bright ridges called faculæ, which look like crinkled veins of light on the surface of the sun. The great spot is a very perplexing phenomenon to astronomers. Whether it is a mass of solid matter floating on the surface of the sun, or a hole in the luminous envelope, is a question which has not been satisfactorily answered. Its size is enormous, being many times greater than the whole surface of the earth. Its duration is also very great, as it has been visible for several weeks. Its motion is very rapid, as it has been observed to move across the sun's disk in a few hours. Its color is very dark, and it is surrounded by a penumbra, or border of lighter color, which is also of great extent. The great spot is a very perplexing phenomenon, and will probably remain so until the sun is more thoroughly understood.

Hints for the Sick Room.

Somewhere lately I read that in some country house where milk was in plenty, a pan of it was placed near meat in the larder to keep the latter fresh. I am sorry to be so lame in my story, but the principle is to be carried out was that milk, being a ready absorbent, the bad air that would otherwise have tainted the meat flew to the milk instead. My thoughts immediately reverted to the sick room, where milk is often left standing for the use of the invalid; and it occurred to me that if this were the case would it not just as readily absorb the poisonous exhalations that arise there? Why, or how, I am not chemist enough to explain, but we may suppose and am sure water is a rapid absorbent of the taint of paint; and in a room freshly painted, a pail of clean, cold water left standing there will quickly take off the smell. Dip your finger into the water which has been thus left all night, you will find it tastes strongly of the paint. Milk is too costly to be thus lavishly used, but a little—say a saucer full—placed in a room for a few hours, and it it tastes of the paint you may reasonably conclude that it would taste just as bonnie, but I should suspect that if you had less chance to assimilate outside it could have more of your form in the shape of confidence! The idea is absurd!"

HOME, FARM AND GARDEN.

A dozen way to keep cut flowers fresh is to lay them in wet cloths. Take them out of the vases at night, sprinkle with cold water, and then wrap them in cloths made very wet with cold water. The weight of the cloth will not crush the most delicate flowers, while it keeps out the air, and prevents their falling to pieces or opening further.

NOW is the time, says the Germantown Telegraph, to look after the spades, scythes, hoes, chisels, saws, etc., and keep them in order. Many will think it wisely aids. A good grindstone and a set of files are among the best of farm investments, especially at this season. It is always nice to be forehanded, to get things well ahead; but the best of all forehandedness is that which prepares in advance a full set of good and well-repaired tools for work ready.

CHEESE FONDU.—One cupful of stale bread-crumbs, two scant cupfuls of milk, one-half pound of cheese, grated, three eggs, one small tablespoonful of melted butter, pepper and salt, and a pinch of soda, dissolved in hot water and stirred into the milk. Soak the crumbs in the milk, beat into these the eggs, the butter, the seasoning, and, lastly, the cheese. Butter a baking-dish, pour the batter into it, and bake in a moderate oven. Serve at once. After the grinding is completed, take an ax and plant the land with corn. Your crop the first year may likely more than pay for the expenses of plowing and planting. The following spring it will be rather rough plowing, but if you will go over it several times with a drag, plant again and you will have a still better crop. GENERAL DEBILITY.—In this complaint the good effects of the Vegetine are realized immediately after commencing to take it; as debility arises from impure blood, the Vegetine acts directly upon the blood. There is no remedy that will restore the health from debility like the Vegetine. It is a wonderful and strengthening, purifies the blood, regulates the bowels, tones the nervous system, acts directly upon the secretions, and renews the whole constitution. It has never failed in this complaint.

H. R. STEVENS:
Dear Sir:—My little daughter Nettie has been afflicted a long time with disease resulting from Scrofula. I employed several physicians in East Boston, but they did not help her. She was confined to her bed most of the time, and was terribly reduced in flesh and strength, due to some gandular every day. Seeing your Vegetine highly recommended, I purchased a bottle, and before she had taken one bottle she began to improve, and before she had taken two bottles was entirely well. Yours truly, J. T. WEBB.

GEORGE AUGUSTUS SALA, shortly after sailing from the shores of Erin, deferentially asked an ancient mariner who was swabbing the Cunard steamer Scythia's quarter-deck what he thought of the then weather outlook. The reply of the ancient mariner was crass-ness in its ambiguity, but still it was much to the point. "Them as likes a good dinner," quoth he, "had better get it to-day."

"ANY of you boys up to the wedding last night?" inquired Little English of half a dozen bootblacks. "There was an awful give away up there—worst I ever saw." "How?" "Why, when they got all ready to be married, the preacher wanted to know who gave the bride away, and a feller with a swallow-tail coat spoke right up as brassy as cettil be, and said he did. Yes, gave her dead away, and the bridegroom never even hit him."—Detroit Free Press.

A GENTLEMAN living in the northern part of Indiana has been so unfortunate as to have had two excellent wives. He lately determined to erect a tombstone at the head of each, commemorating her virtues, and has only been deterred from so doing by the expense attending the carrying out of the design. Recently a happy thought having struck him, he arranged for the tombstone. The two wives were buried side by side in the same graveyard. This is the happy thought: The Christian name of each wife to be on a small stone—Emma, Jane, Mary, Margaret, Elizabeth—a hand, cut on each stone, pointing to a large stone in the center of the lot, and under each hand, "For epitaph, see large stone."—*N. New England and the West in Olden Times.

In the third number of his "Discovery and Conquest of the North-west," published at Wheaton, Ill., Rufus Blanchard indulges in the following reminiscence of the old-fashioned New England cottage and the then existing primitive manners:

"Many of our readers can remember the old-fashioned New England cottage, with its long sweep of roof, its huge fire-place, its great oven, its spinning-wheel, and its loom. Women were then the housekeepers, and were expected to be skilled in all the mysteries of their profession. Their daughters were taught to spin, to weave, to knit, to sew, to cook, to wash, to iron, to bake, to brew, to preserve fruits, to make pickles, to manufacture soap and candles, to milk cows, to churn butter, to make cheese, to feed pigs, to raise poultry, to keep the house in order, to wait on the table, to nurse the children, to keep the family wardrobe in repair, to make their own dresses, and to perform a thousand other duties which have since been divided among a host of servants. Their sons were taught to plow, to sow, to reap, to mow, to husk corn, to dig potatoes, to chop wood, to build fences, to shoe horses, to make axe-handles, to build houses, to construct barns, to dig wells, to make shingles, to raise stock, to cut ice, to build bridges, to make roads, to keep the accounts, to trade with the neighbors, to go to mill, to attend town meeting, to serve on the jury, to fight Indians, to hunt bears, to shoot deer, to trap foxes, to fish for trout, to ride horseback, to drive oxen, to break colts, to train dogs, to shoot with the rifle, to play the fife, to beat the drum, to march in the militia company, to keep the peace, to read the Bible, to say their prayers, to sing psalms, to go to church, to keep the Sabbath, to obey the laws, to honor their parents, to love their country, and to fear God.

"Our fathers, from whose fanciful imagery the wire edge has been taken off by the adaptation of ways and means to ends, looked more practically upon life. They had seen a glorious future in the wilderness, and were actively striving before the world in the development of this exhaustless region of supply, though now beyond the limits of civilization. They beheld the vast chain of lakes on the map extending into the interior of a continent almost to the dividing ridge of the Mississippi Valley, with an eye to the useful. Here unmeasured plains must be cultivated by the plow, farm houses erected, churches, school houses and highways must be built, cities laid out, and all the ornamentation which belongs to them must be introduced. Where was to be the central metropolis of these prolifications of man's handiwork in the great plateau of North America—the high salubrious plain from whence the Mississippi found its sources, where the great inland seas secreted their waters, like reservoirs for the use of a Nation? The solution of this was yet a sealed book whose secrets were to be revealed in their own fortuitous way.

"Jones says his wife is the most thrifty woman he ever knew. "Why, sir," he says, "she has made two bedspreads during the last two years; made them herself, sir, out of the samples she collected in her shopping tours during that time."

Uncle Remus' Folk-Lore.

ONE OF THE MANY WAYS IN WHICH THE RABBIT OUTWITTED THE FOX.

"BRER RABBIT and Brer Fox was like some chilluns wa'l I knows un," said Uncle Remus, regarding the little boy, who had come to hear another story, with an affectation of great solemnity. "Mighan run wes allows after company, an' crankin' on a pester's 'roun', but Brer Rabbit did had some peace, kaze Brer Fox done got skittish 'bout puttin' de clamps on Brer Rabbit.

"One day, w'en Brer Rabbit, an Brer Fox, an Brer Coon, an Brer B'ar, on a big scrape, 'greed fer ter plant a roas'n-year patch, de sun 'gun ter git sorter hot on Brer Rabbit fer ter git tired; but he sidn't let on, kaze he 'fear'd de balance un um'd call 'im lazy, on he kep' on totin' off trash on pilin' up brush, twell bimeby he holler out dat he gotter brier in his han', en den he take a slip off en hunt fer a cool place to rest. After while he come 'cross a well wid a bucket hangin' in it.

"'Dat look cool,' see Brer Rabbit, sezee, 'en sho 'nough, 'pear like it. I'll des 'bout git in dar en take a nap, 'en wid dat in he jump, he did, en he sin't no sooner it's hine'l fin de bucket 'gin ter go down.'

"Wasn't the rabbit scared, Uncle Remus?" asked the little boy.

"Honey, dey ain't been no wusser skeer'd fons' sence de worrid begin dan dis yer same Brer Rabbit. He 'fear' he had a gyarn. He know'd whar he come fum, but he dunner whar he gwine. Dreckly he feel de bucket stop, en den he hear sumbody 'gin ter holler, en den he see 'im jump in de bucket, en den, bless goodness, he see 'im go down a outer sight. Brer Fox wuz de mos' stonished fox dat you ever laid eyes on. He sot off ter de bottom un study, but he couldn't make no head ner tails ter dis kinder bizness. Den he say ter hisse'f, sezee:

"'Well, of dis don't bang my fines,' sezee, 'den Joe's dead on Sol's a widder. Right down dar in dat well Brer Rabbit keep his money hid, on of I'ain't dat den he's gone en 'skiver'd a gole mine, en dat's dat. Den I'm a gyarter see wh'at's in dar,' sezee.

"Brer Fox crope up a little nigher, he did, en listen, but he couldn't hear no fuss, on he 'gin ter git'in' nigher, en yit he don't hear nuthin'. Bimeby he git up close enpoo'-down, but he still see nuthin' en he don't yeer nuthin.' All dis time Brer Rabbit mighty nigh skeer'd outen his skin, en he 'fear' he mo'n wuz kaze de bucket might keel over en spill him out, in de water. Wile he sayin his pra's ever like a train er kyars runnin', ole Brer Fox holler out:

"'Hevo, Brer Rabbit! Who is you wizzlin' down dar?' sezee.

"'Who? Me? Oh, I'm des a fishin', Brer Fox,' sez Brer Rabbit, sezee. 'I des say ter myse'f dat I'd sorter spring you all wid a mess er fishes for dinner, en so here I is en sho's de fishes. I'm a fishin' for suckers, Brer Fox,' sez Brer Rabbit, sezee.

"'Is dey many un um down dar, Brer Rabbit?' sez Brer Fox, sezee.

"'Look un um, Brer Fox, sezee un um. De waters is live wid um. Come down en he'p me haul um in, Brer Fox,' sez Brer Rabbit, sezee.

"'How I gwineter git down, Brer Rabbit?'

"'Jump inter de bucket, Brer Fox. He'll fetch you down all safe en soun'.'

"Brer Rabbit talk so happy en talk so sweet dat Brer Fox, he jump in de bucket, he did, en er he went down, 'cross his weight, pull Brer Rabbit up. W'en dey pass one nudder on de half-way groun', Brer Rabbit he sing out:

"'Good-by, Brer Fox, take keer yo'sese,
For dis is de way de warter goes.
Some goes up en some goes down,
You'll git in bottom 'fo' I git outen.'

"W'en Brer Rabbit git out he gallop off en tole de folkes wh'at de gyarter long yer. He 'fear' Brer Fox wuz down in de bottom un study, en he 'fear' he mo'n dea he gallop back ter de well en holler down:

"'Here come a man wid a great big gun—
He 'low he want you en you mus' run.'

"What then, Uncle Remus?" asked the little boy, as the old man paused.

"In des 'bout half a jump, honey, both un um was back in de new ground wukkin doe like dey never heer'd er no well, yuth! Dat ever'y time's de case Rabbit git 'bout out in er hill, en old Brer Fox he'd have a spell er so dry grins."—Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution.

Surface Drainage.

WE predict that the time is not far distant when a thorough system of drainage shall be inaugurated, that our low prairie lands will produce fourfold what they now do. Not that they will produce that much in excess of what they now do in favorable seasons, but that the production will become more uniform, and will amount in a series of years to four times what it now is. This result we predict, in connection with a more reasonable treatment of the soil, which will be hereafter considered.

Farmers who own forty, eighty and one-hundred-and-sixty-acre tracts of these lands will then see that they have enough land to make farming profitable, and if they have accumulated some surplus means they will see that it can be profitably employed as working capital. Many of these farmers own a gold mine at home that only requires to be developed.

John Johnston, a Scotch gentleman, many years since settled in New York State. He purchased a tract of low, wet land, which was considered by his neighbors as nearly worthless for cultivation. He had his own convictions of what this land would become by underdraining, and went about it, laying many miles of tile drain with his own hands. The result was that his crops astonished his neighbors. His farm proved to be one of the most valuable in the neighborhood, and he is said to have accumulated, by heirloom farming, the handsome sum of $100,000.

We have taken time more particularly to call the attention of farmers of limited means, who occupy low lands, to the great importance of a thorough surface drainage, which is within their reach. Without doubt many of these farmers have thought of draining their land in order to secure a more uniform productiveness, and yet they do not seem to realize that very much might be accomplished with the means at their command. There is a great deal of line during the year that could be very profitably spent in this direction.

It is well known that these farms under-drained require fewer plows, in favorable seasons, large crops of corn, but an unusual rainfall reduces very much, if it does not entirely destroy, the crop. We would here say that if farmers during these wet seasons would, instead of grumbling over the bad weather and the low crops, go over their farms and find where ditches would be of benefit, and then take a sharp spade and go to work and make them, they would find it the most profitable work yet performed on their land.

In looking over many of these farms we notice that feeble attempts have in many cases been made to accomplish the object. A faint outline of some little ditch can be seen which, was insufficient for the purpose, and which was left to again fill up. In other instances we see where a former has gone about this work with a will, and has cut good large ditches where they were required, thus preventing the water from accumulating on his land and making many acres available for cultivation, which before were entirely useless. This man will tell you that draining pays.

The present is a good time to look into this matter. If individual farmers will make a careful survey of their land many of them will find a natural channel, where a tile and ditch were made along its course, it would take all the water from sloughs, and this, and much land for cultivation, which before was entirely useless.

In many cases it may not be found practicable to do much of this work, except by the combined efforts of several farmers in one neighborhood. In this case they should get together, look the ground carefully over, and if found practicable, accomplish this object by their united efforts. One thing is certain, they will not regret any labor and expense in this direction, if the work is thoroughly done. In many towns it may be a work of considerable magnitude, as a large ditch may be required, but the benefit is conclusive to the locality of a neighborhood, as well as to other advantages.

On many farms there are depressions on the surface of the land which contain the water for a long time before it evaporates, thus doing great damage to the crops, and this farmers should remedy without delay. A ditching machine will do this work admirably, and at a small expense. It is this, that the land rendered useless, or nearly so, by water, is not only that actually covered with it, but a large amount that is on the borders of these sloughs and depressions. The water may be out of sight, yet it is doing its work all the same. Whenever these places are filled with water all the surface of the surrounding land is but little higher the result is of course commensurately filled, thus preventing the roots of plants from penetrating the soil a sufficient depth to insure good crops.

As we have before intimated, this work to be satisfactory must be thorough. Having determined where the ditch is needed, take a team and where practicable plow the line out, taking a furrow as wide as you wish the top of it to be, remembering that it should be much wider when it requires to be of considerable depth than where it is shallow. The success of open ditches depends on their being wide at the top, thus giving a good slope to the sides, so they will not easily fill up. After plowing take a good road scraper and remove all the dirt you can to a good distance either side, then repeat the process until you have removed all that is practicable in this way. Two good men and a team will do this work very fast. In many places where the ditch requires to be of considerable depth the finishing work must be done with the spade. We have said that this work can be done at a time when little else can be done on the farm. There will be places too wet to be worked with the scraper, but by commencing at the outlet, thus allowing the water to pass readily off, one having a good pair of rubber boots and a spade can always be doing something in this line in wet weather. Let your ditch be not more than one foot in depth, and at least four rods at the top, that giving a good slope to the sides and keeping it the whole distance. After the main ditch has been completed, then every slough and depression on the farm should be looked after, and if possible connected with the main drain. Many will find it in their power, by the expenditure of a not very large amount of labor, to drain every one of these unsightly sloughs entirely dry. In many cases when there is a good fall, if the ditch is well made, the force of the water will keep it clear, but when the fall is slight it will require more or less attention every fall.

After completing your ditches, take a good breaking plow and plow all the land on either side of the ditch which was before too wet for cultivation. It will in many cases be a "tough job," but it can be done. After the plowing is completed, take an ax and plant this land with corn. Your crop the first year will very likely more than pay the expenses of plowing and planting. The following spring it will be better crop, and after it is done go over it several times with a drag, plant again and you will have a still better crop. Now, after the corn is off, plow again in the fall, and the spring following you will have as good a seed-bed as you could possibly desire.

It is, of course, better in many cases, where one can afford it, to lay tile in the orange, as that would make it shelter. Serve cold.

COLD SLAW.—Half pint cream or rich milk, half pint good vinegar, pepper, one small teacup sugar, three eggs beaten very light, heaping teaspoonful ground mustard, English; one large, firm butter melon, a little pepper and salt; stir all these things into the well beaten eggs, put on the fire and stir constantly until the cream thickens; will be thicker than rich custard and as smooth; put into cool place and pour over the slaw; stir out evenly. This is the only slaw dressing that is fit to eat. Sometimes a little cold turkey or chicken cut up in it improves it.

HOME, FARM AND GARDEN.

A MAN way to keep cut flowers fresh is to lay them in wet cloths. Take them out of the vases at night, sprinkle with cold water, and then wrap them in cloths made very wet with cold water. The weight of the cloth will not crush the most delicate flowers, while it keeps out the air, and prevents their falling to pieces or opening farther.

NOW is the time, says the Germantown Telegraph, to look after the spades, scythes, hoes, chisels, saws, etc., and see what is in use for grindstone and a set of files are among the best of farm investments, especially at this season. It is always nice to be forehanded, to get things well ahead; but the best of all forehandedness is that which prepares in advance a full set of good and well-repaired tools to work with.

CHEESE FONDU.—Cup cupful of stale bread-crumbs, two scant cupfuls of milk, one-half pound of cheese, grated, three eggs, one small tablespoonful of melted butter, pepper and salt, and a pinch of soda, dissolved in a little water and stirred into the milk. Soak the crumbs in the milk, beat into these the eggs, the butter, the seasoning, and lastly, the cheese. Butter a baking-dish, pour the fondu into it, and strew dry bread-crumbs on the top. Bake till a delicate brown. Serve at once.

A DELICIOUS dessert dish: Peel five oranges and slice in small pieces into a pudding-dish. Sprinkle as you layer with one cup granulated sugar. Boil a cup of water, stir it done up over it several times with a drag, plant again and you will have a still better crop. Now, after the corn is off, plow again in the fall, and the spring following you will have as good a seed-bed as you could possibly desire.

It is, of course, better in many cases, where one can afford it, to lay tile in the orange, as that would make it shelter. Serve cold.

IX answer to the question of a correspondent we say that the best method of clearing a house of rats is to cut a few slices of bread, and spread them under slice a little butter, then spread this over with calomel until it becomes white, and cover it with another slice, which must not be buttered. Put pieces of this calomel sandwiches at places most frequented by rats and mice, and put by the side of each such piece a little combination of water. After giving this a thorough trial we know it to be effective in the rats immediately leave the house, after eating the bread and calomel. The theory is that the calomel creates a burning thirst, and the calomel and water effect a speedy death. The remains are then scamper for dear life.—Farmer's Review.

Hints for the Sick Room.

Somewhere lately I read that in some country house where milk was in plenty, a pan of it was placed near most in the larder to keep the butter fresh. I am sorry to be so lame in my story, but the principle to be carried out was that milk, being a really absorbant, the bad air that would otherwise have tainted the meat flew to the milk instead. By thoughts immediately resorted to the sick room, where milk is often left standing for the use of the invalid, and it occurred to me that if this were the case would it not just as readily absorb the poisonous exhalations that arise there? Why, or how, I am not chemist enough to explain, but—as most persons are aware—water is a rapid absorbent of the taint of pains; and in a room freshly painted, a pail of clean, cold water left standing there will quickly "take off the smell." Dip your finger into the water which has been thus left all night; you will find it tastes strongly of the paint. Milk is too costly to be thus largely used, but a little—say a saucer full—might be placed for experiment, and if it tastes of the paint you may reasonably conclude that it would taste just as much (certain it would absorb just as readily) of whatever impurities may exist in a sick bed, when left standing near it.

Let me impress upon invalids the importance of keeping their refreshments covered. Many delicate persons not absolutely in need of night attendance yet require a supply of night nutriment. I know of an invalid home where almost every patient is regularly supplied with a glass of milk at the bedside for night use. Then there are cooling drinks, jellies, lemonades, and a variety of liquids usually seen at the invalid's bedside, and all more or less absorbent. All should be kept covered. I once visited an invalid who had her bedside table supplied with an array of glasses, cups, tumblers, etc., the contents of not one of which could we say, all being covered with a most amusing variety of glass and porcelain lids. The invalid liked to forget the contents of each, and was amused to lift one or another of the tiny covers and select a refreshment which presented itself to her taste. And to keep invalids amused, and ready to relish what is provided for them, are important duties in nursing. Such slight attentions cost little trouble, while they prove to the sufferer that he or she is tenderly cared for.—Land and Water.

Consumption Cured.

AN old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after has a trial its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his sufferers. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French, or English, with full directions for preparing and using. GENERAL DEBILITY.—In this complaint the good effects of the Vegetine are realized immediately after commencing to take it; as the blood becomes purified by its use, every function of the body receives fresh life, and with returning health comes vigor and cheerfulness. Vegetine acts directly upon the blood, and is the best blood purifier yet discovered. Those who are troubled with any of the diseases arising from an impure condition of the blood, or a debility like the Vegetine. It is nourishing and strengthening, building up the wasted tissues, invigorating the whole system, giving life to the nerves, pluck to the muscles, and health to the whole system. It is the great spring medicine, and should be taken by every one at this season, as this is the time when the system is most susceptible to the benefits derived from a reliable blood purifier. Vegetine is sold by all druggists.

Two wild cats were recently trapped in Clinton county, one of which weighed 50 pounds, is 31 in. in length and 22 in. long. The other, which measure 30 inches and more dusky, 19 inches high and 2 feet long. They were caught in the trap by one leg and have been placed in cages. One of the traps set was missing and the chain snapped asunder, which shows that a larger and more powerful one had been caught. A dog attacked one of the cats and although one leg was in the trap and it was also hampered by a chain the dog was literally torn in pieces before he could be rescued.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

BY TELEGRAPH AND MAIL.

XLVIth Congress.

A RESOLUTION was adopted in the Senate on the 31 instructing the Judiciary Committee to inquire and report "whether any American citizens have been arrested or imprisoned for the exercise of their Constitutional rights to petition this body concerning a matter of great public interest, namely, the title to a seat in this body of a Senator from the State of which they are citizens." Mr. Logan spoke in opposition to the bill for the relief of Fitz John Porter, claiming that Congress had no power to set aside a sentence by a court-martial, the only way Limiting Porter's case could be restored to the army was by executive pardon. In the House the morning hour was dispensed with, and the report of the Commissioner of Railroads on the revision of the rules was considered, the revised rules were finally adopted on the 2d, a party vote—and a resolution, offered by Mr. Hatch, that the new rules should go into effect on the 5th was adopted.

In the Senate on the 31 Mr. Logan continued his remarks in opposition to the bill for the relief of General Porter. A communication was received from the Secretary of War giving the number, age, rank, etc., of officers retired from the army since the end of June 28, 1878. Mr. Thurman, from the Judiciary committee, reported adversely on the House bill for the removal of political disabilities of individuals with the House the Senate resolutions relative to the late General Fitz John Porter, was taken up, and remarks were pronounced by Messrs. Wright, Ferguson, Wood, Jas., Forney, Lowe, Williams, Herbert, Brunton, Lewis, Sandford, Shelby, Hereford, Aiken and Harris, when, as a former mark of respect, the House adjourned.

A BILL was introduced in the Senate on the 4th, by Mr. Blair, to provide for the repayment of expenses met with and moneys disbursed upon the death of gentlemen totally disabled from wounds in the service. Mr. Morgan offered a joint resolution, which was referred to the Judiciary Committee, declaring that Indians born in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are "persons within the meaning of the Constitution where it says, in the Fourteenth Amendment, that 'all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside;' and that such Indians are therefore citizens of the United States and of the States wherein they reside, and are subject to the jurisdiction of the Government of the United States. The House bill making additional appropriations of $100,000 for the support of certain Indian tribes for the year ending June 30, 1880, was passed. Mr. Logan continued his remarks in opposition to the bill for the relief of Fitz John Porter. The House bill for repealing the removal of causes from State to Federal Courts was amended and passed—30 to 22. A motion to take up the bill prohibiting the appointment of enlisting for political purposes was defeated, all of the Republicans and Bayard and Kernan voting against it.

In the Senate on the 5th Mr. Garland introduced a joint resolution extending until April 15 the time allowed the Secretary of the Interior to transfer the United States Land Office at Little Rock in relation to the Hot Springs Reservation. Mr. Baldwin, from the Committee on Commerce, reported adversely on the House bill to amend the statutes in relation to the importation of neat cattle. Mr. Lewis submitted remarks in opposition to the bill for the relief of General Porter.

A resolution, offered by Mr. Le Blond, was adopted in the House directing the Judiciary Committee to inquire into the advisability of taking the census in 1880. The Senate bill amendatory to the House bill for the relief of certain settlers on the Osage trust and diminished reserve lands in Kansas were consurred in. Mr. McMahon, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported a bill to supply certain deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, and for other purposes, which was read twice and ordered to be printed. Messrs. Hopkins and Warner engaged in a personal controversy, growing out of the fact that the latter had, the day before, made a speech reflecting on a certain class of pensioners, and representing them to be unprincipled title to which speech the former gentleman had replied. He now charged that the Record had been changed by Warner, so that the remarks attributed to him (Hopkins) were omitted. The colloquy between the two gentlemen developed into an affray of words, Warner, Hazleton making light of Hopkins' anxiety, as to how soft-spoken, and the latter assuring the former of forbearance and falsehood. Adjourned to 11 A. M.

A CAR-LOAD of exodus negroes was brought into McLean County, Ill., on the 3d, the first that have been brought into the State.

BONDS to the value of $2,516,000 were purchased on sinking fund account at the Sub-Treasury in New York on the 3d. The amount offered was $3,120,000.

A FEW days ago, near Pittston, Pa., a boy named Waring Schooley, aged fourteen years, was found in an unconscious condition, having been shot and probably fatally wounded by some one unknown. The bullet of the fatally wounded boy when he was found into the house.

CHIEF DOUGLASS, one of the Ute prisoners confined in Fort Leavenworth, escaped from the guard-house on the 4th, by jumping from a second-story window. He was pursued for half a mile, and recaptured after a desperate struggle.

A CYCLONE passed over Indianapolis about midnight on the 4th. About 200 houses were more or less damaged, and fences and outbuildings without number destroyed. The pecuniary loss was fully $100,000. The same tornado visited the vicinity of Toledo, O., and, among other damage, leveled a large brewery. Three men were buried in the ruins, of whom only one escaped alive. At Cleveland the roof of the Cleveland Rolling Mill was splitted and one end of the walls thrown in, killing one man and severely injuring several others.

A WASHINGTON dispatch of the 5th says there was $48,030,000 worth of gold bullion in the New Jersey Mint ready to be transported to the Philadelphia Mint for coinage. The appropriation made for this purpose for the present fiscal year was but $5,000, which was already exhausted. The Director of the Mint had made applications for a additional appropriation of $25,000. Application had also been made to Congress for an additional appropriation for transporting gold and silver bullion between the Assistant United States Treasurers.

A VERY dangerous counterfeit $100 note on the Pittsburgh National Bank of Commerce, Pittsburgh, Pa., was detected at the National Bank Redemption Agency in Washington a few days ago. It purports to be series of 1875, and is printed on an imitation of fiber paper, and is the first counterfeit which has yet appeared on the series of National Bank notes.

THE New York Butter and Cheese Exchange caused the arrest of a Brooklyn grocer on the 5th for selling oleomargarine for butter. In his answer the prisoner claims that the act of the Legislature under which he was arrested is unconstitutional and void; that the Legislature has no power to compel the manufacturer of any food product to stamp, brand, mark or label such food product when such stamping, etc., is only intended to restrict and prevent its sale in the open markets of the world; that oleomargarine is not a substance in the semblance of butter, but butter itself, and more healthful than dairy butter, because it is free from the animal matter which causes dairy butter to decompose and become rancid, and that the act of the Legislature violates the right of lawful private contract, and the right of private property. The defendant's case will be heard at the action of the Grand Jury.

RUFUS B. CONANT, the Boston gilt-edged conductor, has been sentenced to the State Prison for seven years.

CINCINNATI packed 89,025 less hogs this year than last. The amount of hog products decreased in a like ratio.

Personal and Political.

COL. WILLIAM G. Chapin, Superintendent of the Shepherd's Field in New York City, was taken to the Penitentiary on the 28, an institution of which he was once one of the chaplains.

In the Wisconsin Assembly on the 1st a joint resolution proposing an amendment to the State Constitution prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, except native wines and beer, was lost—ayes, 44; noes, 51—a majority of all the members-elect not voting in the affirmative.

THE Republican members of the Maine Legislature met on the evening of the 3d and chose the following delegates to the Chicago National Convention: Eugene Hale, Joseph H. Hodwell, E. T. Gilt and Almon A. Strout. Resolutions were adopted reaffirming the principles of the party and urging the nomination of Blaine.

THE Iowa Republican State Convention, for the selection of delegates to the National Convention at Chicago, has been called to meet at Des Moines on the 14th of April.

THE Iowa Legislature has passed an act making the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine as butter punishable by fine and imprisonment.

THE President has withdrawn from the Senate the nomination of Mr. Pinchback to be Naval Officer at New Orleans.

THE Kansas Republican State Convention, to appoint delegates to the Chicago Convention, will be held at Topeka on the 28th of May.

THE Wisconsin State Senate on the 4th concurred in a joint resolution passed by the House in favor of a Constitutional amendment providing for biennial sessions of the Legislature.

THE National Union Greenback Labor Convention met at St. Louis on the 4th. Hon. B. E. Hays, of Indiana, was chosen permanent President, and George W. Brewster, of Iowa, Secretary. Twenty States were represented, and about 250 delegates. At the evening session a platform was adopted, and Stephen R. Billaye, of New Hampshire, was nominated for President, and H. J. Chambers, of Texas, for Vice-President. A resolution was adopted that when the Convention adjourned it would be to meet at Chicago, June 9, and a Special Committee of one from each State was appointed to meet there at the same time.

ON the 5th the Indiana Republican State Central Committee met at Indianapolis and elected four Delegates-at-Large to the National Convention. It is stated that three of them favor Blaine's nomination, and one Grant's.

TWO ASSESSORS at Wilmington, Del., have been arrested by the United States Marshal on the charge of refusing to assess Republicans who desired to pay their taxes and qualify as voters.

COMMODORE ISAIAH HANSCOM, Chief of the Bureau of Construction and Repair, died at Washington on the 5th.

THE Greenback Convention of the Seventh Indiana Congressional district, recently held at Shelbyville, renominated Reuben La Maire by acclamation.

THE effort to restore capital punishment in Wisconsin has failed in the State Legislature.

THE National Executive Committee appointed at the recent National Convention of the Union Greenback-Labor party is composed as follows: C. M. Beckwith, Colorado; Charles Davidson, Georgia; E. H. Jackson, Iowa; R. E. Hoyt, Indiana; J. P. Kenny, Illinois; J. O. McKim, Kansas; H. Nelson, Mississippi; Isaac S. Hawkins, Missouri; G. W. Brewster, Nebraska; Dr. S. Chesley, New Hampshire; Hugo Preyer, Ohio; A. Brownsiller, Penn sylvania; Sam. Hill, Rhode Island; Dr. A. Young, Texas; J. F. Connolly, Virginia, and T. F. Smith, West Virginia. H. M. Pomeroy was placed on the committee as member-at-large.

THE Tennessee Democratic State Convention to nominate delegates to the National Convention at Chicago, has been called to meet at Nashville on the 8th of June. A goal of the State Committee showed nine for Bayard, two for Seymour and one for Tilden.

THE Ohio Prohibitionists held a State Convention at Columbus on the 5th and nominated the following ticket: For Secretary of State, William H. Dean, of Cleveland; Supreme Judge, William Mungen, of Finley; School Commissioner, James A. Frank, of Mount Union; Member of the Board of Public Works, J. B. Larimer, of Springfield; Clerk of the Supreme Court, George Cadwerwood, of Greenville; Presidential Electors-at-Large, Jay Odell, of Cleveland; Malin Pickerell, of Logan County. Resolutions were adopted recommending local option; tendering thanks to Mrs. President Hayes for her moral courage in excluding wines from public banquets; urging separation from all other political associations; commending the action of General Grant for fostering the liquor traffic for revenue, and denouncing the action of the General Assembly in deferring action upon temperance until after the Presidential election. A State Executive Committee was appointed.

J. W. MACKEY is authority for the statement that he has purchased the entire interest of I. C. Flood in the Comstock mines. He declines to state what he paid but says it was over $3,000,000.

WILLIAM H. CUMMINGS, the General Western Freight Agent of the New York Central Railroad, dropped dead in the Fifth House at Buffalo a few mornings ago, of heart disease.

A TEHERAN (Persia) dispatch received on the 31, says the idea of a Persian expedition to Herat had been abandoned, because of the political complications likely to result therefrom.

ARRANGEMENTS have been taken all the citizens of Bris and Mrs. Thos Nelson, of Hast Sagi- naw, the fourth and last victim dying a few days ago.

THE Ire is rail to be all broken up in the Midland Counties and the west.

TWO CHICKEN mains were fought on the 30th and 27th of February at Hammond Station, nine miles from Grand Rapids and Mitwaukee. The former won five out of nine battles. The second main was fought on Grand Rapids and Jackson, seven battles being won by the former. One hundred and fifty dollars a side was staked on each main, and twenty-five dollars on the chickens.

A GRAND RAPIDS woman named Perris was sick a few days ago and suddenly grew much worse. She said that a fellow was once cross in with what she said was some "loss medicine" prescribed by a friend of Mrs. Ferris. The "loss medicine" was poison, and the veiled poisoner cannot be found.

A TELEPHONE line is about to run from Bar City to Au Gres, a distance of forty-five miles.

THERE are 10,000 telegraph poles ready for shipment within three miles of West Branch. Ten men there are under contract until the 4th, and sentenced to be hanged at daylight on the morning of the 5th His defense and the presence of his judges was very defiant, and he absolutely refused to give the names of his associations. On hearing that no sound could be declared that, sooner or later, the tyrants who were oppressing Russia would fall by the hands of the organization to which he belonged, he fell to prophesying that his death would be avenged. Then, thinking the mother was asleep, spoke to her. Receiving no answer, he rose and took him, when he discovered that she was not in bed. Search for the missing woman was instituted, and she was found dead in a closet, suspended by the neck, she having hanged herself with a small shawl to one of the clothes-hooks. The cause was no fear that order to contemplate her suicide, purpose the unfortunate woman had to rest upon her knees in filling the shawl tant. The body was quite cold when found, proving that she must have risen early in the night and committed the rash act.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

THE Clerk of Antrim County lost the keys of his office vaults and could not get at the records. So he sent to Detroit for new keys. They did not come, and eventually the Clerk of Antrim County got into something very like a state of nervousness over the matter. About this same time there appeared on the scene an itinerant artisan, who claimed to be able to open the safe for a given sum of money. Eventually it proved that he had the keys, and he said he had found them. He was arrested, but nothing could be proved against him, since he was discharged and went away merely retiling the officials.

The Chief of Artillery on the 31st inst. will be at Fort Wayne, Detroit, for the purpose of inspecting the Fifth Battery of Light Artillery, M. N. G.

THE Jackson Patriot is informed by one of the leading temperance men of that city that the Anti-saloon interest of the State has expressed the opinion that a constitutional amendment cannot be voted upon at the spring Township elections. If this be so, the proposed amendment of the Prohibitionists, forbidding the manufacture of anything that can intoxicate within the limits of the State, it will be impossible to submit to the people until the State election following the next session of the Legislature, or November, 1882, because, the last Legislature having ordered the vote to be taken in April of this year, it will be impossible to vote on the matter in November next. This probably defeats the scheme, as also the proposition to increase the Governor's salary.

MRS BARBARA BRANDT, a Bohemian, aged forty years, wife of a Michigan Central Car-Works employe named Joseph Brandt, was found hanging by the neck dead in a closet of her bed-room in Detroit on the morning of the 6th. Mrs Brandt, for several years past, had been an invalid, and had lately slept in a separate bed with one baby, another bed in the same chamber being occupied by her husband. On the latter awaking he missed Barbara, and, thinking the mother was asleep, spoke to her. Receiving no answer, he rose and took him, when he discovered that she was not in bed. Search for the missing woman was instituted, and she was found dead in a closet, suspended by the neck, she having hanged herself with a small shawl to one of the clothes-hooks. The cause was no fear that order to contemplate her suicide purpose the unfortunate woman had to rest upon her knees in filling the shawl tant. The body was quite cold when found, proving that she must have risen early in the night and committed the rash act.

An Alleged Solution of the Puzzle of Fifteen.

It is possible that the publication of a solution of the famous puzzle of fifteen blocks may interrupt rudely the reveries of the philosophers who have either solved the problem for themselves or have the leisure to toil over its intricacies. But the conviction that a solution will bear an extra branch of usefulness in countless stricken households prompts the writer of this article in a spirit of broad philanthropy to offer what appears to be one of several keys to the game.

For the sake of clearness let us first agree that the row of numbers next to the side of the box farthest from the holder, and containing the numbers 1, 2, 3 and 4, shall be called A. The next parallel row, containing the numbers 5, 6, 7 and 8, be called B, and the third row, containing the numbers 9, 10, 11 and 12, be called C. We shall see that B and C are the important rows in our solution.

At the outset, instead of getting the lower numbers in their numerical order the quicker way is to get the higher numbers in their proper order on the outside rows of the box. That order, it will be seen, is 15, 14, 13, 12, 8, 4, 3, 2, 1, and we can begin with any one of these numbers and work either one way or both ways. This will enable us quickly to get rid of the four central squares and three blocks. Above into the central square the other block have been so placed (as described above), turn it until opposite its proper place and make a vacancy for it by removing a block from another part. One of the outer rows and shifting the outer blocks around. So easily is this done that we leave it to the ingenuity of our veiled poisoner cannot be found.

The outer blocks having been arranged the puzzle is limited to the four central squares and the numbers 6, 7, 10, 11, which will surely come in their proper order. These four numbers are susceptible of twenty-four combinations, which, however, as we shall show hereafter, may be resolved into two, namely: 6, 7, 10, 11 and 6, 7, 11, 10. 6 and 10 row C 11, 10; and a single inversion (row B correct and 11, 10 in row C). The double inversion is solved as follows, understanding the mandatory word move before each of the numbers which follow:

12, 8, 9, 10, 11, 7, 10, 6, 8, 11, 6, 10, 7, 6, 10, 7, 6, 10, 11, 12.

Let the foregoing formula be called N. The only case in which row B correct and 11, 10 in row C), which seems to involve the whole secret of the puzzle, will be solved by the following formula:

12, 8, 7, 10, 11, 6, 10, 7, 8, 11, 7, 10, 6, 7, 11, 8, 10, 11, 7, 6, 11, 10, 8, 7, 10, 11, 6, 10, 7, 8, 11, 7, 10, 6, 7, 11, 8, 12. We have now 7, 11 in row B and 5, 10 in row C. And to solve the order block until number 5 is shifted four places and is next to 6. Move the ten one-quarter around and it is in place. The following formula is complete. Let the foregoing formula be called Y.

We have now disposed of three of the twenty-four combinations possible with the four central numbers. The three are: (1) The right order, (2) one double inversion and (3) one single inversion. Any one of the remaining twenty-one combinations can be quickly brought into one of the foregoing three by applying to them repeatedly the method of moves in formula X or Y. Any one of these twenty-one combinations having been taken from the foregoing three by applying to them repeatedly the method of moves in formula X or Y, the operator will observe that the first eight moves of formula X, or both moves of formula Y, will restore the combination to its original order. Hence, if the combination be not one of the three original ones, the first eight moves of formula X, or both moves of formula Y, will change it to one of the other two original ones. Then, if the combination be not one of the two original ones, the first eight moves of formula X, or both moves of formula Y, will change it to the remaining original one. Then, if the combination be not one of the three original ones, the first eight moves of formula X, or both moves of formula Y, will restore it

"Norman" Expresses His Views on Editors and other important Matters.

EDITOR SENTINEL:

In our younger days we had a sublime dread of ye editor—His sanctum was to us, far more dreaded than even the frowns of the pedagog. We know thatsome where in that awful precinct was the child, who wielded such a scorching pen, and who somehow seem'd to learn everything; and in words that burn'd, held up the deeds of a troop of harum scarum boys, when they had been in some mischievous scrape.

Illiusfel delusons!! How little we know them, that every cur thinks he has a right to yelp at the editor. Some of them telling him in pretty plain terms, that any other paper is better than his, while some holder than the rest, thinking they are imbued with a spirit that ought to shine in the world, get mad because their effusions are consigned to the waste baskets, and tell the editor he "don't know how to run his paper."

How often have we seen letters coming to ye editor saying. If so and so, continue those letters, (on some really interesting topics,) "to shut him off," they don't care for such trash. If another subscriber writes on horses or cattle, the editor is coolly invited to "sit down on him." If another writes on dogs, or sheep, "we don't want such dog-goned stories at that" and says, "cut off his wind."

Then again we have come to know that a newspaper man must be brave and fearless as a lion, always be ready for a fight if one comes along, determined to speak the truth and show up fraud no matter how it is disguised.

There are some men who choose the paper to vent their personal spite against another. Others again are as opposed to wrong doing and evil, that they supply the editor with the items of their neighborhood, and thus often expose and rebuke some flagrant sin that hides itself under the shadow of the night, perhaps these are some of the editor's best friends.

They believe that a wrong brought into public gaze, and the wrong doer exposed, is a fitting punishment far better than dragging a case into the law courts. So it is all know, as those who are well enough to denounce such wrong, and point out the evil doers as on the finger of scorn shall be pointed at them, and every one see them stripped of their false clothing.

There are some whom the editor is pleased to see. They come, speak a few pleasant words, encroach on no one's time, finish their business and go.

And now Mr. Editor by your leave, I'll change the subject.

Looking through the Michigan exchanges during the past week, I notice that considerable money is to be spent in the coming summer on the improvements of the various Summer Resorts.

I saw that more than $1000 was to be spent on the resort grounds at Charlevoix. We have often thought it strange that all through Michigan, settlers chop down every tree on their homesteads, even tho' they intend in coming years to plant others. So in the instance of the Resort it has occurred to me. Why is it necessary to cut down all the trees?

A sum of money spent every year in mowing young trees to the grounds, and in planting a belt of firs along the banks of the upper river, would in five years make a beautiful spot of the Resort. Cultivation of flowers and flowering beds, will come with the increasing stability and wealth of the Association, but trees that form so important a part in all landscape gardening, and parks take long years to grow, and ought to be planted during this spring.

I am led to make these remarks by a conversation listened to during one of the trips on the Oscelle. A party of ladies and gentlemen were coming home from the Jordan. as they neared the mouth of the upper river one of the ladies remarked: Why in the name of common sense they did not have some trees around the grounds? A gentleman, a civil engineer, said it was as bald a spot as he had seen since he left home, turning to me, he said. Don't these people up here know how to move trees? A few trees put in there would improve that place wonderfully. We answered him,—My Dear Sir,—You come up here with me five years hence on a trouting trip, and I guess you will find a great improvement in those grounds.

OMEGA.

This will give some idea of what others think of the Resort, who come up in the summer visiting, or for the trouting.

NORMAN.

Norwood Notes.

Mr. John Smith has returned from his visit to friends in Canada.

Several of our townsmen have arrived home from their work in the woods, including Mr Amos Noyes, Frank Noyes, Charles Winner, Harmon Wilson and Henry Kibbler.

Dr. Chamberlain of Detroit has medical charge of the physically diseased portion of our community. His abode is at the residence of P. J. Meech, Esq.

Mrs. John Muirhead is reported as being no better.

Mr. Chester Hardy has removed to his farm at South Arm.

It is said to think that the young men who traveled so late Sunday evening that the horse broke loose and ran home, can have no more pleasant sleigh rides on large ground this winter, unless the governor gets the cutter fixed up, which is probably want to be considerate enough to do.

It is now evident to all who care to know that spiritous liquor has been sold all along through the winter, right under our noses, and that without the tax which the law imposes, being paid. It does seem as though one good respectable store ought to be well enough supported in Norwood without being obliged to go into the unlawful sale of intoxicating drinks to make a livelihood.

From Springvale.

ED. SENTINEL:

The good people of the south east part of the town, has a donation at the house of Wm. Murton for the benefit of brother Hollis who has labored assiduously since last fall, and is a very fluent speaker. He organized a society of about 15 members. He is of the Protestant Methodist persuasion.

The Rev Mr. Sanders of the Evengelical Denomination, has had quite an extensive revival in the north east part of our Township—membership, about 15. I hope that the two churches will continue their labor of love, until a good, y number are happily converted.

Tim Odd fellows of Pioneer Lodge No. 218 in this Township, are looking up, and from all reports are in a prosperous condition, both numerically and finan dally. I was told that they had an addition of five members within the last four weeks, may they never cease in their labor of honesty love and charity.

Elija Franks, who has a homestead on Section 12, just arrived from Pontiac, via Gaylord, with a yoke of working cattle and wagon. The prospects are such that he will drop the yoke of bachelor and cultivate one of Springvale's fair daughters, of which there are quite a few. I also learned that a gentleman from Saginaw, has bought of the Rail Road Co.'s lands.

Everybody is making preparations to manufacture maple sugar.

JAY.

South Arm Items.

We are having any desired amount of frozen weather up here.

Some of our townsmen have been busy ing themselves getting out ties.

Mrs. Samuel Rogers of this town is the Champion knitter. She can knit 200 different designs. She has this winter knit 50 pairs of mittens and has made 50 straw hats, besides doing the work of her house. Her little daughter 8 years old braided enough straw for five hats.

The parents of H. C. Scofield have moved out here, and are going to make it their home.

Mr. Frank Raney of Hillsdale Co., Mich has removed here, and is going to work the Nickey farm. Also Mr. Hugh Whitford of York state has removed his family and is going to purchase a farm.

The home of Mr. Charles Henley of this ... was destroyed by fire the ... this month. The house was a good frame house, loss about $500, with no insurance.

Jeremiah Wood of this place, while snoring the struck his foot with the axe, crushing the axe completely through the foot, cutting it open the whole length. Dr. Willard was called to dress the wound and claims it to be as bad as he ever saw and does not think Mr. Wood will be able to be around for three months.

Wm. Sexsmith who has been teaming in Smith's lumber camps near Cheboygan has returned home hale and hearty, and is ready for the summer's campaign on the home stead.

Now is the time for every farmer in Illeyes to begin to make arrangements to put in a larger acreage of spring crops than ever before that he may have plenty for his own consumption and a little to spare.

From Banks.

ED SENTINEL:

March came in with a deceptive smile on its countenance, but its true inward nous was soon made manifest, and no doubt will go through its allotted course of 1880 in the usual style of a whole month ers. Old Boreas is fierce and angry comes down from his northern home, rushing his fast in the face of the coming spring, and in terror she turns and flees.

The blue jays after a reconnoiter of a few days decided that it was too early to go to house keeping yet, and have joined in a tour to the south.

The enterprising crows that arrived last week to locate homesteads, and stake out claims in our next summer's cornfields, have left suddenly to join in a six weeks Camp Meeting and Sunday School congress down in Indian some-here, where they will discuss the best methods of pulling up sucker cane, the importance of keeping out of the way of the squire's blunderbuss, frauds, and cheats discussed, humbugs exploded. The imposition played on them in the shape of old clothes stuffed with straw will be shown up for the benefit of the children, &c.

The leader, a long faced old deacon, with a copy of the Detroit Democrat under his wing asked me for a copy of the SENTINEL, wants to show the con... back of such crimes, and prove to his sect that there is such a thing as total depravity.

People that showed so much egotistic distress in their consciousness last week and the week before, are looking better, and take some interest in brushes and combs.

L. M. Kanagy, who closed his school last week on account of sickness, has resumed his labors again.

The communion service of the Congregational Church of Banks, conducted by the pastor, Rev. N. L. Otis, was well attended and interesting. There was an accession of four members to their number—all heads of families—one by letter, three on profession.

We are seriously perplexed down here. The ghost of the Greenback party of Banks, has returned and is shaking its gory locks at the living mens of the day. Did you ever hear of such a freak, to believed corpse, that was so thoroughly killed and unmistakably dead? It met in the school house of District No. 2, on the Siam road on Wednesday evening of this week; for what object and purpose I am unable to state, but am informed that it was a genuine Greenback meeting. They cling to blasted hopes with a dogged tenacity worthy of a really honest cause. Such energy and devotion to living issues would bring honor and renown to a corpse, too much decayed for handling with safety, or ever to become a respectable fossil, can bring nothing but contempt and political ostracism.

Mr. H. C. Dreger is about effecting an exchange of property with a widow lady from Wayne, eighteen miles out from Detroit, where he expects to find lighter and more remunerative employment as cabinet maker and builder. He is master of his trade, and a good citizen.

EDITOR SENTINEL:

SIR:—You may have wondered why I should send for a copy of your paper. The truth is, a number of men here have the western fever and we wanted to know how things moved in your part of the world. I am especially interested in the town of Banks (which by the way ought to be in your county.) You have a short letter from there in your last. Could your correspondent be persuaded to keep on in that line, giving some notes of progress in improvement, population, business &c. No better form of advertisement can be found than a spicy letter full of local incidents.

I shall continue taking your paper for the present at least, and hope you will succeed in your efforts to promote intelligence and enterprise among your patrons, but don't fail to give us news from Banks

Yours &c.,

Sayings from Hayes.

BY GIX.

Oh that we could have interviewed Mrs. Gossip this week, or the man that struck Billy Patterson.

Our tie men are taking advantage of the present cold snaps and getting their ties out of the swamps.

Mr. Speidel has made arrangements to go to Kalamazoo, at which place he contemplates teaching in the German language.

A lively runaway occurred last Saturday near Hargest. One of Mr. Johnson's horses driven by Cornelius Barry took fright at the wreck of the stage near the ox-bible, and concluded to bust things, which he accordingly did. No lives lost, but the cutter looked sad when the horse got through with the fun.

Wm. Sessions who has been teaming in Smith's lumber camps near Cheboygan has returned home hale and hearty, and is ready for the summer's campaign on the home stead.

Now is the time for every farmer in Hayes to begin to make arrangements to put in a larger acreage of spring crops than ever before that he may have plenty for his own consumption and a little to spare.

THE FURNACE.

The Company's Plans—Necessity for Pent Waters on the Upper River Question.

Col. McPlashen, of the Furnace Co., has shown us tracings of the working plans for the casting house and other buildings for the iron furnace and he states that you are now on the weather permits, and the upper river between Round and Pine Lake deepened to admit their vessels, the Company will place a large force of men and push forward the furnace works rapidly to completion.

It is expected to begin manufacturing iron in July, but before the work can go on at the buildings, it is absolutely necessary that the Company's vessels get up to the site. This can only come after the ice is deepened, and to do this there has, as yet, only been somewhat about two thirds of the necessary funds. Col. McPlashen hopes that all who have any subscribed will do so at once, and those who have, will increase theirs a little. When this is done the whole matter will be accomplished, and the beautiful Lake and Arm thrown open to large vessels. Shippers themselves have confessed that lighterage for a single season has cost them individually, from $400 to $600, and not when they have put down their names for $25 to $50 think they have done their duty.

A. B. Lent General Passenger agent of the G. R. & I. R. R. says the Northern Tourists could be coming out under his personal supervision and has authorized us to call it. Advertisements for the pages, and where some decent hotels and resorts can be found. Send us More. Hunt & Wise.

New Boniface.—Mr. Harwood, who has for the past two years had charge of Cheboygan's harbor improvements, has been assigned to the charge of the harbors on the east shore of Lake Michigan, in addition to his previous department. This change puts our Charlevoix harbor in Col. Harwood's district. We regret Col. Mansfield's transfer, but are fully satisfied that the interest is of our harbor will be fully looked after under Col. Harwood's supervision.

"Absolute Pure."—Our excellent good friend "Cheriscus" has gone, and everybody weeps. A shade of sadness pervades everything, which can only be dispelled by his return. Q. "Cheriscus," why did you go? Come back and smile upon us with thy benign and heavenly countenance. Beam upon us as of yore. By the way, while we think of it, a correspondent of the Little Traverse Republican compliments our friend as follows in the last issue of that paper, in speaking of the recent Inter Denominational Ministerial Association:

One of them at least was a direct descendent of a patriotic orator of revolutionary fame. He (the descendant) told the children, in celestially, in a tra sinnies speech, that his ancestor stirred up the bile of a Pioneer Hall audience once, by an oration five hours in length. I had always supposed that I knew the provocation that led our forefathers to fight, but here is a possible new solution. Call in your histories and re-write the story of the revolutionary struggle. Think, Mr. Editor of the muscular action required to warble a man a paw and pump his belows for four hours of time; but all this is nothing compared with the wear and tear of the imagination ... listen to sermons.

This and much more, about whom my pen has seems to do with than with the I. D. M. A., furnished abundance of amusement to the audience. Nevertheless brings more in his market than a good name. Under the nom de plume of "Cheriscus," he has recently been making an assault on Presiding Elder A. J. Eldred, in the columns of the Emmet Co. Democrat. In the interests of harmony a preacher was expected from him inactive would not allude to the matter or circumstance during the session of the conventions. He must have forgotten his promise, for he never missed an opportunity to provoke a contest. But, as we said the E. D. didn't carry shot small enough to bring down such game, and would not know what to do with it if he had it bagged. He has also persistently misrepresented the M. E. pastor at Charlevoix, and made several personal flings at him, but escaped with a whole skin because his opponent had no ammunition to throw away. He seemed to be constant it looking for a hornet's nest, that he might prod it with a stick, or for an abrasion of the cuticle that he might pour in the caustic, instead of the healing balm or soft words out of a charitable heart. Altogether, we wish the Democrat much joy in its new bedfellow

Saturday Night in a Kansas Cattle Town.

THE dullness which had so weighed upon us through the long, sweltering afternoon was but a lull, we soon learned, and not a stagnation. With the first approach of darkness the lethargic town rubbed its eyes, so to speak, and leaped to its feet; and in a twinkling, it seemed (like an incantation, Eastman said), Grand avenue was a carnival of light and motion and music. The broad board sidewalks were crowded with promenaders; smiling groups passed in and out of the drinking saloons and gambling places; in every quarter glasses clinked and dice rattled (is there another sound in the world like that of shaken dice?); violins, flutes and cornets sent out cager, inviting strains of waltz and polka from a score or more establishments, and a brass band was playing patriotic airs in front of the theater, where, cdifit enough, the grisly morality of "Ten Nights in a Bar-Room" was about to be presented, "with the full strength of the company in the cast." Everywhere the cow-boys made themselves manifest, and now in the soiled and dingy jeans of the trail, then in a suit of nearly buttoned corduroy, and again in affluence of broadcloth, silk hat, gloves, cane and sometimes a clerical white neck-tie. And everywhere, also, shared and shone the Lone Star of Texas—for the cow-boy, wherever he may wander, and however he may change, never forgets to be a Texan, and never spends his money or lends his prowess to a concern that does not in some way recognize the emblem of his native State; so you will see in Dodge like New Shanghai a general pandering to this sentiment, and lone stars abound of all sizes and hues, from the big disfiguring white ones on the backs of coats down to the little pink ones stitched in silk on the cowboy's shilling bandkerchief. Barring these numerous stars, the rich lights, and the music, we missed sight of any special efforts to beguile or entrap passers-by—perhaps because we were not looking for them; nor was there for some hours a sound to reveal the spirit of veiled and utter riotousness which the cheerful outside so well belied. It was in the main much the kind of scene one would be apt to conjecture for an Oriental holiday. But as the night sped on, the festivities deepened, and the jovial aspect of the picture began to be lowered and stained with a subtle, rebuking something, which gradually disclosed the passion, the crime, the depravity, that really vivified and warped it all, and made it infernal. The saloons became clamorous with profanity and ribald songs and laughter. There were no longer any peaceful groups on the sidewalks, save once in a while a single tiptoed and staggering fellow, with a difficulty in his course, lips over some such thing as "The Girl I Left Behind Me." As inflamed and quivering fierceness crept into the busy music. The lights paled, flickered, and here and there went out, and a serio-stability gripped the window-shutters slammed to with angry creaks. And at length, as we looked and listened, there was a sudden report of a pistol, with a shriek behind it, was borne toward us from a turbulent dancing-hall to verify its kind of coming and probable homicide, and to be succeeded by a close but brief halt in the music (audible, certainly, for the removal of the victim). Henry King, in Scribner's Monthly.

The Courtesy of Promptness.

IS AN law less of popular proverbs, there is none which is more or truer than the old Latin declaration that "he gives twice who gives quickly." Nor is it only in charitable deeds that the advantages of promptness are thus manifest; for there is scarcely a line of human conduct in which such celerity is as consistent with prudent action is so found to be an effective promoter of good results.

But while all are ready to admit that promptness in thought, word and deed is an excellent characteristic, and one which is of great advantage to him of whose life it is an element, too many regard it as a matter within their own concern, and not affecting the interest or the comfort of others. If they choose to be a little dilatory, they confess that they are doing themselves some harm thereby, but declare that it is their own business with which no body else has anything to himself, in point of fact, however, a lack of due promptness in one's own actions, however personal and individual the matter may seem, is quite sure to be a marked inconvenience or discomfort or possible loss to some one else. In this social world, where no one can live for himself, and where the whole fabric of society is woven with threads of mutual assistance, one man's neglect or failure must work injury to others; and this is especially true in matters of time. If you delay to do your part of any work, you are actually stealing time which does not belong to you, and may be thus diminishing the length of the working life of your friend or neighbor, or of some one whom you never met with know. An unanswered letter, an undone errand, an unspoken message, an imperformed piece of work—if such things as these worked injury only to the lazy or forgetful man who has neglected his duty, the loss to the world's good work would still be material, but the injury is far greater because it hinders or destroys that which would have been done by some one else, or many others. And the gentlewoman, by their lack of promptness, may impede great works on the part of the world's best laborers.

Indeed, it may truly be said that, if promptness is not always a characteristic of great men, it is an essential mark of true greatness, and that its lack is a defect, not an eccentricity. As a rule, the most successful and competent persons, in any department of human effort, are those who most constantly bear in mind the duty of undelayed action. It is not the great generals, or professional men, or statesmen, who are most negligent of the lesser duties of life, in all matters where quickness is necessary or desirable. Those who are the busiest are pretty sure to be the most prompt, for without trustworthy readiness they could hardly have achieved successs to begin with, nor kept it when won. It is the little people of the intellectual world, or the world of business, who make the most fuss about "not having time" to do this or that. The Department of State, the large mercantile establishment, or the world-famous professional man, returns a prompt reply to your question of business; while it is the cheap cobbler or the cross-roads lawyer who keeps you waiting for a month, and disappoints you at last.

A failure to arrange one's affairs with a view to their prompt management is most often due to shiftlessness, or incapacity, or downright wickedness, than to an overwhelming pressure of duties, or to an accidental overwork. It was brutality, not greatness, which led Napoleon to leave all letters unopened for six weeks, because in that time nine out of ten would answer themselves. It was mental inertness which made that magnificent failure, Coleridge, leave all letters perpetually unopened and unanswered. Men succeed, or partly succeed, in spite of such neglect of moral duty, but never in consequence of it. It is not well for the most of us to think that our powers in other things are so great as to permit us to imitate that neglect of social decency, in the matter of promptness and the fulfilling of promises, which some celebrated persons have felt themselves licensed to display. No man is too great to be shielded from the duty of courteous promptness, and no man is too small to be aided by its practice.—S. S. Times.

A Forgotten Romance, Which Began in Jest and Ended in Despair.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Savannah (Ga.) Morning News, writing from Louisville, relates a forgotten and touching romance as follows:

Who would think of unearthing a shred of romance in a scrap-bag? And yet a few days ago a busy housewife, turning together one of those treasured mosaics, which a "quilt," overcome by shred of silk thereby hung a tale of no ordinary interest. It was a scrap of satin, of the most elegant quality, once white, but now yellowed and timestained. Here is its history: About twenty years ago St. Paul's church in Louisville rejoiced in the possession of a pastor who was the idol of his congregation. During his ministrations he lost his wife, and, consequently, as an interesting widower developed new charms in the eyes of the feminine portion of his flock. Amongst his most devoted and unswerving admirers, though personally unknown to him, was a maiden lady of uncertain age, many peculiarities and independent circumstances. Her one ambition and admiration for a man to whom she had never spoken became known to many, and a party of young people laid plans to "get him" so to speak. A heartless hoax. A letter was addressed to the young lady purporting to come from the reverend gentleman, containing professions of admiration and esteem, asking for a correspondence, and requesting profound secrecy. The victim fell into the trap at once, and the correspondence thus began continued until the pastor accepted a call to a church in Savannah, when it culminated in a proposal of marriage. This, of course, was readily accepted, and the final letter announcing his approaching departure, and still enjoining secrecy from unavoidable circumstances, also declared his probable return at any moment to claim his bride.

Never did happy-hearted girl set about the task of preparation with more delight than this trusting, deceived woman. The greater part of her compliment was expended in the purchase of bridal luxuries, a complete and elaborate outfit, from the heavy satin and costly lace of the wedding garments down through every item of elegant and dainty apparel. In the meantime the minister, soon after entering upon his charge in Savannah, died in that city of yellow fever, and the authors of this cruel jest, [illegible], never dreamed the matter. But nothing could shake the perfect confidence of the expectant bride; her friends tried to reason her out of her infatuation; members of the church visited her and endeavored to prove how impossible it was her hopes could be fulfilled. She triumphantly showed her letters and refused to credit her lover's death or anything other than the belief that he might arrive at any moment to claim her. As the time passed she lost her friends and her property dwindled to a mere pittance. She was thrown amongst strangers, but wherever she went she carried her trousseau, taking it occasionally from the trunk to air it, and packing it up again with jealous care.

At last her mental and physical infirmities became more prominent. She kept her room and admitted no one but her landlady. On her death-bed she requested his attendant to inform the lover of her death, and to robe her for burial in the bridal dress. When it was taken from the trunks it was found that these trappings were her ghastly for the corpse of a white-haired woman, and they gradually found their way, piece by piece, into other hands.

HOME, FARM AND GARDEN.

MILD days and severe freezes at night will seriously affect wheat and clover fields. Where the soil is at all inclined to be wet the roots will lift out of the ground.

BROWN FLOUR GEMS.—To a pint of buttermilk, add a quart of Graham flour, stirring it thoroughly one beaten egg, salt and a teaspoonful of soda; bake in muffin rings in a hot oven. If you have no sour milk, substitute baking-powder for soda.

WE LOOSEN a roof and so facilitate evaporation, and roll or otherwise compress a dry soil to retain it. When leaving to destroy weeds, be careful to lighten up your own footsteps or you will find the weeds quietly germinating there. The soil being compressed retains the moisture and facilitates germination.

KING GEORGE'S PUDDING.—One pint of bread-crumbs, half pint of flour, teaspoonful of baking powder sifted in flour. A little salt, half a pound of raisins, quarter of a pound of currants, quarter of a pound of chopped suet; yolks and whites of two eggs; mix lightly in a bag and boiled three hours; to be eaten with hard sauce.

TO PRESERVE stock for soup this recipe will be found useful. On a family not too numerous enough stock can be made for a week. Take four pounds of the best beef, put it into small pieces, cut an onion, saw a hock-bone of beef, remove the marrow, and fry the suet beef and onion in the marrow to a full brown; put fried meat, onion and fresh hock in two gallons of cold water; let it simmer all day, at night strain through a sieve, and replace in a kettle; when in some egg-shell and clear; strain through a cloth into an earthen crock; in the morning skim the fat from the surface grease, this stock may be used for vegetables or any kind of soup; of course it is a rich brown color.—Burlington Hawkeye.

THOSE of you who conclude to be of the scorn of saying farmers, will keep no idle people about you, nor idle land, nor idle horses; keep everything at work, put half your land to grass, graze with cattle, milk as many cows as your help can easily manage, save and feed well all your calves. Do not keep too many hogs, substitute a few sheep, so that you will get family woolens and summer mutton cheap, raise full colts to sell every year, and only breed mares that are rated continually, soon reach such a condition that any intelligent man would rather buy a farm in good condition and deliver the half in the barn, than to cultivate one of these rundown farms, and leave the landlord to share in the field. It is a good way often, for a young man to get a start, to rent a farm for a share, but the owner the landlord furnishing team, tools and seed. Some of the best and most successful farmers of my acquaintance began life in this way. I think there are many of our farmers who are now passing the prime of life, who would make as much or more clear money and would relieve their families of a great deal of hard work, if they would rent their land; and at the same time they would be giving some poor man a better chance to become independent.—Cor. Practical Farmer.

Spring Rye.

SPRING RYE may be sown as early in the spring as the frost will permit; the earlier the better, since it is a grain which matures rapidly. Spring rye will not yield so large a crop, neither for grain nor selling purposes, as may be secured from winter rye, though for selling the former may be grown and cut before any other spring crop. We have known of farmers sowing winter rye in the spring, or so late in the fall as not to germinate until spring, but we recollect no instance where so good a crop was secured as when the grain made a good start in the fall. Spring rye cannot be obtained so early in the spring as winter rye, though the former will be ready to feed as soon as the latter is fed out or becomes too mature for profitable feeding. For plowing under spring rye is the good as winter rye, though of course it can only be done later in the season than could be the case if the latter were used. Spring rye comes into bloom about the 1st of June. For early selling winter rye comes first, next spring rye and then barley. Spring rye matures very fast, and very hot weather injures its value for selling. Last spring, on account of the hot, dry weather in May we almost lost our spring rye, as it became so hard before threshing that the cows shied at it. We sowed it late and it was after the middle of April before we sowed it. We have now a piece of ground plowed and manured ready for spring rye, intending to sow the latter as early next season as possible.—American Cultivator.

AS MR. JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL now holds our most important foreign position the following lines from "The Biglow Papers," are quoted to show his earlier views on the subject:

"I do believe in wut we 're told
To Sunday-mus'ings solemn,
That in our earth's underbread
Are critters in a common,
Some nine thousand deouls per ann.,
Nine thousand more for rumm,
Ah! see to recommend a man
The place would just about fit."

TANNING, says M. J. Ador, can be hastened by applying phosphoric acid, as it enables the tannin to penetrate the skins more rapidly through its hindering the tanning of the albuminoid substances —An ex-official at Randall's Island says such things occur as boys setting fire to their beds and hanging themselves, rather than endure the treatment they receive from certain officers.

The Plague of Formal Calls.

IS IT not time that a protest should be made against the absurdity and unprofitableness of our custom of "paying calls"? To visit our friends for the sake of their companionship is one thing—a thing to which no social reformer, however parsimonious of time, would wish to put a limit. To visit those whom we think a mere intimate acquaintance might make our friends is another thing, but equally wise. Visiting with such ends in view, however, implies unless while the term I have quoted above implies a social obligation of the most binding character. A social dishonesty is certainly implied in the accusation that one has not "paid" the calls she owes.

What is this custom, simply stated, and what solid grounds for its existence would remain did we once remove the venerable lumber of custom and tradition with which it is now securely propped? Simply stated, it is customary for a woman, who moves in any society whatever, afterwards to visit and to receive visits from every woman with whom she wishes to keep up even the most formal acquaintance. It is a perpetually-recurring ceremony, for one visit "paid" means a return visit "owed," and so on forever. The purpose originally served by this onerous distinction it enables us to draw between those we desire and those we do not desire to maintain any social acquaintances. But a ceremony which is, perhaps, in its simplest form quite indispensable, grows, through senseless iteration, into an intolerable burden. A woman in a large city who would not drop entirely out of its social life, must keep hard at work at her Sisyphean task, made doubly onerous by the custom of "kettle drums," teas and receptions. In a place like Washington, where political is added to social etiquette, the weight to various almost unbearable. I heard a lady say once that she would never go back to Washington as a politician's wife, unless she were elected to assume deep mourning for some fictitious friend. The only escape from the useless drudgery of "making calls" seems to be in a course that would cut her off from all its pleasures as well. In small towns the case is almost worse, for there one gets but meagre compensation in social pleasures of any kind, and though the list is briefer, the names bring more formidable recurring duties. These are debts which we must discharge, not even with lumbered dollars, but with hours from the register for ever replaced by any effort, or at any cost. Is there any woman who would not rejoice if it were conceded that one visit paid to a new acquaintance, and one received in return, is enough. This must be, since the fact that it is not gives a woman perfect liberty to visit where she wished to go, and to stay away when she felt no contrary impulse? To be sure, it also gives a woman leave to do these things to-day, but to-morrow, would we but generally grant

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

BY TELEGRAPH AND MAIL.

XLVIth Congress.

THE President's message on the Intoxicant case was read and referred in the Senate on the 8th. A bill was introduced by Mr. Kenna, giving to Territories more than equal rights and privileges in Indian reservations. Mr. Bailey submitted a peace ideal resolution, reciting that it had been announced in the public press that a contract had been entered into between the Pacific Railroad and the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, by which the former agreed to pay the latter $110,000 per month on condition that it will pursue the land lines to its ports for 10 years, and providing that the effect of such contract is already prejudicial to the public interest and contrary to the policy declared that restricted Congress to charter Pacific Railroads, and to the grants and to granting to both railway companies large subsidies in money and lands, and preserving the Judiciary Committee to investigate and report whether such contract had been made, and what legislation is necessary to prevent the execution of the same and to guard the public interest. Mr. McDonald spoke in support of the Pan Joint Potter bill. ... In the House the bill to establish a department of foreign affairs was referred, together with the minority report of the Committee on Agriculture, to the Committee of the Whole. Several other bills were reported from committees and referred to the Committee of the Whole. The Indigent Assessment bill was taken up, and after a brief discussion passed.

A message was received and referred to the Senate on the 10th from the President transmitting the agreement between the Secretary of the Interior and the Indians, and recommending its ratification. Mr. Bayard, from the Committee on Judiciary, reported favorably the House bill to define the terms of office of the Chief Signal Officer. Blackburn Mr. Hoar called attention to his remarks in support of the Pan Joint Potter bill and Mr. Logan replied to what he thought misinterpretations of the evidence on the part of the supporters of the bill, after which Mr. Garland introduced a resolution providing for the bill, with an accompanying papers, be referred to the Committee on Judiciary for examination and report to the Senate, several papers bills were introduced in the House, and the following bills were placed on the calendar: Appropriating $5,000 for the relief of the poor of Ireland; to restrict Chinese immigration; to prevent the withholding of pensions from soldiers who have served and applications for same are filed before July 1, 1881; Mr. Hooper introduced a resolution providing for the appointment of a committee to inquire into the Panama Canal, declaring that, as the United States would have a great load as well as control in the work in common with the other commercial powers of the world, and as the political results, ... such like of consummation would be vitally necessary to her own interest and to the preservation of international harmony and good understanding, she will insist that land lines to its ports be at reasonable rates, and which, failing, Congress will be called upon to take such action as shall effectually protect the rights of the United States and the people. Adjourned to the 12th.

MR. GORMAN'S resolution for a special committee on the Interoceanic Canal was withdrawn in the Senate on the 12th, and a resolution offered by Mr. Platt, requesting the President to communicate to Congress the measures the desire of this Government to secure the neutrality of any transit route across the Isthmus, was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations. The Fortification Appropriation bill was passed, after being amended so increasing the House appropriation for the repair of works of defense from $500,000 to $1,000,000, and the appropriation of the seacoast fortifications, including the appropriation of $1,000,000 for armament into rifles, from $125,000 to $250,000. Adjourned to the 15th. The Indian appropriation bill was reported in the House, the Appropriations Committee reporting against an amendment appropriating $60,000 for the payment of fees and expenses of United States Marshals, and three general deputies for the Indian Reservations, thereby making the total amount appropriated by the bill $5,000,000. The bill was referred to, and ordered by the Committee of the Whole. Mr. Covert introduced a bill for the relief of settlers on pre-emptions in non cattle. Adjourned to the 13th.

Domestic.

THE following message was sent to the Senate by the President on the 8th:

I transmit herewith a report of the secretary of State and accompanying papers, in response to the resolution adopted by the senate on the 19th of February last, requesting information of all correspondence between this government and any foreign government since February, 1880, respecting a ship canal across the Isthmus between North America and South America, together with a copy of any project of treaties respecting the same which the Department of State has prepared or negotiated since that date to any foreign power or its diplomatic representative.

In further compliance with the resolution of the senate, I deem it proper to state briefly my opinion as to the rights of the United States with respect to the construction of an Interoceanic canal to any route across the American Isthmus. The policy of this country is a special one. American control. The United States cannot consent to surrender this control to any European power, or to any combination of European powers. If the existing treaties between Great Britain and other Nations cut off the rights of sovereignty or property of either which stands in the way of this policy, a contingency which it is not apprehended will happen, steps will be taken by fair and liberal negotiations to promote and withdraw the objection. Any protest or this subject consistently with the rights of nations to be effective must be made forward by corporations or citizens of other countries in such an emergency must, in a great degree, look for protection to one or more of the great Powers of the world. No European Power can intervene for such protection without adopting measures in the Territories which the United States would deem wholly inadmissible. If the protection of the United States is relied upon, the United States must convey such aid as will enable this country to protect its National interests and maintain the rights of those whose private capital is observed in the work.

An Interoceanic Canal across the American isthmus will essentially change the geographical relations between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of the United States, and between the United States and the rest of the world. It will be the great central thoroughfare between our Atlantic and our Pacific shores, and virtually a part of the coast line of the United States. Its use for purely commercial interest in it is greater than that of all other countries, while its relations to our power, prosperity as a Nation, to our material defense, certainty, peace and safety, are matters of paramount consideration to the people of the United States. No other great Power would, under similar circumstances, look to any material outside power a step so closely and vitally affecting its interest and welfare.

Without urging further grounds of my opinion, I repeat, in conclusion, that it is the right and duty of the United States to assert and maintain such supervision and authority over any Interoceanic Canon across the Isthmus connecting North and South America as will protect our National interests. This I am quite sure, will be found not only consistent with, but promotive of, the wishes and most permanent advantage to commerce and enlightened civilization of the world.

How England Takes Her Census.

IN Great Britain a census has been taken every ten years since 1801, and the system is now one of the most perfect in existence. Until near the close of the last century, there was no real method, and all previous estimates of the population of the United Kingdom were mere guess work. It seems the more strange that such should have been the fact, considering that, in the American colonies, enumerations of the population had often been made by order of the Home Government. In 1790, a beginning was made in Scotland by Sir John Sinclair, who, through his personal efforts in enlisting the co-operation of all the clergymen of the established church, collected returns which were of great value, although necessarily incomplete. After seven years he completed his compilations, and published the result in twenty-one volumes, probably the greatest statistical work ever undertaken and carried through by one private enterprise. Under the system adopted in 1801, the census in Great Britain is now taken in one day, the 31st of March. In 1851, 30,000 enumerators were appointed in England and Wales by the 2,189 District Registrars in those countries, the enumerators having a distinctly defined district assigned to him. In Scotland the thirty-two Sheriffs appointed the 1,015 enumerators—generally parish schoolmasters—and 8,133 enumerators. For the smaller islands the Government appointed 267 enumerators, and in Ireland the census was taken by the constabulary. Some days before the census day printed schedules were delivered at every house or tenement. In Wales these were printed in Welsh for the benefit of the lower classes. These schedules contained questions about the name, relation to head of family, condition, age, sex, occupation and birthplace of every person in Great Britain, and also as to the number of deaf, dumb and blind. Measures were taken to secure accurately the names of night laborers, persons out of the country, travelers, seamen, soldiers, etc. These schedules were all filled up in the night of March 30-31, and were taken up at an early hour on March 31, the collector filling up the parts that had been left blank through their negligence or inability. All unoccupied houses and buildings in course of construction were also noted. The floating population—persons who spent the nights in boats and barges, in barns, sheds, etc., were required to be estimated as nearly as possible. The enumerators were allowed one week to make their returns, in all unresolved, and the summaries and estimates completed according to detailed instructions. The District Registrars had to examine their revisions of the returns of their subordinates in a forthright, paying particular attention to nine specially defined points. These revised returns were again revised by the "Superintendent Registrars," and then transmitted to the census office. The census was the most successful, in quickness and accuracy, accomplished in any country up to that time, and the same system has been followed with its variation, ever since. The digestion of the census reports by the central authorities is conducted most thoroughly and scientifically, and the compilations are of the greatest value to statisticians and economists. The British system has served as a model for many other countries, where the census is now taken in one day by means of printed schedules.—Boston Herald.

A Battle of the Cooks.

A REMARKABLE incident, and one whose serious character was partly offset by its indiscreetness, occurred the other morning in the kitchen of a house on Penn avenue. The cook was lustily manipulating the stirring paddle in a huge pot of mush, which was seething on the stove. Two of the domestics employed in the household were present, and while the mush was being worked up in proper style the three fell into a warm discussion. Presently the argument was changed to a quarrel, and the women emerged into the square with great relish. Something was said (it parsingingly of the cook, and in a fit of supreme anger she retaliated upon the domestic who made the remark by landing a ladle full of the hot mush directly into her face. Five minutes later the whole of the house, aroused from his slumbers by the noise, rushed into the kitchen, and was literally astounded by the scene which met his view. Soft masses of mush were flying in all directions. The ceiling, walls, carpet and various articles in the apartment were copiously ornamented with big chunks of the smoking compound, and the irate domestics, with their hands madly mixed up in each other's hair, were plentifully bespattered with it. The battle had been a hot one in more senses than one, and after awhile when the combatants had been separated it was found that each of them had been burned more or less by the hot mixture. A general discharge of the help followed.—Pittsburgh (Pa.) Telegraph.

A NICE BREAKFAST DISH.—Chop very fine some lean ham; if you have about a half pint after it is chopped, add two eggs and a little cream. Cook about ten minutes, stirring it constantly; then serve it on toasted bread.

PERSONS wanting full returns of eggs from their hens must feed for it. Proper care will bring the best results. There are some breeds which give better satisfaction than others, but it must be recollected that the fowls of this day are so bred up and trained, that their end and existence is to produce eggs, but they must be fed for it.

PEST CONSTRUCTIVE.—Take the remains of any fresh fish, or codfish well freshened. After removing the bones chop it very fine; add butter, pepper, salt, one egg, a little cracker or bread crumb. Make into balls; about the size of an egg; dip first into beaten egg and then into bread crumbs, and fry in hot fat until they are golden brown. Serve on a plate covered with a white napkin.

BOILED CHOCOLATE CUSTARD.—Grate quarter of a pound of unsweetened chocolate, and put in a half pint of hot water on the stove to dissolve; when cool add a pint of milk, but requires occasional stirring; beat up four eggs, yelks and whites together, with half a pound of powdered sugar, and put over it a quart of boiled milk; then stir in the chocolate; strain the whole through a sieve; pour into cups and bake in a moderate oven; when done, stir it up continually with a wooden spoon till it thickens, which it will do in about three or four minutes; then send round quick and in the bowl it is to be served in, and keep on the ice till you are ready to use.

PLAIN CAKE.—Take three eggs, two cups sugar, half cup of butter, or good fresh, lard is better; two cups sour cream, half sweet do, one teaspoonful soda, four cups flour, with two teaspoonfuls cream tartar well stirred in flour; add the yelks of eggs, sugar and butter well together, then add the milk and nutmeg; then have the whites of the eggs well beaten, and stir very slowly a spoonful of flour and a spoonful of egg at a time until all is in; after you begin to add the flour use whites of egg to the mass do not beat it, but stir very slowly; then put the soda in a tablespoonful of vinegar, and add as the last; bake in a moderately-heated oven three-quarters of an hour.

ANDERSONVILLE.

A Story of Southern Military Prisons.

The Most Successful Book Since "Uncle Tom's Cabin"—Twenty Thousand Copies Sold Before One Was printed—A Graphic Story of a Private Soldier's Experience in Richmond, Andersonville, Savannah, Millen, Blackshear, Charleston and Florence.

No book since "Uncle Tom's Cabin" has had the unparalleled success that has attended the publication in the form of a copiously illustrated volume of a series of articles that ran thru the Toledo Blade last year under the title of "Andersonville, a Story of Southern Military Prisons." Such was the interest aroused by the subject, and the fascinating manner in which it was treated that the mere announcement that the sketches were to be reproduced in book form was sufficient to bring in orders for more than 20,000 copies before one was printed, and the volume has been upon the market now less than four months, the sale have nearly reached 40,000, with every prospect that that figure will be doubled or trebled before the year is out. Certainly no book ever sold itself to the extent that this one has, because the efforts to introduce it anywhere have been of the slightest, and in much the greater part of the country none whatever have been made.

There is a deep fascination in the subject of Andersonville, for that Golgotha, in which lie the whitening bones of 13,000 gallant young men, represents to them very much of the dearest and costliest sacrifice of the war for the preservation of our national unity. It is a type too, of its class. In more than a hundred hecatombs of dead represent several times that number of their brethern, for whom the prison gates of Belle Isle, Danville, Salisbury, Florence, Columbia and Oglethorpe opened only in eternity. There are few families in the North who have not at least one dear relative or friend among those 60,000 whose sad fortune it was to end their service for the Union by lying down and dying for it in a Southern prison pen. The manner of their death, the horrors that clustered thickly around every moment of their existence, the loyal, unfaltering steadfastness in which they endured all that fate brought them has never been adequately told. It was not with them as with their comrades in the field, whose every act was performed in the presence of those whose duty it was to observe such matters and report them to the world.

Hidden from the view of their friends in the North by the impenetrable veil which the military operations of the Rebels drew around the so-called Confederacy, the people knew next to nothing of their career or their sufferings. Thousands died there less heeded even than the hundreds who perished on the battle field. Grant did not lose as many men, killed outright, in the terrible campaign from the Wilderness to the James River—43 days of desperate fighting—as died in July and August at Andersonville. Nearly twice as many died in that prison as fell on the day that Grant crossed the Rapidan, till he rested down into the trenches before Petersburg. More than four times as many Union dead lie under the solemn, soughing pines about that forlorn little village in Southern Georgia than mark the course of Sherman from Chattanooga to Atlanta. The Nation stands aghast at the expenditure of life which attended the two bloody campaigns of 1861 which virtually crushed the Confederacy, but no one remembers that more Union soldiers died in the rear of the rebel lines than were killed in front of them. The great military events that stamped out the rebellion drew attention away from the sad drama which starvation and disease played in the gloomy pens in the far recesses of somber Southern forests.

The author begins with an account of the raid made into the enemy's country by the cavalry command in which he was serving as an enlisted man. They meet the rebel cavalry, and after a sharp fight, [illegible] sending it flying from the field. For a while the Union cavalry live off the fatness of the land, but at length they are trapped in a narrow valley, and after a desperate resistance, are all captured, and sent to Richmond. Two months of hardship and exposure on Belle Isle, and in the tobacco factories and by their being sent to Andersonville—the author arriving in the first squad that enters the pen. Then ensues six months of terrible suffering, in which four out of five of those around him die. This is ended by the fall of Atlanta, immediately upon which the rebels, fearful of the safety of so great a mass of prisoners in such proximity of the National lines as the fall that stronghold has brought about, hurry the bulk of them off to other and more remote places of confinement.

The author is first taken to Savannah; after a short stay there, to Millen; thence to Savannah again, intending to be exchanged, but sadly to get him and his companions safely past Sherman's advancing lines and take them to Florence, S. C. where they are kept until the Confederacy began going to pieces in March, 1864.

Into this warp and woof of daily history are woven numberless bits of fascinating description of thrilling incidents, and even touchable episodes—for there was fun, even in that dreary experience. Among the most thrilling recitals to be found anywhere is that of the story of the fights with and the capture and execution of the "raiders" a band of murderous desperados who infested the prison, and six of whom were hanged in terrorem, and as a punishment for their multifarious offenses. This is the only full and accurate account of this noted episode that has ever been written. Many versions have been given of this, but they have all been written by men who were misinformed as the real facts in the case. The author, being one of the very few of those now living who were actively identified with the affair from first to last, has exceptional knowledge of that which he speaks.

Letters from more than 3,000 surviving prisoners testify in the strongest terms to wonderful accuracy of the book. Such a testimonial—unlikely by a single dissent from any living prisoner—is one of the marvels of current literature.

The press has been no less kind to the book than the general public and it has received the highest eulogiums from political, religious and literary papers, which unite in saying that for vividness of description, realism of detail, and fascination of style it has no equal in the literature of the war.

The book contains 656 large, handsome (8 printed) pages, illustrated with 184 pictures drawn under the author's supervision. Published at Toledo, O., by D. R. Locke, and sold by subscription at $3.00 per copy; the best selling book for agents in the market. Agents wanted for every Township in the United States.

There are eight wives Mormon churches in England and Ireland.

A class in journalism is to be established at Cornell University, New York.

Many southern newspapers are being printed on the unbleached paper, on account of the high price of white paper.

Bishop Foster, of the Methodist church was licensed to preach at 13 years of age, and at 17 was a pastor of a church.

The Grand Haven Herald presents Edwin Baxter, of Grand Haven, as a Republican candidate for Attorney General. The Ludington papers present ex-Judge White, of Ludington, for the same office.

There are places in Texas where the Republican party still lives. A late telegram from Denham reports the election [illegible] of W. K. Homan, Republican, to the State senate, to fill a vacancy, by 100 majority over the Democratic candidate.

A Washington correspondent of the [illegible] on Republican Presidential indications: "The opinion gathers momentum that, after all, and in some way or another, the outcome at Chicago will be Elihu B. Washburne."

Chicago didn't have much sleighing the past winter. The Evening Journal says that for the first time this year, the ground was covered with snow in that city last Thursday morning, it having snowed half an inch during the preceding night.

During the few months the Democrats have had possession of the United States Senate, several new sinecure officers have been created, with fat salaries, and the Senate pay-roll is larger now than it has ever been before since the beginning of the Government, and several propositions are now pending for more additions. This, remember, is the party that has been howling itself hoarse for "economy and reform" ever since it lost its grip on the Government in 1861.

Masonic Emblems.

A Paris telegram says: Our Cario correspondent communicates a fact which will revive in a still higher degree the interest excited among students of Egyptian mysteries by Lieut. Commander Gorringe and the discovery of Masonic emblems underneath the pedestal of the obelisk at Alexandria destined for transportation to New York. The practical eye of another distinguished Masonic dignitary has just detected an additional series of emblems of a value and significance far greater and more unquestionable than those previously reported. Mr. S. A. Zola, grand commander and president of the Scotch ancient and accepted Masonic rite for Egypt, and Egyptian ex grand master of symbolic Masonry, has examined the foundations of the Alexandrian obelisk, and has discovered another series of stones, which not only bear all the existing Masonic emblems, but furnish the key which has hitherto been lacking to explain the entire dimensions and proportions of what proves to have been an elaborate Masonic edifice, including the obelisk itself, the pedestal, the staircase, and the hidden foundations. Mr. Zola professes to be able by this discovery to throw a vivid light upon the ancient Egyptian origin of Masonic symbolism.

The position of the Democratic party begins to look like it had many sides, like the Dutchman who sat "mit one foot on both sides der fence."

Grevy, of the French Republic, gets $5000 a day for his services. He makes about as much as an editor of a country newspaper and gets nearly as much abuse.

The nomination of Tilden at Cincinnati seems to be a foregone conclusion. He is the strongest Democrat in the field because he is the most tricky and unscrupulous. He will buy his nomination and try to buy or steal his election.

The Prosecuting Attorney of Toledo has notified the newsdealers of that city that if they hereafter sell any more copies of the Police News or any such sensational newspapers, he will prosecute them under a city ordinance which prohibits the sale of obscene literature in that city.

Diptheria is raging frightfully in portion of Southern Wisconsin, and the little ones are dropping off at a rapid rate. The public schools in Dodgeville, Gratiot, and other towns have been closed in consequence of the disease. One family in Gratiot buried six children in the space of ten days.

Tilden has plenty of business on hand this spring. His income tax suit, which has been repeatedly postponed at his request, will come on for trial in the U. S. district court in New York next month; and then there's the Cincinnati Convention to be packed and fixed up inside of the next ninety days.

The students in a dozen different colleges in seven different Northern States have recently polled an aggregate of over 3000 votes for Presidential preferences. The following is the result; Blaine 871; Grant 618; Hayard 551; Sherman 481; Tilden 83; Garfield 93; Washburne 61; Edmunds 52; Hayes 50; Evarts 26.

Philadelphians are all lumbied up and down in their minds over a baby elephant, born one night last week. The mother is a large black Asiatic elephant, belonging to Cooper & Bailey's Menagerie. The little fellow is 35 inches high, and weighs 214 lbs. It has always been supposed that elephants would not breed while in captivity, but that theory is now exploded

This is the right spirit to cultivate. The supporters of Blaine and the supporters of Grant are true Republicans. The scratchers are not found in their ranks. Let there be a fair and honorable contest between them and when the nomination is decided, they will cordially unite to elect the man who is nominated. That is the way the Blaine and Grant, Republicans of Michigan will do, at any rate.

The work of digging a canal across the isthmus at Cohasset Narrows, Massachusetts, the object of which is to cut off the tedious and dangerous passage around Cape Cod, has recently been commenced. That portion of the New England coast is full of peril to life and property, especially in winter time, and scarcely a season passes without the loss of one or more of the thousands of vessels plying to Boston and the ports along Massachusetts Bay. It is nearly 200 years since the idea was first conceived of constructing the work in question; but work upon it was never before actually begun. The canal will be 7½ miles long, and will cost between two and three millions of dollars.

While the past winter has been very mild throughout the United States, it has been very severe in the far north western British American possessions. A dispatch from Victoria, last Monday, says that cattle, sheep, horses and other stock are dying from starvation throughout that region. Nearly all the live stock will perish before spring. The loss is estimated roughly at $1,000,000. Scores of stock-raisers will be reduced from affluence to poverty. Snow lies from three to five feet in depth, and gives no evidence of thawing.

Dillaye, the nominee of the Brick Pomeroy wing of the Greenback party for president, is an old New York copperhead politician, and an adventurer of very questionable purposes. Col. B. J. Chambers, the nominee of the same party for Vice President, is a "bloated bondholder," belonging to the very class whom "Brick" and his fellows have been denouncing as "worse than traitors." Chambers is one of the wealthiest citizens of Texas, an ex rebel, and a resident of Chilson, Jackson county. He is a lawyer, and at one time was engaged in the banking business. He has no more sympathy with the political Greenbackers than he has with the Texas brigands.

A railroad bridge over Detroit river at Detroit has been discussed by the press and by the people for years. A week ago yesterday, discussion of the subject before the Congressional Committee on Commerce was commenced by delegations favoring and opposing the project. The advocates of the bridge present were James, F. Joy, Alexander Lewis, M. Shoemaker, Chas. T. Gorham, John J. Robinson, W. F. Webber, R. B. Ross, E. O. Grosvenor, Henry Frelick, O. M. Barnes, Stephen Fairchilds, A. B. Maynard and others, of Michigan. The opposition was represented by George W. Russell and John Burt, of Detroit, and a large number of steamboat men and vessel owners from different cities along the lakes. Congressman Hubbell argued against the bridge.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

BY TELEGRAPH AND MAIL.

XLVIth Congress.

IN the Senate on the 16th Mr. Davis (Ill.) presented a memorial of leading merchants of Chicago, praying the enactment of a uniform Bankruptcy law; Mr. Davis spoke in favor of such a law. Consideration of Mr. Thurman's resolution offered by Mr. Kellogg on the 12th for a committee to investigate the whisky ring charges against him, in connection with the Hayes-Tilden scandal, was taken up. In order to avoid the delay that would be occasioned by Mr. Edmunds, to do the say for the meeting of the Presidential Electors, and to provide for and regulate the counting of Votes for President and Vice-President, and the decision of questions arising thereon, was referred to a select committee. The "Star Route" Deficiency bill was further debated. A substitute was adopted in the House calling on the Secretary of the Interior for information as to withholding pensions allowed to soldiers of the war of 1812. The Sundry Civil appropriation bill was considered in Committee of the Whole.

THE bill removing the political disabilities of Roger A. Pryor was passed in the Senate on the 17th. The "Star Route" Deficiency Appropriation bill was also passed, with amendments; it appropriates $1,000,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to meet the expenses of inland mail transportation in the Star service for the remainder of the present fiscal year, and $1,000,000 for the same service as authorized by law and found necessary for the next fiscal year. Mr. Taylor offered a resolution, which was referred, for the appointment of a committee to confer by telegraph upon the present method of counting electoral votes for United States. The morning hour was dispensed with, and the Deficiency Appropriation bill was further considered in Committee of the Whole, an animated debate following as to the merits of the bill, legislation in connection with the appropriations, etc.

NO BUSINESS of importance was transacted in the Senate on the 18th. The House bill for the establishment of cities in Hot Springs was considered. In the House, in Committee of the Whole, an unsuccessful effort by Mr. Springer to the Speaker pro tempore to allow him to report a bill to appropriate $5,000 for the payment of Speaker Randall's salary, provided that after such Deputy Marshals shall receive $2 per day for actual service in courts or going to any election, and that all such bonds shall be approved by the Judges of the United States Circuit Court for the district in which they are to perform their duties, and no more than two per more than three appointments shall be made for any voting precinct.

IN the Senate on the 19th the House bill for the establishment of cities in Hot Springs, Ark., was amended and passed. Mr. Anthony presented the memorial of Susan B. Anthony, asking for a removal of her political disabilities, in consideration that while the prayers of men for the removal of disabilities have been granted, such prayers have been disregarded in women, and asks that her political rights may be restored to her. Various bills were introduced. Mr. Plumb introduced a bill to provide for an allotment of land in severalty to the Ute Indians of Colorado and Utah, and for their removal to a reservation to be established in the Indian Territory. A joint resolution was passed appropriating $100,000 for public printing, with a proviso that the entire deficiency appropriation for that purpose shall not exceed $300,000.

Domestic.

SECRETARY SCHURZ received a telegram on the 16th from Los Pinos Agency, 11th, stating that a number of parties had already staked a number of placer claims and taken up ranches on the Ute Reservation, and that others were preparing to follow. The telegram says: "The next two weeks will see the reservation swarming with squatters, and a conflict is inevitable." The Secretary at once ordered the troops on the reservation to be withdrawn for the remainder of the present fiscal year, and $100,000 for the same service as authorized by law and found necessary for the next fiscal year. Mr. Taylor offered a resolution, which was referred, for the appointment of a committee of conference to investigate

A Sabbath school was started in district No. 2, under the tutorship of A. W. Crow, closed last Wednesday after a few weeks. The summer term will be taught by the same teacher.

If a couple of our boys don't look a little out where sweethearts their attentions, they will run against a dilemma shortly. Take them both half way, anyhow boys.

The [illegible] given by their school assisted by some of the young ladies and gentlemen from Charlevoix school, also from Maple Grove school, last Thursday evening in the Presbyterian church, was largely attended, and was enjoyed by the large audience present to the fullest extent. The proceeds of the exercises, and the singing on the hill after the audience had dismissed to the inn during the entertainment, amounted to over the one hundred dollars.

The political muckrake has commenced grinding in Norwood. The attack was granted last Saturday and the following ticket came forth: Supervisor, F. H. PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

TENNYSON is one of twelve children who were all clever verse-makers in their childhood.

LOWELL is received in England with marked cordiality. The Queen has shown great friendliness of manner. He has received numerous calls and invitations from the best people, and is the lion of the evening at several great houses.

THE number of new works issued in Germany in 1879 amounted to 14,179, as against 13,912 in the previous year. The greatest increase is shown in the departments of jurisprudence, politics and statistics; the decline is most visible in all departments of belles lettres.

CHARLOTTE BRONTE'S story, "The Professor," completed before "Jane Eyre" was commenced, and was declined by various publishers. It was not published until after the author's death; but "Jane Eyre" was at once accepted and published by Messrs. Smith & Elder (1847).

MRS. OLIPHANT is probably the most prolific of living writers. Within the last three years she has published five or six works—several of them being three-volume novels—in addition to writing the "Foreign Classics for English Readers." She is now writing a new novel with Scotch scenes and characters.

MR. WHITLEY STOKES has printed at Calcutta the concluding portion, a volume of "Indian Fairy Tales" containing thirty stories, the greater part of which were told to Hindustanni by native servants to his daughter, and afterward written down in English by that young lady and excellently annotated by the Mrs. Stokes.

BIBLIOPHILES will be interested to learn that the well-known microscopic edition of Dante is to have a companion in the "Rime" of Petrarch. Each page will be fifty-five millimeters long and thirty-five broad (a little over two inches by one and a half), and the whole volume will contain 667 pages, with thirty-six illustrations and two portraits.

MR. ARTHUR SULLIVAN is a many-sided man. In addition to his brilliant musical gifts, and the reputation he has so rapidly won as a composer, he has written a drama, "Glorvina," which is soon to be presented at the Adelphi Theatre, London. Mr. Sullivan possesses his literary abilities, and, curiously enough, has invented a patent rail-way brake which is said to be very ingenious and practical.

MACAULAY has pointed out that the first English author who really made a good paying business of literature was Richardson, for the good reason that he published his own works. A statement has lately been made that Swift "had no pecuniary interest in his writings," but a correspondent of the Athenæum points out that a letter to Mr. Pulteney, in 1735, he says: "I never got a farthing by anything I writ, and was about eight years ago, and that was by Mr. Pope's prudent management for me." About eight years ago corresponds with the date of publication of "Gulliver," for which one thousand dollars is alleged to have been paid. Probably it has earned for the booksellers by this time one hundred thousand dollars.

A Lesson in Navigation.

ON one more block, and we come upon the box-shaped ships, black ships, iron ships, wooden ships, big, little and medium ships, ships of all sorts. They all go under the general name of ships, and it is well they do, for not one New Yorker in a dozen knows the difference between a bark and a pleasure yacht, though he goes down the bay every day in the summer. Here is a good-natured-looking sailor, leaning against a post in a nice sunny place; he will give us some information about the ships.

"That there?" says the sailor, in a tone that seems to pity our ignorance, and giving his trousers a tremendous hitch. "That ain't no ship, that's a brig. Don't you know the difference atween a ship and a brig? Why, bless you, a ship—but I can't talk too much; my throat troubles me. This here dry air parches it up, like, and I—"

There are so many establishments in the neighborhood for the moistening of parched throats that this difficulty is soon remedied, and the sailor invites us to take a seat on the bottom of an upturned yawl, where we will be sheltered from the wind, while he explains the mystery of large and barks.

"Like a sheep of grey he rather was," exclaimed Sam Weller, when he saw Mr. Pickwick's face after the latter had been "done" by one of the fair sex; "I'm sure you can't know more about ships, Sir, than I do about a cabriolet drawed a hoss"—most of us—and why shouldn't you know more about our business? I'll tell you. There they were! there's a ship, an' I'll tell you why because she has three masts and square sails. That's what makes her a ship. If she was only as big as this here yawl, and that's not very big, and had three masts and square sails, she'd still be a ship-rigged. The first mast, up by the bowsprit, is the fore-mast, the middle one is the main-mast, and the last is the mizzen-mast. Each of these three masts is subdivided, as the school-masters say, into three parts: the lower mast, the top-mast, and the top-gallant mast. Now you know more about navigation than did Captain Skittle did, when he ran into Three Sisters on a rock.

"Do you see this vessel just behind us? She's a bark, and that's one of the nicest things for you to learn, if you're going to be a sailor, how to tell a bark from a ship; 'cause if you was on watch, and you reported a ship on the lee bow, and she turned out to be a bark, the Captain would give you salts in your grog for a fortnight. A Bark has three masts like a ship, but the mizzen-mast is schooner rigged, instead of having square sails. A brig has only two masts, both square rigged, and a brigantine is the same as a brig, only square rigged in front and schooner rigged behind, as a landsman would say. Now you know it all, and can take a ship across the ocean without a compass."

The lesson in navigation finished, the sailor's throat was in such a parched condition that it took three inward applications of rum, well seasoned with molasses, to get it in working order again. Then he explained how a pilot-boat might always be distinguished by the big number painted on its sail; and a ferry-boat by its pilot-house at each end.—N. Y. Times.

Royal Matrimonial Design.

ANOTHER blow is about to be struck at the Royal Marriage act, if we may trust the rumors which reach us of the betrothal of Prince Leopold, the youngest son of Queen Victoria, to the most brilliant beauty and greatest heiress of the current season in London. Miss Frances-Evelyn Maynard, the eldest daughter of the late Hon. Charles Maynard, son and heir of the late Viscount Maynard, of Essex, who predeceased his father in January, 1865. Lord Maynard, a descendant of the great lawyer, died three months after his son, when his titles became extinct and his great estate passed to his eldest grandslaughter, the young lady who is now said to be engaged to Prince Leopold. Miss Maynard has just entered her nineteenth year, and on her presentation at a recent Drawing-Room, held by the Queen she seems to have taken London by storm, not only by her extraordinary beauty but by a grace and stateliness which are not always the leading characteristics of British debutantes. The fashionable chroniclers burst into ecstasies over the way in which she mastis her "courtsey to the Queen," an operation which is very apt to discomfort the most self-possessed of young women when it has to be performed in a robe with a sweeping train and under the concentrated stare of a small regiment of her sister-women. She is said also to be an accomplished and amiable as she is lovely and graceful, and as she comes into estates valued at £30,000 a year, the rents of which have been accumulating for her ever since her grandfather's death in 1865, it must be admitted that Queen Victoria might do worse for her only bachelor son than to provide him with such a bride.—N. Y. World.

Tributes of Men of Genius to Their Mothers.

SAYS Jean Paul Richter: Know you what especially impels me to industry? My mother. I shall endeavor to sweeten a part of her life, that otherwise has been so unfortunate, and lessen by my help and sympathy the great sorrows she has suffered. In her alone I owe the foundation of my mind and heart.

George Herbert said: One good mother is worth a hundred school-masters. In the home she is footstone to all hearts and loadstar to all eyes.

De Maistre, in his writings, speaks of his mother with immense love and reverence. He described her as his "sublime mother," "an angel, to whom God had lent a body for a brief season." To her he attributed the best of his character, and her precepts were the ruling influence of his life.

One charming feature in the character of Samuel Johnson (notwithstanding his rough exterior) was the tenderness with which he invariably spoke of his mother, who implanted in his mind his first impressions of religion. In the time of his greatest difficulties he contributed out of his slender means to her comfort.

Cromwell's mother was a woman of spirit and energy, equal to her mildness and patience; whose pride was honesty, and whose passion was love; and whose only care, amidst all her splendor, was for the safety of her son in his dangerous eminence.

Curran speaks with great affection of his mother, to whose counsel, piety and ambition he attributed his success in life. He used to say, "If I possess anything more valuable than face, or person, or wealth, it is that a dear parent gave her child a portion from the treasure of her mind."

It was Ary Scheffer's mother whose beautiful features the painter so loved to engrave in his pictures, that by great self-denial inscribed him with the means of pursuing the study of art.

Mirabeau writes: "I lost my mother thirty years ago; nevertheless she fol-lows me from age to age. She suffered for me—in my poverty and was not allowed to share my better fortune."

Napoleon Bonaparte was accustomed to say that "the future good or bad conduct of a child depended entirely on the mother." Nobody had any command over him except his mother, who found means, by a mixture of kindness, severity and justice, to make him love, respect and obey her.

Goethe owed the bias of his mind and character to his mother, who possessed in a high degree the art of stimulating young and active minds. "She was worthy of life!" once said Goethe, and when he visited Frankfort he sought out every individual who had been kind to her, and thanked them all.

John Randolph said: "I should have been an atheist if I had not been for one recollection, and that was the memory of the time when my mother used to take my little hand in hers, and make me on my knees to say, 'Our Father who art in Heaven.'"

Nearly 5,000 women,

The Boatmen of Shanghai.

THE floating population of China is immense, and one is struck with this at every port. To build and repair their vessels is a branch of industry I have never seen described, but it must be enormous. Millions, probably, of families live in them and never go on shore. There is no craft so small, not even the "sampan" that attends a foreign ship, but has room for its idols or gods, before which the sweet incense fire "joss paper." I will digress here a little to tell of the boatmen of Shanghai. They are mostly from the distant seaports of Ningpo and Swatow, long of a hardier race and better sailors than the men of this province. By some mysterious telegraphy they know when a ship is coming, and several lie waiting for a job at the "creek mouth" outside Wusung. Each one has the name of the ship he served last painted in a conspicuous place aft. The one I engaged had "Halloween" on it, this name, "Sam" underneath. Sam is a cognomen all Chinese boatmen glory in.

His sampan, which is exactly like all the rest, is about sixteen feet long, and about the shape of a half peach stone. A couple of guards run around it, as to one of their table-sheet-shaped steerers, projecting aft over the stern and bending up at the extremities like the horn of a crescent. Sometimes a mat is used instead of matting, for I cannot make out. The forward half is decked over, and under this deck Sam keeps lots of things. The remainder, or after-half this is not decked, but has a platform, and is roofed over, the roof of bamboos and matting arched from side to side. Under this he sits at the end of his oar. On the floor is a rug, and overhead are trousers taken from Harper's Bazar, the Illustrirte Zeitung, or an illuminated calendar, many of the pictures upside down, all beginning from the beginning. Ships Sam has studied. Over this roof is its exact counterpart made to slide, and when it is in the bad Sam will gently slide the whole thing over if it rains, snows or the wind is raw and cold, and goes to a wrap in the cover under limbs with. Under this at night Sam arranges himself for sleep somehow or other, and, when religious worship is "farin and penance," that most always is the case. Sam is a Buddhist. He says he is "Joss" for the band, such, in fact, as may secure their safe withdrawal from the region.—N. Y. Sun

The prisoners have since been released on the payment of $90,000.

WHEN buying a cow, be sure and draw the milk from each teat, to see that all are in good working order. Outside appearances can't always be relied upon.

HOME, FARM AND GARDEN.

ONE mode of protecting the trees against insects that crawl up to the bark, consists in fastening a rope around the tree and nailing a strip of tin four inches wide around the rope, where they may be killed by applying kerosene.

MR. SANBORN, of New Hampshire, thinks, after careful experiments, that currying cattle prevents them from fattening. If this is so with fat cattle, what must be the effect upon cows in milk, whose bones are so much nearer the surface?

THE chief products of decaying vegetable matter are carbonic acid gas, carburetted hydrogen gas and sulphuretted hydrogen gas. All these are prejudicial to health; therefore be careful to remove all decaying vegetable matter from your dwellings.

TREATMENT FOR SCRUB LAMENESS IN HORSES.—Take one or two tablespoonfuls of raw (i. e. before it is boiled) linseed oil and rub it over the stifle-joint thoroughly; then bathe or heat it in with a hot shovel or iron; if it does not get well in three or four days repeat it.

CANKER-WORMS often change the tearing year of whole orchards, greatly to the owner's benefit; they are easily destroyed with Paris green when no longer wanted. Cultivation, manuring and proper pruning will insure a vigorous healthy varieties of apples nearly every year.

WHERE often advocate a change of food for cows, because it brings to get tired of one kind of food. Our experience says Land and Home, is that the only change cows like is from poor to rich food, from rich to poor, or fresh grass. Changes in any other way always require several days to get cows to eating freely.

A GERMAN gardener has found by experience that black or green flies, caterpillars, etc., are at once destroyed by dropping the plants dressed by them with water in which the stems of the tomato plant have been well boiled. The liquor is applied when cold, and not only kills the insects, but leaves an odor which prevents others from coming.

GERMAN chemists claim to have proven that a change of the quality of a cow's food does not change the quality of her milk. This seems good philosophy, as it would greatly hurt the calf if the quality of the milk changed every time the cow got hold of a new kind of food. Yet many of our best dairymen say the amount of cream is greatly affected by a change of food from poor to rich.

BURN all is quite common among cattle in the spring, and is indicated, as the name, by a dull coat and loss of appetite. A simple remedy, yet one which is very often effective, is to have a dash of salt thrown on the back by pulling it up. Insert it well down length of the backbone. Sometimes there will be a stream from the horn, and the animal will show signs of improvement surprisingly soon after the operation.

CARBOLIC ACID.—An agricultural writer says: Last fall I had two cocks infected; the first one was almost choked to death with the roup. The hoarse, cheesy substance having formed in the windpipe. I had saved the lives of others by taking it off with the point of a scissors. In this case I took a piece of writing paper, made a funnel the size of a child's finger, opened the cock's beak and another person blew a half teaspoonful of sulphur down its throat. We put him out, I suppose, to die, but in the end, and after the third dose he could crow as loudly as ever.

CARROT PUDDING.—Quarter pound flour and as much of suet. Add carrots, do not take the large ones, select the more tender short ones; grate the same quantity of raw carrot; use a quarter of a pound of white pulverized sugar, same of currants and of raisins; grate in a third of a nutmeg, and add a very little cloves; mix all these ingredients well up together. If it be too stiff, add a very little milk, but generally there is water enough in the eggs to hold the mixture together; tie up in a light cloth and boil for six hours. If properly managed, the pudding makes a very handsome appearance at table. Eat with a hard sauce.

IF spermaceti is dropped on any garment, or furniture, turn carefully scrape off all that can be removed without injury to the material; then lay brown paper over the spot, or a piece of blotting paper and a hot iron. Change the paper until the oil shows through. Continue to renew the paper and apply the warm iron until the paper shows no more oil. Oils, grease, wax, tar, vegetable or animal juices, resinous matter, such as pitch or tar, iron and ink spots, are difficult to remove completely, but ink and iron-mold the most so of all. Whenever much writing is done in a house, and children have free access to the writing desk, books, papers and the carpet are most likely to bear marks of mirrhle, but the injury is not irreparable.

A WEAK solution of oxalic acid, applied with a brush with great care, will remove the ink from books or papers, and in novice injure them; or, if it is spilled on linen, cotton or any white goods, oxalic acid will remove it, unless dried in and of long standing. I find one equal quantities of muriatic acid and the salt will remove it, but both these preparations are poisonous, and should be carefully labeled and kept out of the reach of children or careless servants. Delicate colors would be destroyed by these preparations. Ask the druggist for a weak solution of pyrophosphate of soda, dip a brush in it, and carefully wet the ink spot, and after several trials it will remove ink from the delicate colors without injuring the goods. Wash or sponge with clear water.

IN regard to the use of hen manure and the health of poultry, D. N. Kern, in the Practical Farmer, gives his experiment, which is well worth copying: "I clean my poultry houses every Saturday morning. In one house I have eleven head, in another twenty-nine head and in the third house forty-eight head—in all, eighty head, and the droppings from them weigh forty-four pounds every week. During the months of July, August and September, I had 100 head. As soon as I have my poultry houses cleaned, I take the manure and spread it over my wheat field, or on a sour spot in my meadow, and you can take my word that a man with one eye can see where I put it. In put manure in a box or barrel and keep it one year before it is put to a crop, I think is a wrong way. What would you think of a man who had $10 for sale to put out at interest, but would keep it a year before he put it out? My opinion is, the sooner you give your hen manure to the ready soil, the sooner you get the profit from it. Not long ago I visited a certain man and to my astonishment he told me he was going to keep his manure lying in his large poultry house. No wonder the chicken cholera comes around."

The Village Gossip.

GOSSIP has come to be an ugly word, but when applied to meaning; not was it more detestable than the person who is given to meddling with other peoples' concerns so much as to deserve the name of "village gossip." Search for she infests every community. She will tramp over a village, and in one day will know the history of every inhabitant of the occupants as barren as a field swept by a hail storm. No sooner does she enter by the back door than her shrill voice startles you with: "Good morning, Mrs. Smith; didn't see you at church yesterday; thought may-be the baby was sick. I've been up to see Mrs. Jones; her boy has a cold she thinks, but I know he is catching the scarlet fever. She's all tired out, taking care of that trifling husband. Just says he has pneumonia, but everybody knows what ails him. Martha Jackson was there, helping to nurse the baby; but no knows who else it takes care of. Bridget, she did pan hear that her beau had jilted her? Good thing for her, I guess, for they do say he is poor as Job's turkey. She looks down-hearted and forlorn enough. How do you like the new minister's wife? I don't think she'll do. She was out in another one minute, and the next she was two. His salary can't support that; and she's no housekeeper, her clothes aren't on the line when I passed at twelve o'clock. My butter-woman says she takes four pounds of butter a week; and then there's company, and—and—sometimes I'm afraid—" Here the gossip whispers so low as to be inaudible, and then she goes on in a louder tone: "Well, I must be going, for I've got to get dinner, and I've company, too. Good-by; call again soon." And the gossip leaves to detail to the next family how the Browns had nothing for dinner, and "they do say they never pay for a thing, not even the pew-rent. I wonder who can be writing to Sarah Brown? Some say it's that horrid gambler, who was here last summer. She was all over that old brown silk for the fourth time in my knowledge."

Before she reaches home that night, Mr. Jones is dying of strong drink; his cow is turned into the corn; Mrs. Brown and the Smiths are on the verge of a divorce; the new minister is a bankrupt; Deacon Robinson's son has eloped with the milliner's daughter; Brown's family are on the road to the poor-house; and Sarah is to marry the city gambler.

This is what the gossip is in our town; and there is a very striking family likeness between them all. She is also foremost in all church societies, and a self-invited guest wherever she can squeeze in. When you had her among your acquaintances, for sooner you can't her the better. Bar the doors against her, and when she has no visiting places, she will be forced to stay at home and do the hardest thing she ever undertook to do constantly,—mind her own business.—Bessie Albert, in Farm and Home.

IN the Cates murder trial at Ridge Spring, S. C., the other day, a young colored man said: "I jes tell you, white folks got no business getting to black folks' parties, case darkies is not got much sense no how, and when dey gits a quart of dem whisky dey jes as leave kill dey selves as any other passon."

HUMOROUS.

DURING a period of nearly two centuries the first born of the House of Austria has been a girl—a curious fact.

A LADY playfully struck a reporter of one of the city dailies on the cheek the other day, and the man carries her arm in a sling. The reporter wasn't hurt.

A DAKOTA girl has married a Chinaman. He had some difficulty in explaining the state of his heart, but she finally got his cue.—Boston Transcript.

ONE of the greatest moments in this beautiful world to some people is when they can beat down the price of a tenant artice to nine cents.—Oil City Derrick.

THOSE who deny that two feet make a yard have only to examine some of the feet elevated in the smoking-rooms of our hotels to be convinced of their error.

A MAN who offered for five dollars to put any one on the track of a paying investment, seated a applicant between the rails of the Boston & Albany Railroad.—Boston Post.

"DARLING, will you say you an answer," said Armandtis to her lover, who had just proposed for his hand, "I have a secret to impart." "What is it, dear cat?" he asked, pressing his arm around her waist. She blushed and stammered, "My teeth are false." "No matter," he replied heartily, "I'll marry you in spite of your teeth!"

THE Cleveland force makes the following suicidal remarks: "The Cincinnati Monument, mentioned by Plato, were a race of beings whose distinctive characteristic was the possession of one foot of such huge dimensions that when it raised the fortunate C. M. could throw his back, and by raising his elephantine pedal above him, find himself securely roofed from the storm. This may partially account for the Chicago woman's not wishing to leave that sort of thing to St. Louis."

A YOUNG gentleman somewhat numerous in social circles took his sister, a wee miss, to see a famine the other day in which he is a regular caller. The little girl made herself quite at home and exhibited great fondness for one of the young ladies, hugging her heartily. "How very affectionate she is," said the lady of the house. "Yes; just like her brother, responded the young lady, unthinkingly. Paterfamilias looked up sternly over his spectacles, the young gentleman blushed, and there was consternation in the family circle.—N. Y. World.

How Some Eccentric Young Ladies Dress.

THE girls of the time are shrewd and quick to seize an idea, and just now there is a fancy for dressing in what will over do the Quaker or conventional style. Having caught the effectiveness of reserved taste by reading Miss Alcott's descriptions or pictures, they try it on with a persistency which destroys the charm and effectiveness of the costume altogether. Well-read girls have heard of demure little beauties in gray, feeding yolk-of-the and tidbits. "If they are reared in the fear of the Lord themselves, and silver gray and drab suits appear among the brilliance of legitimate fashion to a phenomenal and suggestive way.

Sometimes the character is very prettily done, as in the case of one feminine exquisite who is remarked wherever she appears on Fifth avenue or at the galleries in brilliant pairings silk dress made shorter than her stature requires, she being of modest size, with skirt in full plaits from the waist, in the old fashioned way, and her shoulders covered with a coachman's cape to match. A delicious ruffle of soft muslin and lace ties at the throat, a fussy little gray chip cottage bonnet, that looked as if she had worn her little sister's hand, by mistake, trimmed with clustering violets and adorable white lace ties, enhances the quaintness of a face which seemed that of an overgrown child with soft drooping hair, fresh, downy complexion, big gray eyes, too light for beauty, and a genital peculiarities and responsibility like that of a devoted young matron who has lately taken the world on her conscience. Her toilet is dainty, from the gray cloth boot to the fresh gray kid glove and seminal gown, too dainty or a worsted that refuses to burn and goes out when the dust blows, and blows the children at the dinner table.

Just as the dockey this affords the square and fresh meat like gloves, stout walking cane and the genteel bob-tailed coat. Not to be outdone, the sister, there is a class of young women whose standard is modeled on the dowdiest most fashionable, and who wear their hair Going up Fifth avenue early mornings, one's vision is drawn to a fast walking young woman, in a light gray cloth gown, of the short, kilted description, rendered rather more ungraceful by being tied by the rash about the hips, the skirt swung clear of a stout pair of broad shoes, and surmounted by a school boy's jacket, with ugly side forms and short skirts, the ugliest set of cheviot business suits, the viral English coat, worn with a hat which looks like that of a servant man's out of livery.

The style cannot be called adorable. It saves too much of the feminine in the mind of the student, or the girl of the period, who poses in our imaginations, with her hands in her pockets and mail stick sticking over her shoulder, with a luncheon of bread and cheese and beer in the back ground.—N. Y. Mail.

THE Austro-Hungarian Government is pushing the scheme for a railway through the Vor Arlberg, and the German authorities have for a canal to connect the German Ocean and the Baltic.

THE lovers of genuine Havana tobacco will have to prepare for higher prices. The crop of 1878 was not prolific, that of 1879 was greatly destroyed, and that of 1880 suffers thus far from excessively dry weather. The product of the present year is expected to resemble that of 1874. The manufacturers are having trouble with their laborers, and the latter generally succeed in dictating their terms. The latest principle, therefore, show some advance, partly on account of higher prices for the raw article. Most of the tobacco sent to Europe has been shipped under unfavorable circumstances, and does not give the highest satisfaction. The best goods, this far, have gone to this country, but command high rates.

A WATER-RESISTING cement, which looks as though it might prove serviceable, has been proposed by a German chemist. He dissolves from five to ten parts of pine dry gelatine in a hundred parts of water, and then adds ten per cent. of a concentrated solution of bichromate of potash. The artucine united with the glue are exposed to the light of the sun, when the bichromate, becoming reduced, the gelatine thus attains great strength and flexibility. Glass ornaments and utensils when broken are said to be neatly and efficiently repaired with this mixture. Of course, the very principle upon which the utility of the cement depends requires that it be kept in the dark, in order that it may act as desired when used.

EDWARD GRAHAM, the champion oarsman, believes that the best physical performance can only be secured by absolute abstinence from the use of alcoholics and tobacco. He eats wholesome food, takes regular and moderate exercise, and declines to cultivate a cheerful state, of mind, in order that his sleep may be sound and refreshing. Go then and do likewise!—Dr. Foote's Health Monthly for April.

A MID-WINTER MARCH.

Capt Clifford Derailed from a Trip Across the Backbone of the Continent.

Camp on Snake River, Wyo., Jan. 11, 1880.

MR. PROTOR:

I have been on the road between here and Rawlins 26 miles more than 2/3 of December, and have still 86 miles to go before reaching the end of my journey, and over roads fully as bad. It not worse, than those already passed through, literally, for we had really to dig our way through miles of snowdrifts.

I am in charge of the baggage for our regiment, and as officers and men are very desirous of seeing their traps, I purpose to ensure myself a welcome on night by remaining with the baggage until it is safely conducted into camp, if it takes all winter. Three wagons have gone ahead, and one still lingers in the rear; for that one I am waiting, putting in the time while waiting by making two sleds. Like the Red River carts, they have not a screw or iron about them. They are made of cotton-wood, frozen as hard and I fancy they will glide over the snow as one piece of hard dry tea chips over another.

I wonder if you heard of the terrible storm that struck us on the 23d of December. Lucky if you have. I think it will interest you to know what share I had in it. If you feel bored, throw this into the fire as you read on.

On the 21st, [the train of 24 wagons having pulled out the day before], Lieut. Mott under 1st Cavalry, Surgeon Perry, U. S. A., and myself rode, mounted with an ambulance, a spring wagon, and one baggage wagon, under charge of Sergeant Hill and Private Grace, Co. "H," 7th Infantry, to overtake the train and get through to White River if possible. We had heard rather alarming stories about the deep snow, but with the several years of years service in Montana, decided that we could get through, as snow could stop us, if necessary, only for short stoppages. We camped for the night in the shanty, together with a conscript party. Sixteen of us slept on the dirt floor. During the night I thought I heard a rustling among the mules and determined to go out and investigate matters. I rose among in my desire to do what was right, and watch over the government property committed to my care. Finding my overshoes I slipped them on and proceeded to step out.

"Where the devil are you going?" growled a rough voice as I planted my toes on a substance that yielded like rubber, and which after various deliberation I concluded was a stomach.

I tried in another direction. "D——n it keep your shoes off my face," was snapped at me like a steel trap. "This is worse than the mules."

I thought the animals had quieted down by this time and turned in to bed again, but the respite outside lasted again, and I decided to go out. This time I crawled on all fours, loosing my way with my hands. The mules were all [illegible] and I [illegible] From. Back to my bed I went, crawling to it as I came away from it. I wish I could have heard the swearing I heard that night. The shrieking of the wind outside was accompanied by curses in every key from the bottle.

I could hear Sergt. Hill muttering, "Well this is the darndest outfit! If I could get to sleep without cursing I'd put plugs in my nose." "There, you give us the next verse" and he gave some one a kick.

"What are you doing?" in an injured tone. "Just you lie a while now and listen to me snore" said Hill "its my turn now."

Morning came at last. I must confess that I had listened to the howlings of the wind through the long night with feelings very unlike those that kept me company for the first two miles out from Rawlins, and I was not at all surprised to see the great billows of snow that were lying just the cabin door. We knew the train was only three miles ahead, and so we were in no hurry to start.

About noon on the 22d we overtook half the train at Big Springs. The other half was in plain sight. With ten mules to the wagon they were slowly trailing through the deep frozen snow. No sound that I ever heard could match a cracking whip. The snow was just hard enough to hold a mule until he got thirty upon it, then down he would go. The wagons cut it up in cakes that stood on edge like cakes of ice in a jam or gorge.

We halted around the shanty at the Springs until the wagons were out of sight and then started, and even with the ambulance had to stop and rest the animals repeatedly. A warning drive of four miles brought us to "Separation Creek" on top of the "Continental Divide." Here we found the wagons halted and went into camp. The wind had gone down or we were in a sheltered position. We found a place on a point that was nearly free from snow, pitched our tent and set up one of Clifford's stoves [patent].

The sun set red as blood. The wind which had been shaving a gale from the southwest fell suddenly, and a soft silence set back possession of the scene. The red sunlight striking the unbroken field of snow, made it look like a sea of blood-flecked here and there with a cutting frost. Shortly after dark we were in the tent, where I left the canvass shaker. Sprung up I went out, and to the spurious sky was covered in the north by a greyish black mass of clouds that seemed to move, and did move. Stronger and stronger grew the wind, until it had increased to a tornado that bore on its bosom great flakes of snow that whirled and eddied about in malicious glee.

"Hal hal boys, don't be afraid; this is our fun." "Well this is in our backs thank fortune" we said to one another. "Lets go to bed" and to bed we went. In the morning the wind was still blowing from the north west, and the snow flying worse than on the day before.

A pack train came in from the south. The packers came into our tents with frozen faces, looking like dead mens faces. All this day we remained in our tent, burning up our entire supply of wood. Only half a mile away was abundance of dry quaking aspen, but the snow was flying in such dense masses that I did not dare to order any of the men after it. The sage brush was buried in snow, but we had to dig it out. In doing this both my ears were frozen before I knew it. When night came we had a pile of sage brush inside the tent and another outside. The half of the train that had been left at Big Springs had been brought over. In the morning (the 24th) the wind had whipped around to the south west again, and it seemed not quite so cold, but sage fuse standing not four feet from a red hot stove. The wagon master, Mr. White, decided to essay a move with half the train. After a great deal of thumping of arms and hands the half train with ten mules to a wagon started. They seemed almost to grow out of our sight over a ridge, and we settled back in our seat waiting for the last half of the train to be moved. The waiting was fortunate, for in a few hours the teamsters began to return with fingers, toes, cheeks and ears frozen. Some were so benumbed when they reached camp that they were just able to walk. They had deserted their wagons on the road. The wagon master and those who remained with him had managed to pitch a tent, and here Mr. White lay with a frozen foot disabled. Eighteen out of twenty-four teamsters were more or less disabled by frozen hands, feet and faces. The outfit was thoroughly unnerved and demoralized.

Not knowing Mr. White was so badly frozen, loaned private Grace my overcoat to put over his, put him on a horse and sent a note to Mr. W. asking him to come over, as I thought of returning to the train for fresh teamsters, and desired first to consult with him. He replied that he could not ride a horse. In the morning (Christmas) I sent the ambulance after and brought him to camp. The snow was so badly drifted that their two and a half miles and return consumed five hours. Upon the return of the ambulance I started for Rawlins with Grace and Graham Co., C, 4th. Inft., as drivers. Fresh teams ure and forage for the animals was sent out, and the disabled ones taken in to Rawlins. On the 26th Lieut. McCauley and Dr. Peters returned to Rawlins, and we made preparations for a fresh start.

The coldest part of the cold wave seemed to have passed, though the weather was anything but colder. On January 1st, 1880, Dr. Peters and I again started, Lieut. McCauley had gone to Fort Steele to try the direct route from there to Snake River with pack mules. Our first drive was to "Spring camp" as it had been christened, and our experience of the trip before was repeated with slight variations. This time it of us slept on the floor of the 12×14 stores.

The coldest part of the cold wave seemed to have passed, though the weather was anything but colder. On January 1st, 1880, Dr. Peters and I again started, Lieut. McCauley had gone to Fort Steele to try the direct route from there to Snake River with pack mules. This time [illegible] of us slept on the floor of the 12×14 stores.

The [illegible] on [illegible] and after a deal of hard pulling passed half our train just where we had left it on the 26th of Dec. The other half had managed to get through to Lamont's ranch, an old overland stage station. There we met Col. Sumner, 5th Cavalry, Capt. Carpenter 14th, Infantry, and Lieuts Price and Robinson, 5th Inft. They had come through from White River, and their reports of the fearful condition of the country over which they had come, made my heart almost sink. My animals were already exhausted, and as we were ahead of the train, I concluded to lie over here all next day and put our Rawlins wagon on runners. But when morning came I found nothing to work with but a dull axe and worst of all nothing to make runners of. The entire day was passed away and we went to bed no better off than when we arose. While we were sitting around the stove that night, Mr. Post, one of the owners of the ranch drove up in a "jumper" and after I had made known our position, he told me to help myself to anything at the ranch I wanted, and finished me up inch augur from some scraps of old iron. There were some heavy pine logs piled up near the house, and we took one of these in the morning, cut it in two, and with the dull axe, duller saw and inch auger managed to put runners under the baggage wagon. Then I turned the ambulance over to a wagon master, with two of the mules, and fitched the other two mules to the baggage wagon sled. Two strong thawed, our impediments reduced by one ambulance, we again started. The runners fortunately held on until we had passed through the deepest of the snow, then one lopped over and I was obliged to have both cut off. That night we used them for fire wood. In the morning, much to my satisfaction, I saw a long train of empty wagons coming towards us from the direction of White River. There were sixty-eight of them and they had so thoroughly cut the snow up, that we had no further trouble from this point. Here we split with, with a mountain range to cross on this side of which [illegible] from six to ten feet of snow, no wood on the road, no hay.

The mules will have to be fed on sage brush, and grease wated. But we are bound to go through. If I am not buried in a snow bank I will give you the second volume of this "ever true tale of suffering" not by "blood and flame," but by the combined forces of the frost nose taking the field with the Frost King at their head. I must do Sergt. Hill and Private Grace the justice of saying that they have been invaluable. They are hardy, patient, willing, and better than all intelligent. Yours,

W. CLIFFORD.

The Chicago Tribune speaks as follows of the ticket, "Washburne and Edmunds," which was so strongly commended by the Chicago Journal, in a recent issue apparently by a most excellent compromise ticket, and could not be defeated by any ticket, the Democrats could put up. It would carry New York as well as Indiana, and put the campaign out of doubt from the word go; but will the Convention have the sagacity to make so wise a compromise

Ex-Senator Christiancy, of this State, at present Minister to Peru, has commenced a suit for divorce from his wife, in one of the courts. It will be remembered that some three or four years ago, when Judge Christiancy was in the Senate, he met, wed and won Miss Engelbiel, a niece of Major Engelbiel of the United States Army, who lived at the same private boarding house where the Senator did. Her father was, and still is, a clerk in the Sixth Auditor's office in the Treasury Department, and was known as a "Treasury girl." She was young, but far from handsome, having red hair and anything but attractive features. What influences was brought to bear upon the Judge, if any, is not known; or what especial merit he saw in the young maiden to be a wife, was a mystery to the friends of both parties. It was evidently another instance of "Love going blind," and this was the only explanation that could be offered. However, the marriage was consummated—and the world wondered! This union of May and December, as it were, hasn't been harmonious. Rumor says the parties have quarreled more or less, and there are reports about Mrs. C's conduct which are not at all complimentary to her. Mrs. Christiancy claims that she has also made an application for divorce, on the ground of ill-treatment, and that she left her husband in Peru because of abuse. The controversy is likely to create something of a sensation at the National Capital, and furnish gossip-mongers with an unusually choice morsel.

A Resolution was introduced in the House, Friday of last week directing the President to notify China that our government desires an aprobation of the closure of the Burlingame treaty under which citizens and subjects of either power shall have the same right to settle in the territory of the other that is granted to the subjects of the most favored foreign power. It is under this clause of the treaty that, so long as the United States is open to immigrants from any other nation it cannot be closed against the Chinese; and without the abrogation of that clause, Congress has no power to pass a statue limiting or excluding the immigration of the Celestials.

The Bay City Tribune utters the right sort of sentiment when it says of the Presidential question: "We have taken no pains to ascertain Republican sentiment on the Presidential question, as we are far more anxious to elect our nominee than we are as to who he shall be." "Them's our sentiments" exactly. We have a choice among proposed candidates, but we care more for the success of the Republican party and its principles, than we do for the advancement of our particular favorite.

Jessie Raymond, a young woman in Washington, with a little child in her arms, accuses United States Senator Ben Hill, of Georgia, of having seduced her, demands that he shall take care of her and their joint progeny. She is making it exceedingly uncomfortable for the chivalric Georgian. It has come to such a pass that three policemen are required to watch the poor, wronged woman, in order to keep her from annoying or hurting the great Georgian Senator.

The Postoffice department has contracted with the propeller Gazelle for steamboat mail service between Petoskey and Mackinac six times a week from June 15 to September 30, 1880, which last will be of benefit to pleasure seekers during summer months.

"General Grant can't carry Indiana" say his opponents. Perhaps not; but it is well to remember that he was the last man who did carry it, and that since he went out of office the State has gone Democratic every time.

Of the Republican daily newspapers in Iowa 5, favor Gen. Grant, 8, favor Blaine, 1 favors Washburne, and 2 have not as yet expressed any decided preference.

Stephen D. Dillaye, who was nominated for President by the St. Louis Greenback-Labor Convention has resigned that honor and declared against the movement which nominated him.

The Democrats will meet at East Saginaw, June, 8th, to select delegates to the party gathering at Cincinnati, where Samuel Tilden has gobbled all the comfortable hotel accommodations.

Among the Republican students at the Michigan University, the Presidential choice stands: Blaine 29, Grant 88, Sherman 16, Gairfield 18, Washburne 11, Edmunds 8, Conkling 5.

Brick Pomeroy has gone out of the newspaper business, and his Le Crosse Democrat is to be a Republican daily hereafter. How are the mighty fallen!

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

BY TELEGRAPH AND MAIL.

XLVIth Congress.

The bill incorporating the National Bimetallic Association was discussed in the Senate on the 23d. The Geneva Award bill was further considered and debated. An exciting personal controversy occurred in the House, growing out of a charge made by Mr. Hiscock, of Syracuse, that Randall, the day before, in a committee room, secured the reference of a bill raising several reductions in the Laws instead of those on Revenue of Ways and Means, the rules requiring that all bills relating to revenue shall be referred to the latter committee. Mr. Hiscock moved to amend the journal so as to direct the bill to the Committee on Ways and Means. The Speaker entertaining the motion, Mr. Nicholls moved to lay it on the table, which was agreed to—135 to 117. To counteract this interest in reciprocity, and lay that question on the table, Speaker Randall and Mr. Townshend then desired to withdraw his motion to reconsider, but there being an objection the Speaker ruled that the motion was not now in possession of the House. Considerable confusion then ensued, but was under the control of the Chair, and the appointments were made to the position to reconsider voted for by Mr. Hiscock. Mr. Townshend appealed from this decision, and, on motion of Mr. Hardy, the appeal was tabled—152 to 93. The motion to reconsider was finally agreed to—151 to 93—under which a lot of words ensued. Mr. Townshend indignantly exposing the system of dumping on the table, and he said he proposed to hold Mr. Garfield personally responsible for it. Mr. Garfield looked on, and that is the most to announce that he (Townshend) had intentionally deceived the House, he charitably was guilty of a willful, deliberate falsehood. After a disgraceful scene most of the afternoon an adjournment was taken without disposal of the matter.

The Geneva Award bill was further debated in the Senate on the 24th....The entire session of the House, which lasted until midnight, was devoted to a discussion relative to the disposition to be made of Mr. Townshend's bill reducing the duties on certain articles, the previous resolutions of which offered by Mr. McLane, declaring that in the opinion of the House the revenue of the bill to the Committee on the Revision of the Laws was improperly under the rules, and that such committee should be discharged from its further consideration and the bill referred to the Committee on Ways and Means. By filibustering proceedings the opponents of the resolution succeeded in preventing a decisive vote before the afternoon session, a motion for the previous question.

Mr. CAMERON (Pa.) introduced a joint resolution in the Senate on the 25th providing for a commission to consider and report what legislation is needed for the better regulation of commerce among the States, the commission to consist of nine members, three Representatives and three citizens to be appointed by the President, who shall sit during the recess, and inquire into the conditions that may exist in regard to the transportation of commerce among the States, carried in bond and water routes, securing thereby to the people the required facilities of the lowest rates, the greatest safety and economy in time, and that will prevent unjust discrimination, and to report their recommendations to the next Congress. The bill incorporating the National and Bimetallic Association was passed to provide for issuing patents for public lands subject only to the payment of the fees which have been heretofore required. Adjourned to the 26th.

After a friendly controversy in the House over the Mahone resolution relative to the reference of Mr. Townshend's tariff reduction bill, and on certain articles the journals of the 23d, 24th and 25th were approved, and the resolution discharging the Committee on the Revision of the Laws from the further consideration of Mr. Townshend's bill was agreed to—yeas 151, nays 93—and the bill was then referred to the Ways and Means Committee—all the Democrats and Greenbackers voting with the majority.

The Senate was not in session on the 26th. In the House the morning hour was consumed in the consideration of private bills, and a long debate took place upon the question whether a two-thirds vote was requisite under the rules to take up for consideration a bill reported by the committee of public bills. Without deciding the point, the House went into Committee of the Whole on the private calendar.

Domestic.

A WASHINGTON dispatch of the 24th states that the Interior Department had been informed that large numbers of Sitting Bull's band had applied at Fort Peck for rations, offering to surrender their arms and ponies. These surrender, Secretary Schurz stated, would have to be made to the military posts. The Secretary said he had a certain reason to believe that the balance of the Ute Indians engaged in the Meeker massacre would be brought in without delay, one of the Indians captured by Jack, and then in Washington, had been identified by Mrs. Meeker as having acted in a friendly manner toward the ladies during captivity. Ouray and the other Utes who had been in Washington on several occasions for Colorado on the evening of the 24th.

The first coal charter of the season was that of Buffalo, on the 24th, at seventy-five cents per ton.

Heavy snow-storms were prevalent throughout the Eastern States on the night of the 24th.

The remains of [illegible] were found, on the 24th, in a vacant lot in Brooklyn, N. Y., have been published by an infusion of poison weed, drawn by mistake for tea. All but recovered except one on the 24th.

Dr. CARLIN, a prominent Pittsburgh (Pa.) physician, fatally poisoned his two-year-old son on the 24th, by administering a teaspoonful of morphine by mistake for some [illegible].

At Winfield, Kan., a few days ago a barn and a smaller building were carried away by a cyclone, and neither had been found, not even a fragment, after long hours search.

In the case of the City of Chicago against the sureties of David A. Gage, late defaulting city Treasurer, the Illinois Supreme Court has decided that the fact that the bondsmen signed the bond, or were called, blanks to be filled, did not invalidate the bond. The Court held that the sureties signed the paper knowingly to be a bond, and had the contingent circumstances been such that they must have known that there was to be no Treasurer. They made themselves responsible for the faithful performance of his duties as such official, and in reality each one constituted Gage his agent to complete the bond.

A NEW YORK telegram of the 25th states that Edison had said he had ascertained the cause of the cracking of some of the globes containing the incandescent carbons, and had found means of removing the cause of the fracture. This, he said, would obviate the necessity of enveloping the globes, and keep their cost at twenty-five cents apiece.

A SPECIAL to the Denver Tribune, dated March 23, says Indians had attacked a party of six men near Santa Barbara, N. M., killing them all.

The Supreme Court of the State of Illinois has recently decided that the usual practice by building associations of loaning money at more than legal rates of interest is usurious.

On the 26th the Secretary of the San Francisco Vigilance Committee published a card denying that negotiations were going on for the purchase of incriminating letters being had between that organization and the Sand Lottera.

Personal and Political.

The State National Greenback Convention of Tennessee has been called to meet at Nashville, May 22, to choose delegates to the Chicago Convention.

At noon on the 23d the steamer City of Mexico, with Generals Grant and Sheridan on board, reached Galveston, Texas, after a somewhat stormy passage from Vera Cruz. The party was enthusiastically received by the citizens of Galveston.

In executive session on the 23d, the Senate rejected the President's nominations for Census supervisors in the First, Second and Eleventh Districts.

The Pennsylvania State Greenback Convention met at Harrisburg on the 23d and elected delegates to the National Convention to be held in Chicago on the 9th of June. The delegates were instructed to vote for Hendrick B. Wright for President. The resolutions adopted regard nationality, currency reform, and rights of labor as one and inseparable; declare that the United States shall issue all currency, gold and silver and paper, all to be a free legal tender for all purposes, public and private, and that there shall be no banks of issue, State or National, extend party sympathy and active co-operation to the workingmen of California in their efforts to combat the evils of Chinese cheap labor, and declare that full restitution should be made to soldiers for depreciation of the money in which they were paid.

A MONTREAL (Canada) dispatch of the 23d says French Canadians were leaving that city at the rate of sixty per week, their destination being Michigan or Colorado, while a few were destined for California. A large number of mechanics, skilled and unskilled, were being engaged to go to Colorado and other places to prepare lumber, etc. for new railways.

A LONDON dispatch of the 26th says Prince Leopold, the youngest son of Queen Victoria, nearly lost his life on the 25th, and is blown down by the windstorm prevailing on the 24th, when a chimney was blown down in the vicinity of his residence, Claremont. He had just left the room a moment before. Some letters, postal cards, etc., at his victim never injured him in any manner.

On the 24th the President nominated A. Newton Pettis, of Pennsylvania, to be Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of New Mexico; James B. Angell, President of the Michigan University, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to China, vice George F. Seward, recalled; and John F. Swift, of California, and Wm. H. Trescott, of South Carolina, to be Commissioners to China to negotiate a treaty.

The New York State Convention of the [illegible] Democracy was held at Albany on the 26th. Patrick E. Ford, George O. Jones, James F. Wright and Samuel Lorell were chosen as delegates-at-large to the Chicago Convention. The resolutions adopted were substantially those adopted by the Pennsylvania Convention.

Judge Moran, of the Cook County (Ill.) Circuit Court, rendered a decision on the 24th, holding that persons not freeholders are debarred from serving on juries in Illinois. He said that the common law provides that a freehold qualification is necessary for jurors, and as there is no provision of any State law repealing this principle, but, on the contrary, the statute requires that "a juror shall be free from all legal exception," the Judge held that non-freeholders were not competent to serve.

A SUB COMMITTEE of the Anti-Third-Term Committee of the National Republicans of St. Louis met in that city on the evening of the 26th and issued a call for a National Mass Convention to meet in that city on the 6th of May for the purpose of "uniting expression to the will of the American people against the principle of a third term, inaugurating a movement with a view to fixing a fixed, substantive tenure by Constitutional amendment, and saving such other action as the delegates may deem expedient."

Rev. Dr. Dix had an interview with "Gentleman Jo" Williamson on the 25th, in the course of which the latter manifested great contrition and protested his innocence of an intention to levy blackmail. Mr. Gayler, of the post office, believed the culprit was "guided in his work by some higher purpose, and not thought he should be brought to punishment for the sake of example.

The Texas Republican State Convention was held at Austin on the 25th, and elected delegates to the National Convention, a majority of whom are said to favor the nomination of General Grant. The delegates were instructed to vote as a unit in the convention.

At Richmond, Va., on the 26th, Judge G. L. Christian, of the Hustings Court, ordered the summoning of two colored men on the venire for the next term of his court. This will be the first time colored people ever had representation on the juries of any courts in that State, outside the Federal Courts.

Count De Lesseps, the eminent French engineer, arrived in Chicago from San Francisco on the 26th. He was banquetted in the evening by the Civil Engineers' Club of the Northwest.

General Grant visited San Antonio, Tex., on the 26th, where he received an enthusiastic reception.

Foreign.

A CONSTANTINOPLE dispatch of the 26th says the Turkish Government had refused to pay for leasing the sum demanded by Montenegro. Another dispatch of the same date says the sum paid to the Greek Brigands for the ransom of Colonel Synge was $60,000.

A DISPATCH from Cape Town, telegraphed in London on the 23d, says another great diamond robbery had been committed in the Post-office there. Diamonds worth $500,000 had been abstracted from the Postmaster's safe, besides a great number of banker's drafts.

The business portion of the City of Sassana, San Domingo, has been recently destroyed by fire. At the height of the conflagration a party of villagers quarreled over their booty, and several of them were killed. The loss is placed at $1,500,000.

Walter, a London forger, who had previously distinguished himself in betting frauds, was sentenced to twenty years' penal servitude on the 24th.

The Queen prorogued the British Parliament on the 24th, and announced the issue of writs for a general election. In the speech, which was read by the Lord high Chancellor, she says her foreign relations are favorable to the maintenance of peace in Europe, and she expresses confidence in the speedy settlement of affairs in Afghanistan. Referring to the measures for the relief of the distress in Ireland, she says she hopes they will be accepted by her Irish subjects as proof of the ready sympathy of Parliament.

A St. Petersburg special of the 25th to the London Times says the night previous, last and mortally wounded his wife and servant, who entered his bed-room during the night, thinking the Czar had called him.

The Emperor of Russia is reported to have presented Prince Alexander, of Bulgaria, with a war steamer, 40,000 rifles and several Krupp cannon.

The Russian newspapers have been notified to refrain from publishing anything concerning the expedition against the Turcomans.

The ex-Empress Eugenie embarked at Southampton for South Africa on the 25th. She goes to visit the locality where the Prince Imperial was killed.

A DISCHARGED employe entered the room of Hon. George Brown, editor of the Toronto Globe, on the 26th after dark, and attempted to assassinate him. After firing once, the ball striking the old gentleman in the thigh, the would-be murderer was seized, disarmed and conveyed to prison.

A MONTREAL (Canada) dispatch of the 26th says French Canadians were leaving that city at the rate of sixty per week, their destination being Michigan or Colorado, while a few were destined for California. A large number of mechanics, skilled and unskilled, were being engaged to go to Colorado and other places to prepare lumber, etc. for new railways.

A London dispatch of the 26th says Prince Leopold, the youngest son of Queen Victoria, nearly lost his life on the 25th, and is blown down by the windstorm prevailing on the 24th, when a chimney was blown down in the vicinity of his residence, Claremont. He had just left the room a moment before. Some letters, postal cards, etc., at his victim never injured him in any manner.

A mutiny of miners at a place called Anguero, in Mexico, resulted in the killing of two Americans and one Canadian.

A St. Petersburg dispatch of the 26th says a telegram of the 25th from Tiflis announces that a terrible snow-storm had raged in the Caucasus for three days, and that the loss of life was great. Many persons perished in the mountain passes, and the number of deaths among the troops alone is estimated at 1,000. Whole villages were buried in the snow, and the inhabitants perished. Communication with the interior was entirely cut off.

Crimes.

A London telegram of the 26th says China had decided to risk war with Russia rather than accept the result of the recent negotiations.

LATER NEWS.

A London dispatch of the 28th says that Alexander Sutherland undertook to speak at Enniscorthy, Ireland, a few days before, but was greeted with a shower of odorous eggs, and was compelled to abandon the platform.

A Washington telegram of the 27th says Edgar M. Marble, tax officer of the Interior Department, would be appointed Commissioner of Patents, and C. D. McCammon would succeed him as tax officer.

It was reported on the 28th that the presence of two United States war vessels, engaged in sounding and surveys at the Isthmus of Panama, was causing considerable excitement and ill-feeling in Colombia. These operations having been conducted without reference to the authorities at Bogota, the native Secretary of state had addressed a letter to the American Consul, asking an explanation. That official was in ignorance, however, and referred the matter to the Government at Washington.

The United States Senate was not in session on the 27th. Several resolutions of inquiry were adopted in the House, and a number of bills were received and referred. The Consular and Diplomatic Appropriation bill was debated in Committee of the Whole, Messrs. Stephens and Townshend (Ill.) strongly advocating the abolition of the office, diplomatic service, and Messrs. Robeson, Cox and Sumner earnestly defending such service.

According to the St. Louis directory, recently published, the population of that city numbers 350,000 persons.

The United States ship Constellation has sailed from New York for Ireland on the 27th, loaded with donations of supplies for the suffering people of that country. The cargo consisted of over 5,000 barrels of provisions, including a large quantity of potatoes, and many boxes of clothing, and was made up by contributions from every part of the country.

The Pennsylvania Board of Pardons has refused to recommend the pardon of Kemble and his associates in the Legislative bribery case.

John McAffee, who, as Speaker of the Missouri House of Representatives in 1866, cast the deciding vote which prevented the State from going out of the Union, died on the 27th, at Quincy, Ill., where he had resided since 1857.

In a speech at the Academy of Music in San Francisco, on the 26th, Denis Kearney declared that the agitation would not cease until the Chinese were driven from the State. The speech is said to have been a comparatively mild one as regards pointed personalities and profanity. At a large meeting held in the evening Mayor Kalloch expressed the desire that the Sand-Lotters should cease their profane and threatening speeches, and added that the people were tired of Kearney and his agitations.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

The ex-Empress Eugenie embarked at Southampton for South Africa on the 25th. She goes to visit the locality where the Prince Imperial was killed.

A DISCHARGED employe entered the room of Hon. George Brown, editor of the Toronto Globe, on the 26th after dark, and attempted to assassinate him. After firing once, the ball striking the old gentleman in the thigh, the would-be murderer was seized, disarmed and conveyed to prison.

A Montreal (Canada) dispatch of the 26th says French Canadians were leaving that city at the rate of sixty per week, their destination being Michigan or Colorado, while a few were destined for California. A large number of mechanics, skilled and unskilled, were being engaged to go to Colorado and other places to prepare lumber, etc. for new railways.

A London dispatch of the 26th says Prince Leopold, the youngest son of Queen Victoria, nearly lost his life on the 25th, and is blown down by the windstorm prevailing on the 24th, when a chimney was blown down in the vicinity of his residence, Claremont. He had just left the room a moment before. Some letters, postal cards, etc., at his victim never injured him in any manner.

On the 24th the President nominated A. Newton Pettis, of Pennsylvania, to be Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of New Mexico; James B. Angell, President of the Michigan University, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to China, vice George F. Seward, recalled; and John F. Swift, of California, and Wm. H. Trescott, of South Carolina, to be Commissioners to China to negotiate a treaty.

The New York State Convention of the [illegible] Democracy was held at Albany on the 26th. Patrick E. Ford, George O. Jones, James F. Wright and Samuel Lorell were chosen as delegates-at-large to the Chicago Convention. The resolutions adopted were substantially those adopted by the Pennsylvania Convention.

Judge Moran, of the Cook County (Ill.) Circuit Court, rendered a decision on the 24th, holding that persons not freeholders are debarred from serving on juries in Illinois. He said that the common law provides that a freehold qualification is necessary for jurors, and as there is no provision of any State law repealing this principle, but, on the contrary, the statute requires that "a juror shall be free from all legal exception," the Judge held that non-freeholders were not competent to serve.

A SUB COMMITTEE of the Anti-Third-Term Committee of the National Republicans of St. Louis met in that city on the evening of the 26th and issued a call for a National Mass Convention to meet in that city on the 6th of May for the purpose of "uniting expression to the will of the American people against the principle of a third term, inaugurating a movement with a view to fixing a fixed, substantive tenure by Constitutional amendment, and saving such other action as the delegates may deem expedient."

Rev. Dr. Dix had an interview with "Gentleman Jo" Williamson on the 25th, in the course of which the latter manifested great contrition and protested his innocence of an intention to levy blackmail. Mr. Gayler, of the post office, believed the culprit was "guided in his work by some higher purpose, and not thought he should be brought to punishment for the sake of example.

The Texas Republican State Convention was held at Austin on the 25th, and elected delegates to the National Convention, a majority of whom are said to favor the nomination of General Grant. The delegates were instructed to vote as a unit in the convention.

At Richmond, Va., on the 26th, Judge G. L. Christian, of the Hustings Court, ordered the summoning of two colored men on the venire for the next term of his court. This will be the first time colored people ever had representation on the juries of any courts in that State, outside the Federal Courts.

Count De Lesseps, the eminent French engineer, arrived in Chicago from San Francisco on the 26th. He was banquetted in the evening by the Civil Engineers' Club of the Northwest.

General Grant visited San Antonio, Tex., on the 26th, where he received an enthusiastic reception.

Foreign.

A CONSTANTINOPLE dispatch of the 26th says the Turkish Government had refused to pay for leasing the sum demanded by Montenegro. Another dispatch of the same date says the sum paid to the Greek Brigands for the ransom of Colonel Synge was $60,000.

A DISPATCH from Cape Town, telegraphed in London on the 23d, says another great diamond robbery had been committed in the Post-office there. Diamonds worth $500,000 had been abstracted from the Postmaster's safe, besides a great number of banker's drafts.

HISTORICAL.

In the Year of Grace 1210—Of Montmorency.

Long ago there dwelt at one time near to the Lake that is called Pere, in the village named after its pioneer missionary (the noble House of France, the celebrated Pierre François Xavier, chevalier De Charlevoix, a gospeller.

In him he was a veritable Friar Tuck in requiring no great stomach of inspiration to finger him to pucker, kissed, smacked his cowl thrown back, his breviary resting by his side, while he deftly plied the quarter-staff, asking Jack the miller's son, or Will o' the Dee boy to a lively tune, -- the quarter-staff of the bold cassock friar raised blows thick and fast on the head, shoulders and backs of the lustiest wight who stood up before him. The whacks and thwacks came harder and faster, until the wearer of the tinsel cross, for mercy, amidst the derisive shouts and laughter of Robin Hood and ye merry men of Sherwood Forest.

Searching over some old time-stained files of the Charlevoix SENTINEL of the year of grace 1879, we find many epistles coming from the pen of that gospeller. In the language of the ancient Pioneer of the early Christian Church of the learned, eloquent Paul, he might well say: "See what a large letter I have written unto thee." No wonder it was large! The hand that wielded the pen was big enough to split the head of a moose, or to twine a lariat rope expertly around the ears of one who touched his dignity. But there, even now in these days we can call mighty intellect. The Liberal Club flourished; the Historic Society met quite often and listened to the words that fell from the lips of those who had dug deep into the pages of history and moral wisdom. The men of reason at that time were flooding the country with raw devices, new decrees now done. A new gospel was being put forth into the world. It raved and sneered about the mistakes of Moses, while he himself knew so little of the Book he tried to pick to pieces.

Transcendentalism was freely discussed even as young misses just from the school. Darwin had come to be better understood, and the theory of evolution accepted in part. Huxley went launched, on the continent, very fish giving out an upright into the "Chain of Ganglia, the combination of movements, and involuntary sythmatic movements, the digestive and visceral organs, and the theory of Monism vision, until those living at the time knew more of the crawfish than they did of the human form divine.

I have said mighty conflicts in those times. The Dominus Scientiarum and Pantheist knew that those were essential to unite Charlevoix, and knowing that a little knowledge is a dangerous thing, and that men often accept half the truth or reject the whole because it is beyond their ken. They therefore labored fruitfully to instil into the minds the grand idea that science and religion go hand in hand. But at this time the gospeller, being his followers was unduly, began charging his more cultivated and refined brethren with "exasperations."

Here he began floundering in a quagmire that would swallow him up. He was fast getting beyond his depth; his vision was becoming troubled, his mind befogged. Apart from tilting lances in the Hostiries, he began striking strange expressions against certain well organized Christian societies existing in Charlevoix, and violently. Thus, the man who was a gospeller had taught: "Though I speak with the tongue of men and of angels, though I possess all knowledge, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing. I am become as a sounding brass or tinkling cymbal." There I will pause ere the sounding brass overcome my resolution.

How can one who has never entered the mystic vail know anything of that charity such as brethren of the Cross bear to one another, bound by the grand principles of the Fatherhood of God, the Brotherhood of Man, they ever stand linked in bonds of Friendship, Love and Truth? Can any one who has never seen the five in the East know anything of such love and watchcare shown by those brethren to the orphans left under their care? How truly the eloquent Paul wrote: "Charity suffereth long and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself is not puffed up."

Heaven all things! Beneath all things endureth all things. The charity founded on the principles of love bestowed on those loved ones, surpasses anything given by Church or private charity, and all private means of beneficence sink and pale beside the charity bestowed by those not the families.

I turned over the pages of my paper again. I found other pens busy—others bringing the doings of the villages to the county paper; but somehow I miss the peculiar signature of the gospeller. Instead something of some strange revolution of nature had taken place. Had this new light in the Charlevoix horizon and devic disappeared, the blazing star resolved into blackness and darkness? Until, turning over other pages, I saw copied from some paper an item about the gospeller being connected with a Democratic paper, because he thought he knew how to run a paper! Sad truth! Sad to relate! He was like a rocket, blazed awhile in the Northern sky; the height of his ambition was nearing to him, but to the full blaze of his glory, arrested, and came down stick.

Truth, for a gospeller to change an opinion, -- to change his views -- he wants his think of all books to put to fill against every evil luck as him. Who who a sound must expect to die by

Our fields of winter wheat look very brown, but under that brown coat there is a healthy green, that will be nursed into life and vigor by plenty of warm spring showers; but should the warm showers fail, and frost succeed frost, the result may be disastrous.

Business is less lingy than last week,—quickening up every day. Our predictions of a few weeks ago is being verified. We met two boys on the streets going to market with pint baskets filled with eggs, and the "hare" was running at large on the streets. Where is the Pound Master.

The Elections.

The election in this Township resulted in a victory for the entire Republican ticket, as follows: Supervisor, Samuel M. See; Clerk, Albert E. Mason; Treasurer, E. Harpwater; Commissioner, Andrew J. Madge; Justice, A. J. McLeod; Superintendent of Schools, J. S. Bixes; School Inspector, E. H. Green,

A Union ticket was in the field with O. Blair for Supervisor; James E. Wood for Clerk; G. W. Miller for Treasurer; J. M. Clark for Justice; L. L. D. Bartholomew for Superintendent of Schools, and W. C. Newman for School Inspector.

Sec, for Supervisor, received twenty majority.

SUNDOWN.

A dispatch from Norwood states that Harris is elected over Wood by ten majority.

HAYES.

Hayes elects E. H. Burgess Supervisor; I. S. Webster, Clerk; C. H. Whitford, Treasurer.

BY GOSX.

"Spring is coming, Spring is coming, don't you hear it in the rills"

April showers have already become fashionable.

D. O. Eley is on the sick list.

Rev. Jacob Gezenkuve is translating Master's "call" into the Ojibwa language

We presume this fine weather will induce the spring poets, very shortly, to crowd their effusions upon the market.

Everybody and their relations are making maple sugar and the children eat wax until their mouth is all stuck up from north to south.

Mr. Wm. Tickner, wife and child, of Iosco, contemplate spending the summer here with Mr. Thomas Murry, the father of Mrs. Tickner, for the purpose of recuperating their health.

Charlie Arnold is building a miniature sloop, or boat-landing rather, on Susan Bay preparatory for spring fishing, and as soon as the ice breaks up, the piscatorial tribes will suffer.

We do not see why parties locating resorts along our lake shore have missed Onge-Jamar. It is located half way between Petoskey and Charlevoix with easy access to either place by daily stages or by water. The view of the lake, bay and opposite shore is magnificent. There is no swamp near to mar the scenery, and the famous Horton's Bay, one of our best trout streams, only one-mile distant. For a cozy, quiet, healthful summer retreat there is not a place along Little Traverse Bay that could be fitted up to better advantage.

Messrs Tillotson and Ward, the parties who bought Burt Brown's homestead, are expected here daily with teams, when they will commence clearing and building and soon make that portion of the wilderness blossom as the rose.

Smith Arm Items.

The Arm is once more free from ice, that is around the head, and the ferry commenced to run April 13th. Joseph Maddock resumes the position of ferryman.

Since our last writing sorrow has visited the home of some of the residents of this town.

Death has taken John M. Barney, a young man well known by most of the people of this town and somewhat known by the young people of Charlevoix. He died of consumption, and was buried by all who knew him. He died at Cadillac. He leaves to mourn his loss one brother and an aged father and mother.

Also the wife of Mr. Jonas Bowman departed this life the 30th of March; she was willing to go, and passed peacefully away telling her companions and children not to mourn for her, but to meet her in the better land.

N. P. Campbell of this place is confined to his bed with liver complaint.

Miss Nettie and Addie Hawks were in town visiting friends. They are going to teach school this summer; Miss Nettie is going to teach the Thompson school in Echo, and Addie the Webster school in Jordan Township.

W. F. Harper is building a scow to be used on the Arm it is 50 feet long.

H. G. Miller starts the 5th of this month for Colorado.

Miss Addie Bowman came in from Holly to attend her mothers funeral and lost her pocket-book at Myers' Falls containing $30. It is thought it was left on a stand in the Hotel.

Geo. Hegites has sold his farm on Pine Lake, in Evelyne, to James Bettes, of Kent county, for $400.

WM. COLLYER, of Banks, who carries the mail between Atwood and South Arm, got into Intermediate Lake one day last week, in crossing on the ice, but managed to wade ashore.

RICHARD O'NEIL, of Marion, lies at the residence of his son-in-law, A. O. H. McCabe, in this village, very ill with stricture. At one time last week his life was despaired of, and his sons in Philadelphia telegraphed for, but we are pleased to learn that he is much better.

THE SENTINEL office is receiving large invoices of new type and material. We now have the most complete job printing establishment north of Traverse City, in this Peninsula, and we propose to keep the lead, in both branches of our line of business. As the SENTINEL is the oldest we propose to make it the best.

FUNERAL.—Henry Bennett father of D. R. Bennett, of Norwood, arrived at that place Friday. Mr. Bennett intends making Charlevoix his permanent home and will remain here this summer. He intends erecting a fine residence upon his property here at no distant day.

COMMON CONVICT.—At the Council Saturday evening a sidewalk was ordered built on the north side of Main street.

The committee on streets was instructed to establish the grade on Mason street between Bridge and Grant streets, also on north side of Main street.

The committee was also instructed to cause a post to be set on the correct corner of Bridge and Main streets, on the Black lot.

MARINE.—The tug Com. Nutt has been nearly painted, and looks like a new boat again.

—The tug Kittie Gaylord, has been sold to Ludington parties who are expected here after her as we go to press.

—A number of vessels and steamers have been seen passing down during the week.

—The schooner E. M. Stanton recently collided with the schooner R. B. King, in Lake Michigan, and it was settled by each vessel repairing its own damages—costing the King $400, and the Stanton $200.

—Capt Tom Doherty sails the schooner Lem Ellsworth this season.

—Capt Dan Way has purchased one-half of the schooner W. A. Smith, and will sail her this season.

—The schooner Fleetwing is to receive a coat of paint at Milwaukee.

—The steamer Lady Washington has been purchased for the Little Traverse and Petoskey business. P. S. Brown of this place has been tendered the position of engineer on her.

—The steamer Gazelle got steam up Thursday, and took a whirl around the harbor. She will commence running as soon as the ice leaves, and will run on the same time as last season.

—The steamer Gazelle went to Bester Harbor Sunday with John Day and a quantity of freight, quite a number of our young people going over. She returned yesterday, coming over in a big northwest sea, and Capt. O'Neill and the passengers speak in high terms of praise of her conduct.

—Geo. Thompson has hauled his boat out of the lake for the purpose of fitting it up for a trip to Lake Superior.

—The Berryville people have been negotiating with the G. R. & I. Co. for a branch road from Elmira to Berryville, and have hopes of success. They offer to cut the right of way and tie the road if the G. R. & I. Co. will grade it, lay the iron and run it.

—Frank Huntington, of Boyne Falls, shot and killed a very large otter last Monday morning, on the mill dam just above the bridge. Mr. Otter was out on a fishing excursion, and having caught a nice one had just come to the surface when a ball from Frank's rifle laid him high on the water.

—While returning from the law suit at Justice Morgan's, last Wednesday, old man Mallor and William Calbert got into an altercation which resulted in a knockdown. The old man was roughly handled but no one seriously hurt. I ate evening the old man and three of his sons went to the house of Calbert and tried to get him out, his wife objected and the objection was sustained.

Election Jottings, Here and There.

The Union forces exerted every effort to elect their ticket in this Township on the 5th, but got humbugged by half-out. We hope it is now thoroughly understood that we will have no more of the Union business in this Township.

—Supervisors were chosen in the several Townships of this county, as follows: Bear Lake—Mr. Bretzlaff. Boyne Valley—E. K. Robinson. Charlevoix—Samuel M. See. Evelyne—James Headley. Evangeline—A. J. Sessoll. Hudson—Mr. Mellen. Hayes—E. H. Burgess. Marion—John Ward. Melrose—I. S. Herrah. Norwood—Wm. Harris. Springdale—W. C. Niles. South Arm—James A. Kent. Wilson—Geo. W. Bailey.

In every Township but Norwood and Charlevoix all Supervisors were re-elected.

—Hon. Bee. of the Democrat was the Democratic candidate for supervisor at Petoskey, and got left by about 60 votes. The entire Republican ticket was elected.

—W. C. Niles was elected Supervisor in Springvale. J. L. Heisle was in the field against him.

—S. B. Thatcher is the new Treasurer in Springvale.

—Banks elected D. H. Stebbins Supervisor.

—Grand Rapids elects Henry S. Smith Mayor, for the Republicans made decisive gains on Monday over '79.

—Supervisor Robinson had Wm. Mears in the field against him, in Boyne Valley, but came out victorious.

—We made a mistake last week in stating that S. M. See received 20 majority, in this Township, for Supervisor The canvas gave him eighteen majority.

—The Democrats carried off the laurels in Little Traverse.

—South Arm has Philip Lanway for Clerk, Dan Iraman for Treasurer, and Samuel Rogers for Highway Commissioner.

—Wilson elects J. W. Littlefield Clerk, A. F. Bowen Treasurer, and G. J. Bowen Highway Commissioner.

—Evangeline elects F. M. Abraham Clerk, P. R. Bourdon Treasurer, and Thos. Wier Highway Commissioner.

—Boyne Valley elects O. H. Horsh Clerk, and F. P. Myers Highway Commissioner.

—Marion elected W. D. Thompson Clerk, Geo. Cooper Treasurer, and Wm. E. Clark Highway Commissioner.

—Norwood elected D. R. Bennett Clerk, Chester Denton Treasurer, and George Estell Highway Commissioner.

—Evelyne elected E. A. Lewis Clerk, Fowler Steele Treasurer, and Henry Nowland Highway Commissioner.

—Torch Lake, Antrim county, has two Supervisors. P. M. Russell was the old Supervisor, and was a candidate for re-election. Dan Blakely was also in the field, and receiving four majority, was declared elected. Several votes were subsequently claimed by Russell to be fraudulent, and he qualified as his own successor. Blakely also qualified, and proposes to take the assessment.

DAN IRAMAN attended J. Upthegrove's auction at Central Lake recently, and purchased several logs. In going home he lost them through the ice in Intermediate Lake.

APPOINTED.—S. McClanahan, late City Treasurer, has recently been appointed Superintendent of the new Reform School Building at Lansing, to which place he will remove the latter part of this month Mr. M. is both competent and worthy, and we congratulate him on his appointment.—Big Rapids Pioneer Magnet.

PIGEONS are nesting near Traverse City The Herald says concerning them:

Last week several small flights were observed on the Platte river, west of this town, and soon the birds began to come from every direction. They came in clouds, millions upon millions. It seemed as if he common consent the entire world of pigeons were concentrating at that point. The air was full of them and the sun shut out of sight, and still they came, millions upon millions more. The nesting is now over than fifteen miles in length and six to eight miles wide, and the birds are still coming in countless numbers. Old hunters say it will probably be the most extensive nesting ever known in the state. The nesting grounds are located in Benzie county, twelve to fifteen miles west of this village.

About three hundred pigeon hunters are on the ground, and more coming.

HISTORICAL.

In the Year of Grace 1610—Old Memories.

Long ago there dwelt at one time possible to the Duke that is called Pau, in the village named after its pleasant commune of the noble House of France, the celebrated Prince Francois Xavier, otherwise De Charlevoix, a gossiper.

In form he was a veritable Four Tark. It required no great stomach at meal times to finger him befrocked, booted, and-belted, his coat thrown back, his business swinging by his side, while he doffs [illegible] quarter-staff, making duck the miller's Son, or Will o' the Dee leg. In a high tansy, as the quarter-staff is, [illegible] finer mind blown thick and fast o' the head, shoulders and arms of the luckless wight who stood up before him. The whacks and thwacks came harder and faster, until the wearer of thick skin took for mercy, amidst the dominos shouts and laughter of Robin Hood and his merry men of Sherwood Forest.

Searching over some old time-stained files of the Charlevoix Sentinel, of the year of grace 1879, we find many quaint and amusing from the pen of the gossiper. In the language of the ambient Pioneer of the early Christian Church—the learned Edward Paul, he might say: "See what a large letter I have written unto thee." No wonder it was lamed. The hand that was called upon to do him duty enough to rule the head of an ox, or to twine a rail staff unmercifully around the ears of the wretched [illegible] dignity. But there were giants in those days—men of mighty intellect. The Island Old Home island, the Honore Sentinel met often and listened to the words that fell from the lips of those who had dug deep into the pages of history and mental science. The men of renown at that time were flooding the country with new theories, new dogmas, new ideas. A new creed was being put forth into the world. Heresy raved and sneered about the subtleties of theme, while he himself knew as little of the Book he tried to pick to pieces.

Transcendentalism was finely discussed even by young magazinist from the school. Darwin had risen to be better understood, and the theory of evolution accepted in part. Huxley wrote learnedly on the common crab-fish giving and, as might into the "Chain of Being," the correlation of movements, and [illegible] rudimentary movements, the olfactory and visceral organs, and the theory of Monad vision, until those living at the time knew more of the world than they did of the human form divine.

I have said nought as yet lived in those times. The Dominie Whitman and Parmenter knew those ideas were creeping into Charlevoix, and knowing that a little knowledge is a dangerous thing, and that men often accept half the truth as [illegible] the whole because it is beyond their keep. They therefore labored [illegible] to instil into the minds the grand idea that science and religion go hand in hand. But about this time the wonder, feeling his influence was waning, began changing his more cultivated and refined brethren with "materialism."

Here he began floundering in a quagmire that would swallow him up. He was fast getting beyond his depth: his vision was wa[illegible] becoming bedazzled, his mind befogged. Apart from sitting himself in the Dominie, he began attacking strong expressions against certain well organized charitable societies existing in Charlevoix and Antrim. Now, the man who as a gossiper had taught: "Though I speak with the tongue of men and of angels; though I possess all knowledge, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing. I am become as a sounding brass or tinkling cymbal." There I will pass on the sounding brass overcome my recollections.

How can one who has never entered the temple call know anything of true charity such as Brethren of the Cross bear to one another, bound by the grand principles of the Fatherhood of God, the Brotherhood of Man, they ever stand linked in bonds of Friendship, Love and Truth? Can any one who has never seen the Eye in the Rod know anything of such love and watch-care shown by these brethren to the orphans left under their care? How truly the eloquent Paul says: "Charity suffereth long and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up; [illegible] endureth all things." The charity framed [illegible] on the principles of love, bestowed on those loved ones, surpasses anything given by Church or private charity, and all private means of heedlessness sink and pale beside the charity bestowed by these and like societies.

I turned over the pages of my papers again. I found other pens busy—others arranging the lettings of the villages to the county paper, but somehow I miss the peculiar signature of the gossiper. I paused, wondering if some strange revolution of nature had taken place. Had this new light in the Charlevoix horizon suddenly disappeared; the blazing star sunk into blackness and darkness? Until, turning over other pages, I saw copied from some paper an item about the gossiper being connected with a Democratic newspaper, and he thought he knew how to run a paper! Sad truth!—if as He went up like a rocket, blazed awhile in the Northern sky, the height of his ambition was nearing to him, but in the full blaze of his glory, bursted, and came down like a stick.

I truth, for a gossiper to change his opinions so easily, flounder and fly [illegible] to his Books of all kinds, to put pen to ink against any and bark at him. "He who sword must expect to die by the sword." He who enters the newspaper room unheeding to make himself known in the newspaper world, and who, taking up the pen as his [illegible], and rides his case into the arena, invites contest, must expect many hard [illegible] and knocks, and is always open to attacks.

As a gossiper, he was pleading in a good cause. The true Minister can rejoice that "the weapons of his warfare are not carnal" and to their lasting honor be it said that in their day those wood Dominies of Charlevoix might not the glad [illegible] comes from free newspaper advertising, but heard in quietness, doing good. And while the noble grows green above them, men will praise their virtues, teach the children to admire their character, and in the coming years, when the grand mansions of Mediæval Romance shall be held on the Round Mountain, not shall point to their passing almost and say

"The [illegible] sleeps in peace!"

In that long day of rest.

My record is finished! Folding up the old papers and musing over the strange events and changes noted by our pens, of those days gone by.

Our fields of winter wheat look very brown, but under that brown coat there is a healthy green, that will be roused into life and vigor by plenty of warm spring showers, but should the warm showers fail, and frost succeed frost, the result may be disastrous.

Business is less limp than last week,—stiffening up every day. Our predictions of a few weeks ago is being verified. We met two boys on the streets going to market with pint baskets filled with eggs, and the "hens" was running at large on the streets. Where is the Pound Master.

The Elections.

The election in this Township resulted in a victory for the entire Republican ticket, as follows: Supervisor, Samuel M. Cook; Clerk, Albert E. Mason; Treasurer, E. Carpenter; Commissioner, Andrew J. Mudge; Justice, A. J. Mcleod; Superintendent of Schools, J. S. Dixon; School Inspector, E. H. Green.

A Union ticket was in the field with O. Blair for Supervisor; James E. Wood for Clerk; G. W. Miller for Treasurer; J. M. Clark for Justice; L. D. Bartholomew for Superintendent of Schools, and W. C. Newman for School Inspector.

See, for Supervisor, received twenty majority.

A dispatch from Norwood states that Harris is elected over Wood by ten majority.

"Spring is coming, Spring is coming, don't you hear it in the rills"

April showers have already become fashionable.

R. O. Eley is on the sick list.

Rev. Jacob Greenmyer is translating "Baxter's Call" into the Ojibwa language.

We presume this fine weather will induce the spring poets, very shortly, to crowd their effusions upon the market.

Everybody and their relations are making maple sugar and the children eat wax "until their mouth is all stuck up from mouth to south."

Mr. Wm. Tichner, wife and child, of Iosco Co., contemplate spending the summer here with Mr. Thomas Murry, the father of Mrs. Tichner, for the purpose of recuperating their health.

Charlie Arnold is building a miniature dock, or boat loading rather, on Susan Lake preparatory for spring fishing, and as soon as the ice breaks up, the piscatorial tribes will suffer.

We do not see why parties locating resorts along our lake shore have missed Cogg Quase. It is located half way between Petoskey and Charlevoix with easy access to either place by daily stage or by water. The view at the lake, bay and opposite shore is magnificent. There is no swamp near to mar the scenery, and the famous Horton's Run, one of our best trout streams, only one mile distant. For a cozy, quiet, healthful summer retreat there is not a place along little Traverse Bay that could be fitted up to better advantage.

Messrs Tillotson and Ward, the parties who bought Burt Brown's homestead, are expected here daily with teams, when they will commence clearing and building and soon make that portion of the wilderness blossom as the rose.

South Arm Items.

The Arm is once more free from ice, that is around the head, and the ferry commenced to run April 1st. Joseph Maddock resumes the position of ferryman.

Since our last writing sorrow has visited the home of some of the residents of this town.

Death has taken John M. Burney, a young man well known by most of the people of this town and somewhat known by the young people of Charlevoix. He was a fine young man and was well liked by all who knew him. Buried at Charlevoix. He leaves to mourn his loss one brother and an aged father and mother.

Also the wife of Mr. James Horman departed this life the 29th of March; she was willing to go, and passed peacefully away, telling her companions and children not to mourn for her, but to meet her in the better land.

N. P. Campbell of this place is confined to his bed with liver complaint.

Miss Nettie and Addie Hawks were in town visiting friends. They are going to teach school this summer; Miss Nettie is going to teach the Thompson school in Echo, and Addie the Webster school in Jordan Township.

W. P. Empey is building a scow to be used on the Arm it is 60 feet long.

H. G. Miller starts the 5th of this month for Colorado.

Miss Addie Bowman came in from Holly to attend her mothers funeral and lost her pocket-book at Boyne Falls containing $30. It is thought it was left on a stand in the Hotel. OMEGA.

JOHN ISAMAN is getting ready to move aboard of a plantation near Intermediate Lake.

The next lecture before the Liberal Club, will be on the 19th, by A. E. Mason subject, "The Puritans."

MR. Hathaway, of Hayes, hands us a Brahma hen's egg, which measures 6½ inches in circumference.

It is astonishing with what prominence the Petoskey Record takes items from the SENTINEL without giving credit.

ABOUT twenty feet of the bridge part of A. Fox & Co.'s dock at this place was carried away by the ice, Saturday.

The Boyne City Standard made its appearance upon our table Tuesday. It is a six column folio, and looks well.

CLERICUS writes the Petoskey Democrat that he will sojourn here during a part of this summer. Well, space we shall have to stand it.

LUCKY.—Levi House, of Hayes, yesterday received notice that he had been allowed $1,200 back pension, and $16 per month hereafter.

REV. N. L. OTIS has applied for a letter of dismissal from the Congregational church, and a Montcalm paper says he is to return to his farm. Too bad.

THE Real Estate Agency of E. H. Green has just got out 1000 circulars containing the descriptions of real estate now in his hands for sale. It is also printed on the inside of this issue.

GEO. HOSKINS has sold his farm on Pine Lake, in Eveline, to James Bettes, of Kent county, for $800.

WM COUTTER, of Banks, who carries the mail between Alanson and South Arm, got into Intermediate Lake one day last week, in crossing on the ice, but managed to work ashore.

RICHARD O'NEIL, of Marion, lies at the residence of his son-in-law, A. O. D. McCabe, in this village, very ill with nervous fever. At one time last week his life was despaired of, and his sons in Philadelphia telegraphed for, but we are pleased to learn that he is much better.

THE SENTINEL office is receiving large invoices of new type and material. We now have the most complete job printing establishment north of Traverse City, in this Peninsula, and we propose to keep the lead in both branches of our line of business. PERSONAL.—Henry Bennett father of D. R. Bennett, of Norwood, arrived at that place Friday. Mr. Bennett intends making Charlevoix his permanent home and will remain here this summer. He intends erecting a fine residence upon his property here at no distant day.

COMMON COUNCIL.—At the Council Saturday evening a sidewalk was ordered built on the north side of Main street.

The committee on streets was instructed to establish the grade on Mason street between Bridge and Grant streets, also on north side of Main street.

The committee was also instructed to cause a post to be set on the corner corner of Bridge and Main streets, on the Block lot.

MISHNE.—The tug Com. Nutt has been newly painted, and looks like a new boat again.

—The tug Kittie Garfield, has been sold to Indington parties who are expected here after her as we go to press.

—A number of vessels and steamers have been seen passing down during the week.

—The schooner E. M. Stanton recently collided with the schooner R. B. King, in Lake Michigan, and it was settled by each vessel repairing its own damages—costing the King $400, and the Stanton $200.

—Capt Tom Doherty sells the schooner Lem Ellsworth this season.

—Capt Dan Way has purchased one-half of the schooner W. A. Smith, and will sail her this season.

—The schooner Fleetwing is to receive a coat of paint at Milwaukee.

—The steamer Lady Washington has been purchased for the Little Traverse and Petoskey business. P. S. Brown of this place has been tendered the position of engineer on her.

—The steamer Gazelle got steam up Thursday, and took a whirl around the harbor. She will commence running as soon as the ice leaves, and will run on the same time as last season.

—The steamer Gazelle went to Beaver Harbor Sunday with John Day and a quantity of freight, quite a number of our young people going over. She returned yesterday, coming over in a big northwest sea, and Capt. O'Neill and the passengers speak in high terms of praise of her conduct.

Boyne City Items.

From the Standard.

—Geo. Thompson has landed his boat out of the lake for the purpose of fitting it up for a trip to Lake Superior.

—The Berryville people have been negotiating with the G. R. & I. for a branch road from Elmira to Berryville, and have hopes of success. They offer to put the right of way and do the road if the G. R. & I. Co. will grade it, lay the iron and run it.

—Frank Huntington, of Boyne Falls, shot and killed a very large otter last Monday morning, on the mill dam just above the bridge. Mr. Otter was out on a fishing excursion, and having caught a nice one had just come to the surface when a ball from Frank's rifle laid him high on the water.

—While returning from the new suit at Justice Morgan's, last Wednesday, old man Muller and William Calbert got into an altercation which resulted in a "mix down." The old man was roughly handled, but no one seriously hurt. I tothe evening the old man and three of his sons went to the house of Calbert and tried to get him out, his wife objected and the objection was sustained

Election Jottings.—Here and There.

The "Cubs" here exercised every effort to elect their ticket in the Township on the 5, as one got intoxicated without the liquor it is now known, understood that we will have no more of the Union business in the Township.

—Supervisors were chosen in the several Townships of the county, as follows:

Bear Lake—Mr. Pinchbeck,
Boyne Valley—E. K. Robinson,
Charlevoix—Samuel M. Stone,
Eveline—James Beasley,
Evangeline—A. J. Strand,
Hudson—Mr. Mills,
Hayes—E. B. Burgess,
Marion—John Ward,
Melrose—T. Darrah,
Norwood—Wm. Harris,
Springvale—W. C. Niles,
South Arm—Jerome A. Hunt,
Wilson—Thos. W. Bailey.

In every Township but Norwood and Charlevoix no Supervisors were elected.

—Beedle Rose, of the Democrat was the Democratic candidate for supervisor at Petoskey, and got left by about 60 votes. The entire Republican ticket was elected.

—W. C. Niles was elected Supervisor in Springvale. J. L. Reigle was in the field against him.

—S. B. Thatcher is the new Treasurer in Springvale.

—Banks elected D. H. Stebbins Supervisor.

—Grand Rapids elects Henry S. Smith Mayor, but the Republicans made decisive gains on the basis of tickets.

—Supervisor Robinson had Wm. Mears in the field against him, in Boyne Valley, but came out victorious.

—We made a mistake last week stating that S. M. Stone received 20 majority, in this Township, for Supervisor. The canvas gave him eighteen majority.

—The Democrats carried off the laurels in Little Traverse.

—South Arm has Philip Lanway for Clerk, Dan Isaman for Treasurer, and Samuel Rogers for Highway Commissioner.

—Wilson elects J. W. Littlefield Clerk, A. P. Hayton Treasurer, and G. J. Bowen Highway Commissioner.

—Evangeline elects P. M. Abraham Clerk, E. B. Boynton Treasurer, and Thos. Weir Highway Commissioner.

—Boyne Valley elects O. H. Marsh Clerk, and F. P. Myers Highway Commissioner.

—Marion elected W. D. Thompson Clerk, Geo. Cooper Treasurer, and Wm. E. Clark Highway Commissioner.

—Norwood elected R. R. Bennett Clerk, Chester Denton Treasurer, and George Estel Highway Commissioner.

—Eveline elected E. A. Lewis Clerk, Fowler Steele Treasurer, and Henry Sunland Highway Commissioner.

—Torch Lake, Antrim county, has two Supervisors. P. M. Russell was the old Supervisor, and was a candidate for re-election. Dan Blakely was also in the field, and, receiving four majority, was declared elected. Several votes were subsequently claimed by Russell to be fraudulent, and he qualified as his own successor. Blakely also qualified, and proposes to take the assessment.

—DAN ISAMAN attended J. Upthegrove's auction at Central Lake recently and purchased several hogs. In going home he lost them through the ice in Intermediate Lake.

APPOINTED.—S. McClanathan, late City Treasurer, has recently been appointed Superintendent of the new Reform School Building at Lansing, to which place he will remove the latter part of this month. Mr. M. is both competent and worthy, and we congratulate him on his appointment.—Big Rapids Pioneer Magnet.

PERSONS are missing near Traverse City The Herald says concerning them:

Last week several small flights were observed on the Platte river, west of this town, and soon the birds began to come from every direction. They came in clouds, millions upon millions. It seemed as if by common consent the entire world of pigeons were concentrating at that point. The air was full of them and the sun shut out of sight, and still they came, millions upon millions more. The nesting is now more than fifteen miles in length and six to eight miles wide, and the birds are still coming in countless numbers. Old hunters say it will probably be the most extensive nesting ever known in the state. The nesting grounds are located in Benzie county, twelve to fifteen miles west of this village.

About three hundred pigeon hunters are on the ground, and more coming.

In the Senate on the 30th ult. Mr. Logan, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported adversely on the joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to furnish tents, etc., to the Grand Army of the Republic at Minneapolis, those being no tents available for the purpose. A bill was introduced by Mr. Ingalls to provide for the sale of the lands of the Miami Indians, in Kansas. The House bill for the protection of the Potomac Fisheries and for the preservation of shad and herring in the Potomac River was passed. Amendments to the Indian Appropriation bill were reported by the House passed the Consular and Diplomatic Appropriation bill. Mr. Cameron reported the Army Appropriation bill, and Mr. Blackburn reported the Military Academy bill. The House bill, with the Senate amendments, and both bills were referred to the Committee of the Whole. The contested election case of Hanley vs. Caldwell, from the Second District of Arkansas, was taken up, and Mr. Hanley, the contestant, and Mr. Caldwell, the sitting member, made arguments each in his own behalf.

Bills were passed in the Senate on the 31st ult., providing for an international exhibition in New York in 1883, and to enable the homesteads by allowing locations in more than one place where necessary to make up 160 acres. The Consular and Diplomatic Appropriation bill was taken up, and Mr. Hoar moved an amendment giving compensation to the governor during either a vacation of the holidays without a declaration of pay; this was rejected by Messrs. Carpenter, Logan and others, and was finally rejected. A motion by Mr. Hill to strike out the clause assigning to the appointment and pay of Special Deputy Consuls, was agreed to, and the amendment was rejected—ayes, 34—and the bill was then read a third time and passed. The Senate proceeded in the House, the Pendleton bill was passed, by a vote of 155 yeas to 47 nays, declaring the voting machine, Wm. E. Sleeman, entitled to the seat in the House from the Second Arkansas District.

Majority and minority reports were made in the Senate on the 1st from the Special Committee on Election Frauds. The Immediate Delivery Appropriation bill was then considered. Mr. Edmunds making a lengthy speech in opposition to the measure, and Mr. Eaton following in defense of the bill; the bill was then passed by 31—a party vote. The Senate bill to amend the Treasury act was amended and passed by the House. The Civil Service Reform bill was debated in Committee of the Whole.
